RENT OF MULBERRY LANDS.

THE following correspondence concerning the rent of mulberry lands in Bengal, is published for general information :—

Extracts from the Reports of the Commissioners regarding Agricultural Products of their Divisions.

THE rent for mulberry lands averages Rs. 4-8 per beegah, exclusive of "siwai" collections which are very frequent. The total expenses of cultivation average* Rs. 20 per beegah per annum. The outturn may be put at 32 "bojahs" per beegah. Each "bojah" or bundle of leaf will fetch at least one rupee. A ryot can therefore calculate on obtaining a gross profit of Rs. 32 per beegah or a net profit of Rs. 12. He is speaking of ordinary years. There are seasons when from a mortality of the silkworms, the unfortunate cultivator can find no market for his produce. On the other hand, in very good years the price of the mulberry leaf will rise to Rs. 2 per bojah, which will give the cultivator as high a net profit as Rs. 44 per beegah. It may be supposed then that the production of mulberry leaves is a popular species of agriculture. It is checked, however, by the shortsighted rapacity of the zemindars, who not only decline to advance the ryot the prime outlay which is considerable, but demand an excessive rent for mulberry lands. The following is a too common example of this. A ryot scrapes together enough money to prepare 4 or 5 beegahs for mulberry. He (the ryot) is at once called upon to pay Rs. 5 per beegah rent for land for which he formerly paid perhaps Re. 1. A "khurcha" of say 12 annas in the rupee, is sure to be called for before he has long enjoyed his increased profits. He throws up his land in disgust, and the jungle soon claims its own. Mr. F. H. Skrine has himself seen acres of mulberry field, prepared at great expense, covered with jungle or maintaining less valuable crops. This is not a matter within the province of legislation, but depends solely on the good sense of the zemindar. It is to be hoped that the progress of enlightenment will open his eyes to a sense of his own advantage and counteract the decline in this important cultivation which has already set in.

* It would be nearer the mark to say Rs. 15 per annum, including rent of land.

Extract from a letter from the Officiating Assistant Secretary to the Government of Bengal in the Agricultural Department, to the Secretary to the Board of Revenue, No. 717, dated Calcutta, the 16*th April* 1873.

4. With reference to Mr. Skrine's account of mulberry cultivation, His Honor desires that the Board will favor him with their opinion as to whether an occupancy ryot, who raises a rice field and makes it into a mulberry field, can under the law be made to pay enhanced rent on that account.

No. 288A, dated Fort William, the 31st May 1873.

From—D. J. McNEILE, Esq., Officiating Secretary to the Board of Revenue, Lower Provinces,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Agricultural Department.

Hon'ble V. H. Schalch.

WITH reference to paragraph 4 of Government order No. 717, dated 16th ultimo, I am directed to state that, if the land when leased to the ryot, say as rice land, was fairly priced in comparison with land of a similar quality in the neighbourhood, and the ryot by expending his own capital thereon had rendered it fit for mulberry cultivation, he would not, in the opinion of the Member in charge, be liable to enhancement of rent on the ground that the land had ceased to be used as rice land, and had become available for the production of mulberries. This, however, is a question which can only be determined on its merits in a competent court.

DARJEELING MUNICIPALITY AND DISTRICT ROADS.

RESOLUTION.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Calcutta, the 27th June 1873.

Minutes of a discussion at the Shrubbery, Darjeeling, on the 31*st May* 1873.

THE Lieutenant-Governor having to-day met by invitation the Municipal Commissioners and the planters of the district, and discussed these matters with them, together with the Deputy Commissioner of the district, it was agreed by a large majority, and approved by the Lieutenant-Governor, that the station municipality should be separated from the old Darjeeling hill territory now comprised in the municipality, and that the district beyond the station should be treated as other districts, the roads being managed by a District Road Committee.

Orders will be issued to carry this out. G. C.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor agreed that the location rents within the station should go to the municipality, and the location funds and other rents applicable to local purposes outside of the municipality, to the District Road Fund.

The station, it was understood, would comprise the Jor Bungalow Bazar, the Birch Hill, probably the crest of the Lebong spur, and the roads, &c., appertaining to the ordinary use of the station.

The Gum Pahar Forest, though beyond the station limits, will still be locally managed, and will not be made over to the Forest Department. More particular orders on this subject will be issued hereafter. The Deputy Commissioner will prepare details of management for sanction.

3. The Deputy Commissioner will, in consultation with the residents, lay down the station limits, and submit them for sanction. He will also make a proposal for the municipal police under the new adjustment.

4. The dâk bungalows, &c., on the provincial cart road, including the rest-houses, will be made over to the District Engineer, and will be managed by him as attached to the road, under the Deputy Commissioner's general direction. The Kurseong Punkabaree road will be made over to the District Committee.

The road from Darjeeling to the Teesta will for the present be taken over as a provincial road.

5. The planters seem quite willing that some cess should be put on tea lands for local roads; but after discussion it was deemed better for the present, looking to the difficulties of assessing the ordinary hill and terai holdings, and the imperfectly developed state of the district, that the road cess should not be immediately introduced. It will be better that the planters should be united to contribute towards particular roads by which they will benefit, such roads being made and kept up only on condition of such contributions. For the present, the very limited road fund income will be devoted to the repairs of existing local roads, and to such new roads of a very petty and local character as the planters may contribute to.

6. The balance of the Improvement Fund and such sums as Government may grant will be held, as was formerly the case, as a reserve to be allotted to special works in the Darjeeling district under the special sanction of the Government. Money will especially be given to those roads to which the planters are willing to contribute. Orders on this subject will be issued to the Accountant-General, who will be asked to submit a statement showing exact amount at credit of this special fund.

7. The Executive Engineer will survey and report on the following roads without delay:—

A road to connect Punkabaree with the new cart-road.

A road up the valley of the Teesta from Sivok to the Teesta bridge.

A road connecting the valley of the Balasan with Punkabaree by the Balasan and the trans-Balasan portion of the district with the same point.

Mr. Lloyd has handsomely promised to make the bridge over the Balasan on this road.

The Executive Engineer is also authorized to take immediate measures to open a good bridle road up the Teesta valley. For the present, this will be treated as a provincial work.

8. It was deemed to be very desirable to give up the taxation on carts in Darjeeling, as these only use the provincial roads. The Deputy Commissioner will submit this proposal.

The Lieutenant-Governor is indisposed to put tolls on the Darjeeling roads at present.

9. The subject of medical attendance for the tea gardens was discussed, and the planters showed every willingness to arrange for proper attendance. It is understood that there already is a European doctor supported by the planters for the Terai. There are several medical men in Darjeeling, and as the Civil Surgeon has many duties, the Commander-in-Chief will be asked to permit the military medical officer also to engage in private practice in the neighbouring tea gardens. The great want seems to be a medical man to practise in the hill tea gardens round Kurseong, Hope Town, &c., both to watch over the coolies and to attend on the planters, their wives and families. The Lieutenant-Governor promised that if the planters would combine to get an efficient European doctor he would make an allowance to him, say Rs. 100 per mensem, for superintending the Kurseong dispensary and attending travellers. The Deputy Commissioner will try to arrange this. It may be a question whether Kurseong Municipality will be necessary. Perhaps if a small sum will suffice for conservancy, this had better be avoided, and a small grant might be made by Government.

NOTE.

Barometric Pressure.—The pressures in column 2 of the above table for all stations below 500 feet are reduced from those given in column 3 of the table on the previous page by adding the weight of a column of air of the corresponding temperatures given in column 17. For stations of above 500 feet elevation the reduction is made by Dippe's tables as given in Guyot's "Meteorological and Physical Tables." The temperatures at the sea level are taken from column 3 of the above table.

Temperature.—The temperatures in column 3 are reduced from those in column 17 on the preceding page by adding 1° Fahr. for every 350 feet.

Wind Resultant.—The resultant wind direction and the comparative predominance are calculated from the whole number of wind observations recorded during the month. The relative predominance in the direction of the resultant is given as a percentage of the whole number of observations. The direction is computed in the usual way by Lambert's formula.

Serenity.—This column gives the average proportion of unclouded sky; a cloudless sky being indicated by 10, and one completely overcast by O.

The above being comparable, afford the data for constructing a meteorological chart for the month, which shall show the isobaric and isothermal lines and the resultant wind directions, which last may be represented by arrows of varying length, proportioned to the prevalence of the wind. To these may be added the rainfall from the previous tables.

The mean barometer, as likewise the dry and wet bulb thermometer means, are derived from the twenty-four hourly observations made during the day.

The dew-point is computed with the Greenwich constants. The figures in Column 10 represent the humidity of the air, the complete saturation of which being taken at unity. The receiver of the lower rain gauge is 1½ feet, and that of the anemometer 70 feet 10 inches above the level of the ground. The velocity of wind, as indicated by Robinson's anemometer, is registered from noon to noon.

RULES FOR ADVANCES FOR LAND IMPROVEMENTS UNDER ACT 26, OF 1871.

The 7th July 1873.—The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to make the following rules under Section 18, Act XXVI of 1871, to which the sanction of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council has been obtained :—

ADVANCES of Rs. 50 and upwards under these rules may be made for such sums as the Governor-General in Council may from time to time allot to the local Government, or as may be otherwise at its disposal for the purpose of such advances.

2. Applications for advances under the Act shall be made in writing, and shall be on stamped paper of the value of eight annas. They shall be presented to the Collector, or to any officer authorized by the local Government to receive such applications.

3. Applications shall be presented in open court by the applicant in person, or by some person duly authorized by him in this behalf. Each application shall be signed by the person presenting it, and shall be attested by two witnesses in the presence of the officer to whom it is presented.

4. The application shall state—

1*st*. The name of the applicant, his profession, parentage, tribe or caste, and residence.

2*nd*. The amount of the advance applied for, and whether the applicant proposes to supplement it by any private capital; and if so, to what extent.

3*rd*. The nature and description of the work for which the advance is required.

4*th*. The estimated total cost of the proposed work, and the probable period that will be occupied in its construction.

5*th*. The village and local revenue sub-division in which the land to be benefited is situated; the position, character, and area of such land; and, should it consist in part or wholly of numbered and measured fields or plots, the numbers of the same

6*th*. The advantages, pecuniary or other, expected to result from the work.

7*th*. The manner and extent to which the proposed work will affect (favorably or injuriously) adjoining or other lands.

8*th*. The nature and extent of the applicant's rights or interests in the land to be benefited, or in any other land offered as security for the repayment of the advance; and whether there are any, and if so what, incumbrances on such rights and interests.

9*th*. The amount and number of the instalments by which the advance is to be repaid, principal and interest, and the dates on which these instalments are to be paid.

10*th*. The security tendered for the repayment of the advance.

5. When the amount of the advance exceeds Rs. 500, the application shall be accompanied by a rough plan and estimate of the proposed work; and where it exceeds Rs. 5,000, by an accurate plan, specification, and estimate.

6. If the applicant is unable to furnish such plans, estimates, or specifications, the Collector may cause them to be prepared on behalf of the applicant. Before ordering such preparation, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the applicant to deposit such sum of money as may, in the opinion of the Collector, be sufficient to cover the cost, or he may call on the applicant to give security for the repayment of the same.

7. When a written application is found to have omitted any of the particulars required by Rule IV, the officer receiving it may either return it to the applicant for correction, or record on it the information that is wanting from the applicant's verbal statements. In either case, such addition to the application must be signed and attested as required by Rule III.

8. If the Collector considers that there is primâ facie reason to believe that the application should be granted, he shall cause it to be entered in the register of applications; and if the application be for an advance of Rs. 250 and upwards, shall order a local inquiry to be made. When the application is for less than Rs. 250, a local inquiry need not be made, provided that the Collector has otherwise satisfied himself and recorded in writing the ground for his satisfaction that the grant is desirable, and that the allegations made in column 8, and the securities offered in column 10 of the application, are true and good. If he is of opinion that the application should not be granted, he shall reject it.

9. Local inquiries shall be conducted by the chief revenue officer of the district, or by any of his subordinates of not lower grade than a tehsildar, sub-deputy, or similar official, to whom he may entrust the duty. In all cases in which the proposed advance exceeds Rs. 500, the officer charged with making the local inquiry shall, at least one week prior to the date on which he proposes to hold the same, post up in one or more conspicuous places in the village in which the land to be benefited by the proposed work is situated, a notice setting forth briefly the nature of the advance applied for, and the date on which he proposes to hold an inquiry on the spot as to the correctness of the facts alleged in the application. The person charged with posting such notice shall read it, or cause it to be read, publicly to such of the principal inhabitants of the village as may be present, and shall, on a copy of the notice (which he shall subsequently return to the officer issuing the notice) obtain the signatures of the village headmen, accountant, policemen, or other local officials or respectable inhabitants in acknowledgment of its having been publicly read.

10. No fees shall be charged for the service of this or any other notice where the proposed advance does not exceed Rs. 500. Where the advance exceeds Rs. 5,000, the service of any notice may be charged for at a rate not exceeding that required for the service of a civil process; and where the advance falls between these limits, it shall not exceed half this latter rate.

11. Prior to the local inquiry, the Collector shall cause to be tested, by comparison with his official records, all statements in the application which can be so tested, and cause to be stated in writing the extent to which such records agree with or differ from the application; and any such difference shall be specially investigated at the local inquiry, or specially discussed and disposed of by the Collector if he acts without a local inquiry. Where there may be no records to substantiate the allegations made in column 8 of the application, the Collector must certify accordingly.

12. On the day fixed by the notice, or, should the day first fixed be unavoidably postponed, on that fixed by some subsequent notice, the officer charged with the duty shall proceed to the spot, and, after assembling the parties more immediately concerned, any local officials, and some of the respectable agriculturists of the place, he shall proceed to examine the site of the proposed work; he shall test the accuracy of each of the statements set forth in the application, and shall ascertain and record everything that may be necessary to enable the Collector to arrive at a correct decision.

13. The officer charged with the conduct of the local inquiry may summon, at the cost of the applicant, any person whose evidence may be considered necessary and whose attendance cannot otherwise be secured, and may exercise such powers as revenue courts possess for the purpose of summoning witnesses. A record shall be made by such officer of all objections made to the proposed work or advance, and of all evidence bearing on such objections.

14. When the applicant is a tenant, the additional proceeding required by Sections 7 to 13 of Act XXVI of 1871 must be completed.

15. On the completion of the inquiry, the officer by whom it was made shall forward to the Collector the whole of the papers connected therewith, together with his own opinion and recommendation.

16. On receipt of the papers the Collector may in any case, and when the proposed advance exceeds Rs. 5,000, shall obtain from the proper officer in the Bengal Department of Public Works in such manner as the local Government may direct, an opinion as to the feasibility, probable cost, and merits generally, from a professional point of view, of the proposed work. The Public Works officer required to report need not, unless the Collector requires him to do so, visit the site of the proposed work in cases where the advance is less than Rs. 2,000.

17. If, on a review of the result of the local inquiry and of the professional opinions (if any) that have been obtained, and after such further investigation as he may consider necessary, the Collector is not satisfied that the advance is desirable, and that it can be made under the Act and these rules, he shall reject the application, recording his reasons for the same.

18. If the Collector is satisfied that the advance may properly be made, he shall grant a certificate for the advance applied for, or for such smaller sum as he may consider sufficient for the purpose specified in the application, or shall report the case for the orders of higher authority, in accordance with the provisions of the next following rule.

19. If sufficient sums have been placed at the disposal of the Collector for the purpose, he may, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the division, grant a certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 500. The Commissioner of the division may, subject to the same condition, grant such certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 5,000. The Board of Revenue may, subject to the same condition, grant such certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 5,000. Certificates for advances exceeding Rs. 5,000, but not exceeding Rs. 10,000, will require the sanction of the local Government. If the proposed advance exceed Rs. 10,000, the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council will be required.

20. When a certificate is granted, it shall be endorsed by the applicant to the effect that he has understood and agreed to all terms, and it shall be signed by him before, and be attested by, two witnesses. If any property, other than property of the applicant, is pledged or mortgaged as security for repayment of the advance, the certificate shall be similarly endorsed, signed, and attested by the sureties and witnesses; and if the applicant is a tenant without transferable interest in the land to be benefited, the certificate shall be signed by his landlord and attested by two witnesses other than the landlord.

In all cases in which land or property other than the land to be benefited is hypothecated as security for the repayment of the advance, the certificate must bear the stamp required for mortgages under the Stamp Act for the time being in force, and must in all cases in which, if the transaction were a private one, registration would be requisite, be registered under the registration law at the time in force.

21. The certificate shall be retained in the office of the Collector; one copy shall be given to the applicant; and when advances are made payable at any tehsil or other subordinate district treasury, a copy of such certificate shall be sent to such treasury. All certificates issued in any financial year shall bear a serial number.

22. No advance shall be made for an improvement which is likely, so far as can be ascertained, to injure the property of any parties who have not consented to its execution.

23. No project shall be divided. After an advance has been sanctioned and the whole thereof expended, a second advance for the same work shall not be made without the sanction of the local Government.

24. No advance shall be made unless the value of the security accepted exceeds by at least one-fourth the amount of the advance.

25. Subject to the orders of the local Government, the Collector shall make provision for the proper inspection of works in course of construction for which advances have been made, and for ascertaining and securing that such advances are duly applied to the purpose for which they were made.

26. The works, and any accounts kept thereat, shall be at all times open to the inspection of the Collector or other person authorized by him in that behalf.

27. In the case of advances exceeding Rs. 5,000 accounts shall be kept by the recipient of the advance in any form that the Collector may, with the sanction of superior authority, from time to time prescribe.

28. If at any time the Collector is satisfied that any person who has received an advance has failed to perform any of the conditions under which it was made, the Collector may, after recording in writing the grounds for the decision he has arrived at, and subject to the control of the Board of Revenue, proceed to recover from such person, or from any security for such person under the provisions of the Act, any sums which remain due, together with any interests payable thereon.

29. If it is shown that the borrower has wilfully, and without reasonable cause, omitted to apply the money to the purpose for which it was borrowed, any sums which he so failed to apply may be levied with interest with a penalty of 50 per cent.

30. All works for which advances are made in a lump sum shall be inspected and reported on within one month of the date on which their completion was directed in the certificate. All works for which advances are made by instalments shall be inspected and reported on before each instalment subsequent to the first is paid, and such inspection shall take place at latest within one month of the date when such instalment is payable.

31. Except with the special sanction of the local Government, no advance of any sum not exceeding Rs. 500 shall be made unless it be repayable with interest within seven years from the date fixed for the completion of the work; and no advance exceeding Rs. 500 shall be made without such sanction unless it be so repayable within twelve years. If in any case the proposed period of repayment exceeds twenty years, the sanction of the Government of India to the proposed advance must be obtained.

32. Applications for advances may be made to, and received by, the officer in charge of the sub-division in which the land on which the money is to be expended lies. In dealing with such applications, the sub-divisional officer shall be guided generally by the instructions contained in Rules I to XVI.

33. On the completion of his inquiry the sub-divisional officer shall report the case to the Collector in the following tabular form :—

(1). Name of applicant, and rights held by him. (2) Residence. (3) Nature and locality of work for which advance has been applied for. (4) Amount of advance applied for. (5) Period within which work is to be completed. (6) Instalments in which advance with interest is to be repaid. (7) Security tendered for repayment. (8) Remarks showing the results of any local inquiry or any other grounds on which the sub-divisional officer may have founded his opinion.

34. If the advance proposed is less than Rs. 250, the Collector will pass final orders ; if more than Rs. 250, he will forward a copy of the sub-divisional officer's report with his own opinion to the Commissioner, who will then proceed to pass orders under Rule XIX.

35. The interest charged on advances shall for the present be one anna per annum on the rupee, or 6¼ per cent. per annum.

36. All the above rules are applicable, mutatis mutandis, to applications submitted by a number of persons collectively with a view to effecting works of general utility. In such cases the persons signing the application must make themselves individually as well as collectively responsible for the repayment of the advance.

37. All orders passed by a Commissioner, or by the Board of Revenue, sanctioning the payment of advances under the Act, must at once be communicated by them to the Accountant-General to enable him to admit the payments when made.

38. The number and date of such order should also be clearly cited by the Collector in the entry of the payment in the treasury returns, and the payee's receipt should be forwarded to Accountant-General as a voucher in support of the charge.

39. A separate record will be maintained in the Accountant-General's office of all advances made under the Act, and in order that interest at 5 per cent. may be added when due to the original amount of each advance, the Collector should, on the completion of every half-year after the date of the original advance, forward to the Accountant-General a special advice of the interest then falling due on the amount.

40. The necessary adjustment will then be made in the Accountant-General's office, and the Collector advised of the increased amount recorded in the Accountant-General's books against the payee of the advance.

The following notification of the Government of India in the Home Department is republished for general information :—

No. 2132.—Simla, the 20th June 1873.—Notification.—Public.—Her Majesty's Government desire that in the course of next year natives of India shall be examined in London by the Committee of the House of Commons upon East Indian finance.

2. His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General will receive the names of natives of India who, from knowledge and experience, are likely to give valuable evidence upon the revenue and expenditure (local or imperial) of Her Majesty's Indian territories, and are willing to visit England for that purpose.

3. The reasonable expenses of the visit to England of a limited number of such witnesses will be paid by the Imperial Government, and care will be taken, as far as practicable, to provide for their comfort during their absence from India.

4. Natives of India who are willing to proceed to England for the purpose of being examined are requested to send their names to the Secretary to the Government of the province in which they reside, and to state the subjects upon which they desire to be examined.

6. No assurance can be given that the offer of any native of India to proceed to England as a witness will be accepted, as the selection of the witnesses from a list to be forwarded by the Viceroy will be made in England by the Committee of the House of Commons. Therefore no witness should make arrangements to visit England until he has been informed that his offer is accepted.

Circular No. 15, dated Darjeeling, the 18th June 1873.

From—The Offg. Secretary to the Govt. of Bengal, Revenue Department.

To—The Collectors and the Vice-Chairmen of District Committees in Districts to which the District Road Cess Act has been extended.

You will see by the notification published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 18th June, that under Section 2 of the District Road Cess Act the cesses have been declared leviable in certain districts for the ensuing cess year, i.e., from 1st October next. The cesses may also be hereafter declared similarly leviable from the same date in a few other districts, when further information regarding the progress of the valuations shall have been received through the Board of Revenue.

2. You will have seen that the months have been notified for the statutory meetings of the Committee at which the estimate of income and expenditure is to be prepared under Section 70 of the Act. The Lieutenant-Governor thinks that as this notification has only now been issued, it will not be advisable to hold the statutory meeting until the latter part of the months named, except in Orissa, where, as the revenue instalments fall due earlier, the local officers will exercise their discretion as to the day for calling the meeting under Section 70.

By postponing the statutory meeting till the latter part of the month named, more time will be gained for carefully preparing the statements required under Section 69; and the Lieutenant-Governor trusts that no effort will be spared to get these statements ready punctually and in good shape. Collectors will bear in mind that they have to prepare the statement under separate heads; that is to say, the estimated yield from the cess on lands and from the cess on houses must be separately shown in the statement.

3. It will be observed that when the District Committee have prepared an estimate at the statutory meeting under Section 70, their estimate must be submitted to the Commissioner, and will have to be again considered by the Committee, after its return from the Commissioner, at another meeting held for striking a rate under Section 74. The Lieutenant-Governor is confident that Commissioners will take care that delay does not occur in their considering and returning the estimates, in order that the final striking of the rate under Section 74 may be carried so as to admit of the rate being proclaimed in good time and of timely service of notices.

4. As the Committees will not get their money fully until after a part of the cess year is passed, the Lieutenant-Governor will do what he can to make assignments to the District Committees from provincial revenues; but they must not expect very much, as our funds are limited, all the local ferries and tolls income having been already made over to the districts, and the poor and non-cess districts having to be provided for. The Lieutenant-Governor is not able to state quite exactly the amounts he will grant until he receives the Accountant-General's report of the provincial balance in hand at the beginning of the present official year; but the assignments will be made before the statutory meetings, so as to enable Committees to take the grants into account as required by Section 72.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that at first, except in one or two particular districts, where the necessities of roads are very great, the rate imposed should be as moderate as possible. Government will certainly not bring any influence to bear to induce the Committees to impose a higher rate than is necessary to give the funds which can really be usefully and economically expended on district communications of importance and advantage to the people at large, with our present machinery and means of superintendence. The views of the Government upon this point should be explained to the District Committees.

6. In framing their estimates the District Committees must bear in mind that the Lieutenant-Governor will certainly arrange to have Branch Committees under Section 76, and he will assign the Branch Committees funds under Section 78. He will do this more especially with the object that a fair proportion of the funds may be given to purely local and village roads or waterways, and that the proceeds of the road cess may not be all spent on a few main roads leading to the head-quarters of the district. The Lieutenant-Governor considers that in all estimates (under Section 70) a fair proportion of the funds should be set aside for village roads and waterways which cannot be specified in exact detail; and that such roads, &c., as well as the purely local roads (to be specified in the statement under Section 66) should be managed by the Branch Committees of outlying parts of the district with the funds assigned for expenditure by them.

7. As a rule, the Lieutenant-Governor would not at present give the Branch Committees independent powers under Sections 79 and 80, but would leave them subordinate to the District Committees, as provided by Section 77. The Lieutenant-Governor requests that District Officers will, through the Commissioner of the Division, propose Branch Committees of respected residents for convenient sub-divisions of the district, defining each such sub-division. There should certainly, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks, be a Branch Committee at each magisterial sub-division, and also at as many more road sub-divisions as may be found convenient. It will be absolutely indispensable to have respectable ryots, as well as people of other classes, on such Branch Committees.

8. It should be remembered when the Committees come to strike their rate that the expenses of the valuation and assessment, and of notices, &c., must be included in the amount to be rated for, as provided by Sections 90 and 96 of the Act.

9. When the rates shall have been determined, the Collector will proclaim them under Section 75, publishing the proclamation in the manner prescribed by Section 5. A further explanatory proclamation by this Government will be issued to obviate the risk of any misapprehension; and the Board of Revenue is preparing in pamphlet form an abstract of the provisions of the Act, which will be widely circulated.

10. When the rates have been determined and proclaimed, it will be very desirable that notices of demand under Section 22 should be served on the zemindars or their agents, when they come to the district office on business, to pay revenue, &c. In cases where this cannot be done, service may be made by registered letter (Section 95) or otherwise, as can be managed. The Lieutenant-Governor trusts that Collectors will do their best to effect this service of notices without unnecessary expense. As has before been pointed out, it will not be necessary for notice-servers to go about in boats at a great cost during the rainy season with notices that cannot be otherwise served, seeing that, except in Orissa, instalments of the road cess are not due from zemindars until some time after the end of the rains, that is, until the 12th January; and notices can, therefore, continue to be served after the 1st October. Proclamation under Section 75 must, however, be made some time before that date, in order that tenure-holders and ryots may be duly warned.

RESOLUTION.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

JUDICIAL.

Calcutta, the 8th July 1873.

1. THE Lieutenant-Governor directs that the accompanying extract from a letter lately written by a public officer, with regard to the recent order prescribing office hours, be circulated with the following remarks.

2. The letter is that of an officer who used (he says) to go to office at 12-30 P.M. It quite confirms the Lieutenant-Governor's view that the practice has too often been to give only half the day to court and office work, and that the worst half. His Honor considers that the term breakfast is wholly misapplied to the meal between 11 A.M. and noon alluded to. It is not breakfast, but the mid-day meal, which divides the first and the second part of the active day. The writer is a civil servant of considerable standing; and if he has come to his time of life, as he says, in the exercise of a habit which prevents his going to office before 12-30 P.M. without constitutional disturbance, it is evident that he must have lived in times and under circumstances which admitted of such a custom being very habitual.

3. With reference to such a disclosure, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks it necessary to repeat that officers, European and Native, whose habits are those of the officer alluded to, must either wholly change their habits in regard to the mid-day meal, or adopt the plan which His Honor has suggested of dividing the working day into two parts, in accordance, as he believes, with the ordinary manners of the country.

4. Many statements in the public prints and elsewhere, as also disclosures in cases brought to light by the High Court, tend to show that the order which has been passed about office hours was very much wanted; and His Honor trusts that it is strictly attended to, and that supervising officers see that it is so.

Extract from letter referred to in para. 1 of the Resolution.

PARA. 1.—* * * * I have now introduced the change in accordance with the imperative order of the Lieutenant-Governor, which appears to allow no discretion to any magisterial officer, whatever his years or experience, if he be not fortunate enough to be a district Magistrate-Collector; but I find the native public dissatisfied with the alteration, while it causes me bodily discomfort owing to habits which cannot be suddenly broken through at my time of life without a certain amount of constitutional disturbance. The objection taken to the change by the native public, as represented by the mooktears, is that the usual breakfast hour of their clients is between 11 A.M. and noon, and that many of them having long distances to come are unable to appear before noon or 1 P.M. * * * *

PROCLAMATION.

The 4th July 1873.—Whereas in the district of Pubna, owing to attempts of zemindars to enhance rents and combinations of ryots to resist the same, large bodies of men have assembled at several places in a riotous and tumultuous manner, and serious breaches of the peace have occurred, THIS is very gravely to warn all concerned that while on the one hand the Government will protect the people from all force and extortion, and the zemindars must assert any claims they may have by legal means only, on the other hand the Government will firmly repress all violent and illegal action on the part of the ryots, and will strictly bring to justice all who offend against the law, to whatever class they belong.

The ryots and others who have assembled are hereby required to disperse, and to prefer peaceably and quietly any grievances they may have. If they so come forward, they will be patiently listened to; but the officers of Government cannot listen to rioters; on the contrary, they will take severe measures against them.

It is asserted by the people who have combined to resist the demands of the zemindars that they are to be the ryots of Her Majesty the Queen, and of Her only. These people, and all who listen to them, are warned that the Government cannot and will not interfere with the rights of property as secured by law; that they must pay what is legally due from them to those to whom it is legally due. It is perfectly lawful to unite in a peaceable manner to resist any excessive demands of the zemindars, but it is not lawful to unite to use violence and intimidation.

NOTIFICATION.

The following Proclamation of the Government of India in the Foreign Department is republished for general information:—

No. 1245*P.*—Simla, the 11*th June* 1873.—Political.—Proclamation.—Whereas the Governor-General of Netherlands, India, has intimated to the Governor-General of India in Council that the Government of Netherlands, India, has declared war upon the Sultan of Acheen in the Island of Sumatra:

And whereas the British Government is at peace with both the Government of Netherlands, India, and the Sultan of Acheen:

The Governor-General of India in Council strictly charges and commands all British subjects under the authority of the Governor-General in Council to observe a strict neutrality in, and during the aforesaid war, and to abstain from violating and contravening either the laws of British India or the law of nations in relation thereto.

The Governor-General of India in Council further notifies to all persons concerned that if any such persons shall do any acts in derogation of their duty as subjects of a neutral sovereign in a war between other sovereigns, or in violation or contravention of the law of nations in that behalf, as more especially by breaking or endeavouring to break any blockade lawfully and actually established by or on behalf of either of the said sovereigns (viz., the Government of Netherlands, India, and the Sultan of Acheen), by carrying officers, soldiers, despatches, arms, ammunition, military stores, or materials, or any article or articles considered and deemed to be contraband of war according to the law or modern usages of nations for the use or service of either of the said sovereigns, all persons so offending, together with their ships and goods, will rightfully incur and be justly liable to hostile capture and to the penalties denounced by the law of nations in that behalf.

Circular Order No. 8.

From—W. M. SOUTTAR, ESQ., Officiating Registrar of the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal,

To—All Civil Courts in the Lower Provinces.

Dated Calcutta, the 30th April 1873.

THE Court are pleased to publish and commend, to the earnest consideration of Judicial Officers, the following Circular issued by the Chief Court of the Punjab.

HIGH COURT, &c.,
CIVIL SIDE.
Present:
The Hon'ble SIR R. COUCH, Kt., Chief Justice.
The Hon'ble LOUIS S. JACKSON, } Judges of the Court.
" " F. A. GLOVER, }
" " W. AINSLIE, }

2. Many cases have come to the knowledge of the Court in which interest has been decreed at the most oppressive rates without regard to the circumstances under which the loan was contracted.

3. The Courts in this way become instruments for the registering of usurious transactions, and the money-lender adds to exorbitant terms the security of a decree.

4. The object of the Court in drawing attention to this subject is not to assist debtors in evading the consequences of engagements voluntarily and intelligently contracted, but to give the protection of the courts of justice to persons who, from distress, ignorance, or habits of submission, have not been truly free agents in the contracts set up.

5. Particular attention is directed to the last paragraph of the Punjab Circular.

Book Circular No. III-153, dated Lahore, the 18th January 1873.

From—E. H. HARRISON, ESQ., Officiating Registrar, Chief Court, Punjab,

To—All Commissioners and Deputy Commissioners in the Punjab.

1. THE Chief Court has reason to believe that in many of the courts of this province, especially in those of the agricultural districts, decrees are frequently made by which interest upon debts incurred by peasant proprietors and cultivators is declared payable at exorbitant rates.

CHIEF COURT OF THE PUNJAB.
Present:
C. BOULNOIS, ESQ., } Judges.
C. R. LINDSAY, ESQ., }
J. S. CAMPBELL, ESQ., }

2. Cases in which the village money-lender sues his customer involve ordinarily small amounts, below Rs. 500, and therefore can scarcely ever come before the Chief Court in consequence of the provisions of Act XXIII of 1861, Section 27, which declares that no special appeal shall lie in cases of the nature cognizable in Small Cause Courts.

3. The Chief Court has in fact had no opportunity of explaining in a judicial decision the general principles which govern this question; while in many parts of the country the subordinate courts, and especially the Small Cause Courts, have (as it appears from a recent inspection of records) decreed interest in a manner far too indiscriminate.

4. The Chief Court regards this with great regret, and considers that the law, as it really stands, requires some explanation for the guidance of judicial officers, in order that it may not be misunderstood to the detriment of debtors of the class above referred to.

5. The second section of Act XXVIII of 1855 (an Act for the repeal of the usury laws) declares that "in any suit in which interest is recoverable, the amount shall be adjudged or decreed by the court at the rate (if any) agreed upon by the parties;" and all due effect must doubtless be given to these words, taken in their plain and ordinary meaning, without any artificial construction being placed upon them for any purpose whatever.

6. The above legislative enactment was formerly enforced in many cases that arose in this province, subject to the qualification declared in paragraph 4, Section 19 of the Principles of Law, commonly called the Punjab Civil Code, which contained the following:—"The courts are not bound by any restrictions with regard to usury. Debtors and creditors are allowed to arrange the terms and conditions of interest in whatever manner they may deem most conducive to their mutual benefit; the courts will decree whatever rate may have been agreed upon bonâ fide between the parties. If no special rate shall have been agreed upon, then the court will fix what may appear an equitable amount with reference to the custom of the locality, the usage of trade, or the merits of the transaction. It will be remembered that the rates of interest vary for different classes and in different places."

"The debtor need not be compelled by the court to pay the entire amount of interest, if there be reason to believe that the bond was executed through fear or ignorance."

7. The compilation from which these words are taken has no force of law in itself, but the general law of contract is, equally with those words, against our courts considering themselves absolved from the responsibility of regarding the circumstances under which an engagement to pay exorbitant interest has been entered into; and omission by the courts to give due weight to such circumstances is likely to give rise to serious injustice, and to such evils as are discussed in the minute on interest by Mr. Melvill, which has been recently circulated among judicial officers of the province.

8. The Indian Contract Act of 1872, in Chapter II, gives the principles on which the law annexes an enforceable obligation to stated engagements requiring free consent; and in Sections 16 and 17 a general, and at the same time an equitable, rule is indicated where a person who holds a real or apparent authority over another, or in whom confidence is reposed by that other, obtains an advantage which but for such confidence or authority he would not have obtained. The law also points out the result where concealment of facts may have taken place, or acts fitted to deceive, or acts or omissions may have occurred in violation of what is regarded as the legal duty of the person obtaining a promise from another to explain facts "likely to affect the willingness" of that other to enter into a contract.

9. Reference may also be made to Section 6 of Act IV of 1872 (the Punjab Laws' Act), where it is declared that justice, equity, and good conscience, shall be the rule of decision, and it may be safely affirmed that the equity governing this matter is to give their true and full effect to the words of the Indian Contract Act.

10. The repeal of the usury laws by Act XXVIII of 1855, and the abolition of any force of law which the paragraph above quoted from the so-called Punjab Civil Code may have had before the passing of Act IV of 1872, have left untouched the doctrines of equity, both as to the protection of debtors who for any real reason are not fully competent to protect themselves, and as to the power of courts to relieve against what are called unconscionable bargains with such persons.

11. No doubt any one who contracts with another is entitled to assume, primâ facie, that the latter is competent to look after his own interests; but no strict rule defines, or can define, where comparative incapacity ceases, and where extreme ignorance and helplessness call for the protection of the equitable rules prescribed by law.

12. No doubt also, as a general rule, the debtor is bound to go or send to his creditor and pay him. In many contracts, however, for the loan of grain for a particular sowing (which indeed may reasonably be for the return of grain after the harvest, at a very high rate of interest), where the cultivator fails to make payment after the harvest, a distinction may clearly be taken. Neither party originally contemplates a rate of interest intended only for a particular period, running on from the time of the transaction indefinitely, and in such cases the real intention of the parties with due regard to the position of the cultivator must be considered.

13. The existence of undue influence may in many cases be inferred (according to the general rules of equity jurisprudence) from the extreme imprudence of the act done, when coupled with other circumstances; and in this country the relations existing between the professional money-lender and indebted peasant are such, that this rule should be borne in mind by our courts.

14. In no case should exorbitant interest be decreed in favor of a money-lender suing a peasant proprietor or cultivator, or any person similarly situated (where the right to recover it is disputed), unless the court trying the case is satisfied that the stated engagement on which the plaintiff seeks to recover has been entered into by the debtor with knowledge of all the circumstances attending his position, and his liability in regard to his creditor, and of his entire free will, without inequitable pressure of any kind. The courts may consider whether or not the contract was a prudent one,—not with a view to setting it aside if imprudent, for that of course is entirely beside the court's duty, but with a view to determining whether extreme imprudence, from which, along with other circumstances, the existence of undue influence might be inferred, has or has not been manifested. Reference on this point may be made to the custom of the locality, the usage of parties similarly situated, and the rates for loans prevailing, so that the character of the transaction may be tested.

The debtor need not be compelled by the court to pay the entire amount of interest, whether agreed upon in cash or in grain, if there be reason to believe that the engagements whether evidenced by bond, or by signing, or marking the money-lender's book, or completed in any other mode, has been entered into through fear or ignorance; and if in any case the amount of interest shall appear to have been agreed upon under circumstances which would render the awarding it contrary to the principles above referred to, the court will only decree as much interest as may appear just under the circumstances.

15. In conclusion, the Chief Court repeats the injunction conveyed in Book Circular XXIX of 1867, that in awarding interest subsequent to the date of the decree, the courts should not allow it to approach in amount that which may be obtainable by persons who have not the security of a decree, and that no inducement should be afforded to decree holders to allow their decrees to remain unexecuted. Further, the courts are reminded that where a large portion of the amount decreed consists of interest, it is not compulsory on them to decree interest upon the amount decreed, inasmuch as the courts may fitly exercise the discretion allowed them by Act XXIII of 1861, Section 10, and not award any such interest at all.

HIGH COURT, the 7th July 1873.

Circular Orders by the High Court of Judicature at Fort William in Bengal.

No. 13.

To—DISTRICT JUDGES AND JUDICIAL COMMISSIONERS.

HIGH COURT, &c.,
CIVIL SIDE.
Present:
The Hon'ble SIR R. COUCH, Kt., Chief Justice.
" LOUIS S. JACKSON,
" F. A. B. GLOVER,
" W. AINSLIE,
Judges of the Court.

It has recently come to the knowledge of the Court that a Subordinate Judge, now deads had been accustomed to show as decided, in his monthly and quarterly returns, cases in which no judgment had been delivered, although a decision had been announced and noted in the diary; the judgments in such cases being afterward, prepared and signed as leisure permitted.

2. The Court find it necessary to point out that such a practice is reprehensible, as being not merely opposed to law, but productive of mischief in various ways, and also amounting to a misrepresentation of facts.

3. It is the duty of District Judges to take care that no such practice prevails in the courts under their control; and the means of prevention are simple. The Judge, whenever he inspects an inferior court, should examine the diary, and, calling for some of the cases last decided, should satisfy himself that the judgments have been given in correspondence with the diary entries.

4. But the Court believe that where the District Judges' control is perfectly maintained, such irregularities will not occur at all, and that such mechanical check will need only formal observance.

By order of the High Court,

W. M. SOUTTAR,
Registrar.

THE following report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the levy of a lighting-rate in Howrah, with the amended Bill, is by order of the president published for general information :—

We, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, to which the Bill to provide for the levy of a lighting-rate in Howrah was referred, have the honor to report that we have considered the Bill.

We have reconstructed the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th sections of the Bill, and we have made some verbal alterations in other sections.

We have made the imposition of a lighting-rate dependent on the previous notification by the Lieutenant-Governor, that proper provision has been made for sufficient lighting with gas the portion of the town on which the rate is to be assessed.

We have made it the duty of the Municipal Commissioners previously to define at a meeting the portion of the town to be lighted. We have made it incumbent on the Municipal Commissioners to light the lamps immediately upon the imposition of a rate and ; while empowering them to levy the rate by quarterly instalments in advance, we have provided that no rate shall be levied for any period prior to the first lighting of the lamps.

We have rendered the owner, in cases where the rate may be recovered from him, liable for the whole quarter, although his house, &c., may have been unoccupied during a portion of it, if he has failed to give notice that his house, &c., has ceased to be occupied.

We have not given jurisdiction to the Small Cause Court to determine questions of compensation ; and we have not provided that the Act shall come into force on the 1st April 1873.

AMENDED BILL.

A Bill to provide for the levy of a lighting-rate in Howrah.

WHEREAS it is desirable to make further provision for lighting the town of Howrah with gas, by imposing a rate on those persons who benefit thereby,

It is hereby enacted as follows :—

Limits of the Town of Howrah.

1. The expression "the town of Howrah" in this Act shall be taken to mean the area of the Howrah Municipality, as defined by the Lieutenant-Governor under the provisions of section 3 of the District Municipal Improvement Act, being Bengal Act III of 1864.

Lighting-rate not exceeding 2 per cent. may be imposed on houses, buildings, and lands.

2. It shall be lawful for the Municipal Commissioners, after notification by the Lieutenant-Governor in the Calcutta Gazette, that proper provision has been made according to a scheme submitted to him by the Municipal Commissioners for the sufficient lighting with gas any portion of the Town of Howrah previously defined by the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting, to impose an annual rate not exceeding 2 per centum of their annual value upon all houses, buildings, and lands situated within such portion of the said town for the purpose of defraying the expense of such lighting.

Payable by occupiers quarterly in advance.

Such rate shall be paid by the occupiers of such houses, buildings, and lands by quarterly instalments in advance; but no rate shall be leviable until the lamps in such portion of the said town have been lighted with gas, nor shall any rate be leviable for any portion of a quarter antecedent to such lighting.

Arable land, &c., exempted from rate.

Arable lands and lands used for pasturage, and buildings used exclusively as places of public worship, or applied solely to charitable purposes, shall not be liable to the rate.

After rate imposed, lamps must be lighted.

3. So soon as a rate has been imposed under the last preceding section, the Municipal Commissioners shall immediately thereupon cause such portion of the said town to be lighted with gas, according to the said scheme submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Annual valuation how to be made.

4. The annual value of the said houses, buildings, and lands shall be the value fixed by the Municipal Commissioners year by year under the provisions of Section 27 of the District Municipal Improvement Act. And all the provisions of the said Act and of Bengal Act VII of 1867, relating to the assessment and collection of the rate on houses, buildings, and lands shall, except so far as they are modified by the provisions of this Act, be applicable to the assessment and collection of the lighting-rate.

Assessment and collection.

Power to assess owners in certain cases.

5. If any house, building, or land shall be occupied by more than one tenant holding in severalty, or shall be of less annual value than one hundred rupees, it shall be lawful for the Municipal Commissioners to recover the rate from the owner of such house, building, or land.

Owner to recover from the occupier rates paid by owner.

6. Whenever any rate shall be recovered from any owner of any house, building, or land under the provisions of the last preceding section, it shall be lawful for such owner, if there shall be but one occupying tenant of such house, building, or land to recover from such tenant the entire amount of the rate which shall have been so paid by such owner; and if there shall be more than one occupying tenant of such house, building, or land, then to recover from each of such tenants such sum as shall bear to the entire amount of rate which may have been so recovered from such owner the same proportion as the value of the portion of such house, building, or land in the occupation of such tenant bears to the entire value of such house, building, or land, subject however to the provisions of Section 8 of this Act.

Owner may recover rate so paid as rent.

7. Every owner, who under the provisions of the last preceding section may be entitled to recover any sum from any occupying tenant of any house, building, or land, or of any portion thereof, shall have for the recovery of such sum all such and the same remedies, powers, rights, and authorities as if such sum were rent payable to such owner by such tenant in respect of so much of such house, building, or land as may be in the occupation of such tenant.

Occupier liable to the rate for time of occupation only.

8. Every occupier shall be liable to the lighting-rate for the time of his occupation. When any person shall have been an occupier for a part only of any quarter, he shall be liable only for so much of the rate for that quarter as may be proportionate to the number of days during which he shall have been an occupier. If he shall have paid the rate in advance, the amount paid in excess of the sum due under this section shall be refunded.

Excess paid in advance to be refunded.

No rate to be charged during vacancy.

No such rate shall be chargeable to any person on account of any unoccupied house, building, or land for the time during which it may remain unoccupied.

Notice of cessation of occupancy to be given within seven days.

Provided always that when any person ceases to be the occupier of any house, building, or land upon which the rate has been assessed, he shall give the Municipal Commissioners notice thereof within seven days from the date of the cessation of his occupancy. If the occupier fail to give such notice within such period, he shall be liable to the rate assessed on such house, building, or land for the whole quarter, although he may have occupied for a part only of such quarter; and in cases to which the provisions of Section 5 of this Act apply, the rate assessed on such house, building, or land for the whole quarter shall be recoverable from the owner, if such owner has failed to give notice that such house, building, or land is unoccupied, within seven days from the date on which it ceased to be occupied.

Unknown owner or occupier how to be designated.

Situation of gas-pipe or other gas-work to be altered at the expense of the commissioners.

10. If the Municipal Commissioners deem it necessary, for the purposes of this Act, to raise, sink, or otherwise alter the situation of any gas-pipe, or other gas-work, laid in any portion of the said town, they may from time to time, by notice in writing, require the person to whom any such pipe or work belongs, or under whose control it may be, to cause forthwith, or as soon as conveniently may be, any such pipe or work to be raised, sunk, or otherwise altered in position, in such manner as the Commissioners may direct; provided that such alteration be not such as permanently to injure such pipe or work, or to prevent the gas from flowing as freely and conveniently as before; and the expenses attending such raising, sinking, or altering, and full compensation for the damage done thereby, shall be paid by the Commissioners out of the municipal fund as well to the person to whom such pipe or work belongs as to all other persons.

If owner, &c., neglect to make alterations, the commissioners may cause the same to be made.

11. If the person to whom any such pipe or work belongs, or under whose control it may be, do not proceed forthwith, or as soon as conveniently may be, after the receipt of such notice, to cause the same to be raised, sunk, or altered in such manner as the Municipal Commissioners require, the Commissioners may themselves cause such pipe or work to be raised, sunk, or altered as they may think fit, provided that such works be not permanently injured thereby, or the gas prevented from flowing as freely and conveniently as before.

Construction.

12. This Act shall be construed with, and as part of, the District Municipal Improvement Act.

THE following Bill was read in the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for making Laws and Regulations on the 8th March 1873, and was referred to a Select Committee, who are to report thereon within a fortnight:—

A Bill to amend Act XI of 1849, Act XXI of 1856, and Act XXIII of 1860.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend Act XI of 1849 (for securing the abkari revenue of Calcutta), Act XXI of 1856 (to consolidate and amend the law relating to the abkari revenue in the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal), and Act XXIII of 1860 (to amend Act XXI of 1856);

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Board may prescribe rules to regulate the supply of fermented liquors to licensed vendors; and the cultivation, preparation, storing, possession, purchase, and transport of intoxicating drugs.

"33. The Board of Revenue may, with the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, from time to time prescribe rules consistent with this Act, for regulating the mode, and the quantities, in which taree or puchwye or other fermented liquor shall be sold or supplied to licensed vendors of the same; for restricting and supervising the cultivation of plants producing intoxicating drugs other than opium, and the preparation of the said drugs; and for granting licenses or passes to persons cultivating, preparing, storing, possessing, purchasing, or transporting the said drugs.

Effect of rules.

All such rules shall be published in the Calcutta Gazette, and shall have effect as if they were contained in this Act.

Penalty.

Every person who wilfully or negligently refuses or neglects to obey, or contravenes any rule made by the Board of Revenue under the provisions of this section, shall be punished with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees."

2. For section fifty of the said Act XXI of 1856 the following section shall be substituted:—

Provisions of the two last preceding sections not to apply to sale or possession of taree used in making sugar; nor to the sale or possession of intoxicating drugs by persons licensed to cultivate, prepare, transport, store, or possess them.

"50. The provisions of the two last preceding sections, so far as they relate to the sale and possession of fermented liquors, shall not be held applicable to the sale and possession of taree, the produce of the date-tree, when supplied or used for the manufacture of goor or molasses; and the provisions of the said sections relating to the sale and possession of intoxicating drugs shall not be held applicable to the sale or possession of gunjah or bhang or other intoxicating drug by any person, who is authorized under the rules made by the Board of Revenue to cultivate the plants which produce those drugs respectively, or to prepare, transport, store, or possess the same.

Penalty for sale or transfer to unlicensed persons.

Nevertheless, whoever having cultivated any such plant sells or parts with it, or any preparation made therefrom, to any person other than a licensed vendor, or a person duly authorized to purchase the same by pass or license from the Collector, or fails to account for any quantity of such plant or of any preparation thereof which shall have been stored in his possession, shall be punished with fine which may extend to five hundred rupees."

3. For section three of the said Act XXIII of 1860 the following section shall be substituted:—

"3. When any person is sentenced to pay any fine or forfeiture under the said Act XXI of 1856, the Magistrate shall be guided by the provisions of Sections 67, 68, and 69 of the Indian Penal Code in awarding a period of imprisonment in default of payment thereof. Any sum so ordered to be paid shall be recoverable in the same manner as fines may be recovered under section 307 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, if the offence shall have been committed outside the limits of the town of Calcutta; and, if the offence shall have been committed within those limits, in the manner prescribed by any Act regulating the police of the town of Calcutta in force for the time being."

Recovery of fine.

4. All the provisions of the said Act XXI of 1856, which relate to puchwye, shall be deemed to relate also to any fermented liquor other than those referred to in section twenty-three of the said Act.

Provisions relating to puchwye relate to other fermented liquors.

5. The provisions of section four of the said Act XI of 1849 shall be deemed applicable to the manufacture and wholesale sale of spirituous and fermented liquors and intoxicating drugs.

Manufacture and wholesale sale of spirituous and fermented liquors.

6. For section seventy-four of the said Act XXI of 1856 the following section shall be substituted:—

"74. Every person who shall be imprisoned under the last preceding section, or on account of the non-payment of any sum forfeited under this Act, if the offence, of which he has been convicted, be one with respect to which the information of the Collector or an abkari officer is required by section 71, may be confined in the civil or in the criminal jail."

Imprisonment may be in the civil or criminal jail.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE rules contained in Act XXI of 1856 are not sufficient to enable the Board of Revenue to restrict the cultivation of plants producing intoxicating drugs, or to regulate the use of such drugs. Section 33 empowers the Board to place the cultivation, preparation, and store of such drugs under supervision, but it does not provide any penalty for the infraction of rules which the Board may make with that object. By section 50 the cultivators of plants producing gunjah or bhang are expressly permitted, without a license, to sell those drugs to a licensed vendor, and to hold any quantity of them. If the cultivator stores the plant, or prepares and stores the drug, with the full knowledge of the excise officers, there is nothing in the law which prevents his disposal of it to other persons by gift or by ostensible gift; and he cannot be called to account or punished, if he alleges the next day that the whole of the plant or drug has been destroyed by insects or has disappeared. The object of the first two sections of the Bill is to empower the Board to exercise a more efficient supervision in such matters, and to provide a penalty for the surreptitious disposal of such drugs.

Act XXI of 1856, as amended by Act XXIII of 1860, does not provide for the enforcement of fines and forfeitures otherwise than by imprisonment. The object of section 3 of the Bill is to provide for the recovery of such penalties in the same manner in which similar penalties for other offences are levied by the Magistrate.

It has been found that the manufacture of various kinds of fermented liquors, such as "Sharbat Bahar," which is made from molasses and spices, and a wine made from the fruit of the jaman tree, is increasing. The Bill proposes to bring them under the same rules and restrictions as tari, puchwye, and other fermented liquors.

Under the present law a wholesale dealer in spirituous and fermented liquors and intoxicating drugs is not compelled to take out a license in Calcutta. Such a license is required in the whole of the North-Western and Central Provinces, in the Punjab, in Oudh, and in all parts of the Lower Provinces except Calcutta. There appears to be no reason for this distinction, and the principle which underlies the requisition in one place is every where equally applicable. Section 5 of the Bill therefore proposes to prohibit the wholesale sale of such articles in Calcutta without a license.

Experience has shown that the imprisonment in the civil jail, of offenders against excise laws, is not sufficiently deterrent. In Calcutta all such offenders are imprisoned in the criminal jail, but the law of the mofussil authorizes imprisonment in the civil jail only. It may be admitted that it would be unjust in some cases to confine the offender among criminal convicts, but in other cases his detention in idleness in the company of insolvent debtors would alone be ineffectual. Section 6 of the Bill proposes to give to the Magistrate a discretion to confine the offender in the civil or criminal jail as the object of imprisonment in each case may seem to require.

WE, the Select Committee appointed to consider the Bill "to amend the law relating to the emigration of laborers to the districts of Assam, Cachar, and Sylhet, and to regulate contract labor and service" have the honor to make the following preliminary Report.

From Secretary, Bengal Chamber of Commerce, dated 7th March 1873.

From Secretary, India General Steam Navigation Company, Limited, dated 17th March 1873.

From Secretary, Planters' Association, Debrooghur, dated 11th March 1873.

From Superintendent of Labor Transport, Goalundo, dated 13th idem.

Remarks and Suggestions by Superintendent of Labor Transport, Calcutta.
From Offg. Magistrate of Sylhet, dated 20th March 1873.
From Deputy Commissioner, Seebsaugur, dated 21st idem.
From Offg. Deputy Commissioner of Cachar, dated 24th idem.
From Superintendent of Labor Transport, Calcutta, dated 3rd April 1873.

We have received the papers noted in the margin and considered them in reference to the main features of the Bill, which we have amended accordingly. But we have not had sufficient time to discuss the wording of each clause in detail.

We have made certain verbal and formal alterations in the Bill, and restored the wording of some of the provisions contained in Act II of 1870; for instance, we have struck out section 9 and substituted the provisions contained in section 114 of Act II of 1870.

Emigration.—In place of sections 10 and 11, we have retained section 64 of Act II of 1870, only adding thereto a provision that the Lieutenant-Governor may prohibit emigration if he has reason to believe that a political disturbance is likely to occur in any labor district. We have re-constructed section 13.

Garden-sirdars.—On this subject we have omitted from section 20 of the Bill the provision requiring a garden-sirdar to be furnished with a power of attorney. We have modified the provisions of section 24 which required coolies engaged by a garden-sirdar to be registered before the Magistrate of the district or sub-division of the district, by allowing them to be registered before the Magistrate of the district or sub-division of the district, through which they shall first pass on the road to their destination.

We have given power to the employer, or his representative in Calcutta, to cancel before the Superintendent of Emigration contracts made in the district by a garden-sirdar on payment of the coolies' travelling expenses.

We have struck out section 56 which enacts that a fine imposed on a garden-sirdar shall be recoverable from the employer.

Recruiters.—We have altered section 46, which required the Magistrate to satisfy himself by inquiry that the person to whom a recruiter's license had been granted, was not unfitted by character or otherwise to be a recruiter, before countersigning such license; and we have made it obligatory on the Magistrate to countersign, unless it appears to him that such person is unfit to be employed as a recruiter.

Transport.—We have amended section 71 of the Bill by providing that the penalty prescribed by it for delay in despatching a vessel shall not be incurred, if the delay is occasioned by any casualty of navigation. Section 79 required the master of any licensed vessel to report the arrival of his vessel to the Magistrate at every place at which a vessel is obliged to stop, and to await the answer of the Magistrate. This provision being indefinite, we have in place thereof substituted the following, namely that the master shall be bound to report to the Magistrate immediately on arrival, and to remain during not less than six hours of daylight. In lieu of the power of detention given to the Magistrate by section 82, which is indefinite, we have substituted a clear and distinct power of detention under certain circumstances, not exceeding five days; and we have reconstructed this section. We have also altered section 83 to make it accord with the section preceding.

Localities unfit for residence of laborers.—Being of opinion that the percentage of mortality, upon which the Lieutenant-Governor is enabled to act and declare an estate unfit for the residence of laborers under the terms of section 121, is by itself no certain or safe indication of unfitness for residence, we have considerably modified the section. The power conferred by it is very summary, and we have therefore limited its exercise to cases of unfitness arising from the neglect or default of owners or employers, whenever it may appear that the percentage of mortality mentioned in section 121 is due to that cause. The preceding section provides for two classes of cases in reference to estates—(1) unhealthiness and unfitness arising from condition, (2) unhealthiness and unfitness arising from situation. This section provides machinery for proper and searching inquiry. We have therefore thought it right to limit the exercise of summary powers by the Lieutenant-Governor to the cases mentioned above. We have framed a section in lieu of section 121, basing the action of the Lieutenant-Governor upon the percentage of mortality mentioned in section 121, and we have provided therein for specific inquiries to be made before the Lieutenant-Governor can declare an estate unfit for residence.

Contracts by time-expired laborers.—Chapter 17.—We have omitted this chapter, and we have not re-enacted section 117 of Act II of 1870; being of opinion, upon the information afforded us, that it is not desirable to interfere with the free action of laborers who have served out their time. As a result of this omission we have provided in section 106 that the inspectors are to make returns of all laborers employed on an estate, whether engaged under the Act or not.

Neglect of work and arrears of wages.—Chapter 18.—This chapter is entirely a new provision for the regulation of the relative duties of master and servant. We do not see that such a provision of law is specially necessary in the labor districts. It forms a branch of general law, and should not be dealt with in a law relating to a special subject. We have consequently omitted this chapter.

Chapter 19.—As chapters 17 and 18 have been struck out, this chapter has no application, and it is therefore omitted.

We proposed to insert by way of schedule to the Bill forms of contract and release instead of leaving them to be settled by the Executive Government, as is provided by section 5 of the Bill; but not having had sufficient time and information to frame them, we have allowed the provisions of the Bill in this respect to stand unaltered for the present.

In presenting this preliminary report, we beg to reserve to ourselves the liberty of further considering, altering, and amending the Bill as now amended and placed before the Council.

We recommend that the amended Bill and Act II of 1870 be published in the Calcutta Gazette in double columns, to show the changes proposed in the law.

RULES FOR ADVANCES FOR LAND IMPROVEMENTS UNDER ACT 26, OF 1871.

The 7th July 1873.—The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to make the following rules under Section 18, Act XXVI of 1871, to which the sanction of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council has been obtained :—

ADVANCES of Rs. 50 and upwards under these rules may be made for such sums as the Governor-General in Council may from time to time allot to the local Government, or as may be otherwise at its disposal for the purpose of such advances.

2. Applications for advances under the Act shall be made in writing, and shall be on stamped paper of the value of eight annas. They shall be presented to the Collector, or to any officer authorized by the local Government to receive such applications.

3. Applications shall be presented in open court by the applicant in person, or by some person duly authorized by him in this behalf. Each application shall be signed by the person presenting it, and shall be attested by two witnesses in the presence of the officer to whom it is presented.

4. The application shall state—

1*st.*—The name of the applicant, his profession, parentage, tribe or caste, and residence.

2*nd.*—The amount of the advance applied for, and whether the applicant proposes to supplement it by any private capital; and if so, to what extent.

3*rd.*—The nature and description of the work for which the advance is required.

4*th.*—The estimated total cost of the proposed work, and the probable period that will be occupied in its construction.

5*th.*—The village and local revenue sub-division in which the land to be benefited is situated; the position, character, and area of such land; and, should it consist in part or wholly of numbered and measured fields or plots, the numbers of the same.

6*th.*—The advantages, pecuniary or other, expected to result from the work.

7*th.*—The manner and extent to which the proposed work will affect (favorably or injuriously) adjoining or other lands.

8*th.*—The nature and extent of the applicant's rights or interests in the land to be benefited, or in any other land offered as security for the repayment of the advance; and whether there are any, and, if so what, incumbrances on such rights and interests.

9*th.*—The amount and number of the instalments by which the advance is to be repaid, principal and interest, and the dates on which these instalments are to be paid.

10*th.*—The security tendered for the repayment of the advance.

5. When the amount of the advance exceeds Rs. 500, the application shall be accompanied by a rough plan and estimate of the proposed work; and where it exceeds Rs. 5,000, by an accurate plan, specification, and estimate.

6. If the applicant is unable to furnish such plans, estimates, or specifications, the Collector may cause them to be prepared on behalf of the applicant. Before ordering such preparation, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the applicant to deposit such sum of money as may, in the opinion of the Collector, be sufficient to cover the cost, or he may call on the applicant to give security for the repayment of the same.

7. When a written application is found to have omitted any of the particulars required by Rule IV, the officer receiving it may either return it to the applicant for correction, or record on it the information that is wanting from the applicant's verbal statements. In either case, such addition to the application must be signed and attested as required by Rule III.

8. If the Collector considers that there is primâ facie reason to believe that the application should be granted, he shall cause it to be entered in the register of applications; and if the application be for an advance of Rs. 250 and upwards, shall order a local inquiry to be made. When the application is for less than Rs. 250, a local inquiry need not be made, provided that the Collector has otherwise satisfied himself and recorded in writing the ground for his satisfaction that the grant is desirable, and that the allegations made in column 8, and the securities offered in column 10 of the application, are true and good. If he is of opinion that the application should not be granted, he shall reject it.

9. Local inquiries shall be conducted by the chief revenue officer of the district, or by any of his subordinates of not lower grade than a tcshildar, sub-deputy, or similar official, to whom he may entrust the duty. In all cases in which the proposed advance exceeds Rs. 500, the officer charged with making the local inquiry shall, at least one week prior to the date on which he proposes to hold the same, post up in one or more conspicuous places in the village in which the land to be benefited by the proposed work is situated, a notice setting forth briefly the nature of the advance applied for, and the date on which he proposes to hold an inquiry on the spot as to the correctness of the facts alleged in the application. The person charged with posting such notice shall read it, or cause it to be read, publicly to such of the principal inhabitants of the village as may be present, and shall, on a copy of the notice (which he shall subsequently return to the officer issuing the notice) obtain the signatures of the village headmen, accountant, policemen, or other local officials or respectable inhabitants in acknowledgment of its having been publicly read.

10. No fees shall be charged for the service of this or any other notice where the proposed advance does not exceed Rs. 500. Where the advance exceeds Rs. 5,000, the service of any notice may be charged for at a rate not exceeding that required for the service of a civil process; and where the advance falls between these limits, it shall not exceed half this latter rate.

11. Prior to the local inquiry, the Collector shall cause to be tested, by comparison with his official records, all statements in the application which can be so tested, and cause to be stated in writing the extent to which such records agree with or differ from the application; and any such difference shall be specially investigated at the local inquiry, or specially discussed and disposed of by the Collector if he acts without a local inquiry. Where there may be no records to substantiate the allegations made in column 8 of the application, the Collector must certify accordingly.

12. On the day fixed by the notice, or, should the day first fixed be unavoidably postponed on that fixed by some subsequent notice, the officer charged with the duty shall proceed to the spot, and, after assembling the parties more immediately concerned, any local officials, and some of the respectable agriculturists of the place, he shall proceed to examine the site of the proposed work; he shall test the accuracy of each of the statements set forth in the application, and shall ascertain and record everything that may be necessary to enable the Collector to arrive at a correct decision

13. The officer charged with the conduct of the local inquiry may summon, at the cost of the applicant, any person whose evidence may be considered necessary and whose attendance cannot otherwise be secured, and may exercise such powers as revenue courts possess for the purpose of summoning witnesses. A record shall be made by such officer of all objections made to the proposed work or advance, and of all evidence bearing on such objections.

14. When the applicant is a tenant, the additional proceeding required by Sections 7 to 13 of Act XXVI of 1871 must be completed.

15. On the completion of the inquiry, the officer by whom it was made shall forward to the Collector the whole of the papers connected therewith, together with his own opinion and recommendation.

16. On receipt of the papers the Collector may in any case, and when the proposed advance exceeds Rs. 5,000, shall obtain from the proper officer in the Bengal Department of Public Works in such manner as the local Government may direct, an opinion as to the feasibility, probable cost, and merits generally, from a professional point of view, of the proposed work. The Public Works officer required to report need not, unless the Collector requires him to do so, visit the site of the proposed work in cases where the advance is less than Rs. 2,000.

17. If, on a review of the result of the local inquiry and of the professional opinions (if any) that have been obtained, and after such further investigation as he may consider necessary, the Collector is not satisfied that the advance is desirable, and that it can be made under the Act and these rules, he shall reject the application, recording his reasons for the same.

18. If the Collector is satisfied that the advance may properly be made, he shall grant a certificate for the advance applied for, or for such smaller sum as he may consider sufficient for the purpose specified in the application, or shall report the case for the orders of higher authority, in accordance with the provisions of the next following rule.

19. If sufficient sums have been placed at the disposal of the Collector for the purpose, he may, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the division, grant a certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 500. The Commissioner of the division may, subject to the same condition, grant such certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 5,000. The Board of Revenue may, subject to the same condition, grant such certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 5,000. Certificates for advances exceeding Rs 5,000, but not exceeding Rs. 10,000, will require the sanction of the local Government. If the proposed advance exceed Rs. 10,000, the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council will be required.

20. When a certificate is granted, it shall be endorsed by the applicant to the effect that he has understood and agreed to all terms, and it shall be signed by him before, and be attested by, two witnesses. If any property, other than property of the applicant, is pledged or mortgaged as security for repayment of the advance, the certificate shall be similarly endorsed, signed, and attested by the sureties and witnesses; and if the applicant is a tenant without transferable interest in the land to be benefited, the certificate shall be signed by his landlord and attested by two witnesses other than the landlord.

In all cases in which land or property other than the land to be benefited is hypothecated as security for the repayment of the advance, the certificate must bear the stamp required for mortgages under the Stamp Act for the time being in force, and must in all cases in which, if the transaction were a private one, registration would be requisite, be registered under the registration law at the time in force.

21. The certificate shall be retained in the office of the Collector; one copy shall be given to the applicant; and when advances are made payable at any tehsil or other subordinate district treasury, a copy of such certificate shall be sent to such treasury. All certificates issued in any financial year shall bear a serial number.

22. No advance shall be made for an improvement which is likely, so far as can be ascertained, to injure the property of any parties who have not consented to its execution.

23. No project shall be divided. After an advance has been sanctioned and the whole thereof expended, a second advance for the same work shall not be made without the sanction of the local Government.

24. No advance shall be made unless the value of the security accepted exceeds by at least one-fourth the amount of the advance.

25. Subject to the orders of the local Government, the Collector shall make provision for the proper inspection of works in course of construction for which advances have been made, and for ascertaining and securing that such advances are duly applied to the purpose for which they were made.

26. The works, and any accounts kept thereat, shall be at all times open to the inspection of the Collector or other person authorized by him in that behalf.

27. In the case of advances exceeding Rs. 5,000 accounts shall be kept by the recipient of the advance in any form that the Collector may, with the sanction of superior authority, from time to time prescribe.

28. If at any time the Collector is satisfied that any person who has received an advance has failed to perform any of the conditions under which it was made, the Collector may, after recording in writing the grounds for the decision he has arrived at, and subject to the control of the Board of Revenue, proceed to recover from such person, or from any security for such person under the provisions of the Act, any sums which remain due, together with any interests payable thereon.

29. If it is shown that the borrower has wilfully, and without reasonable cause, omitted to apply the money to the purpose for which it was borrowed, any sums which he so failed to apply may be levied with interest with a penalty of 50 per cent.

30. All works for which advances are made in a lump sum shall be inspected and reported on within one month of the date on which their completion was directed in the certificate. All works for which advances are made by instalments shall be inspected and reported on before each instalment subsequent to the first is paid, and such inspection shall take place at latest within one month of the date when such instalment is payable.

31. Except with the special sanction of the local Government, no advance of any sum not exceeding Rs. 500 shall be made unless it be repayable with interest within seven years from the date fixed for the completion of the work; and no advance exceeding Rs. 500 shall be made without such sanction unless it be so repayable within twelve years. If in any case the proposed period of repayment exceeds twenty years, the sanction of the Government of India to the proposed advance must be obtained.

32. Applications for advances may be made to, and received by, the officer in charge of the sub-division in which the land on which the money is to be expended lies. In dealing with such applications, the sub-divisional officer shall be guided generally by the instructions contained in Rules I to XVI.

33. On the completion of his inquiry the sub-divisional officer shall report the case to the Collector in the following tabular form:—

(1). Name of applicant, and rights held by him. (2) Residence. (3) Nature and locality of work for which advance has been applied for. (4) Amount of advance applied for. (5) Period within which work is to be completed. (6 Instalments in which advance with interest is to be repaid. (7) Security tendered for repayment. (8) Remarks showing the results of any local inquiry or any other grounds on which the sub-divisional officer may have founded his opinion

34. If the advance proposed is less than Rs. 250, the Collector will pass final orders; if more than Rs. 250, he will forward a copy of the sub-divisional officer's report with his own opinion to the Commissioner, who will then proceed to pass orders under Rule XIX.

35. The interest charged on advances shall for the present be one anna per annum on the rupee, or 6¼ per cent. per annum.

36. All the above rules are applicable, mutatis mutandis, to applications submitted by a number of persons collectively with a view to effecting works of general utility. In such cases the persons signing the application must make themselves individually as well as collectively responsible for the repayment of the advance.

37. All orders passed by a Commissioner, or by the Board of Revenue, sanctioning the payment of advances under the Act, must at once be communicated by them to the Accountant-General to enable him to admit the payments when made.

38. The number and date of such order should also be clearly cited by the Collector in the entry of the payment in the treasury returns, and the payee's receipt should be forwarded to Accountant-General as a voucher in support of the charge.

39. A separate record will be maintained in the Accountant-General's office of all advances made under the Act, and in order that interest at 5 per cent. may be added when due to the original amount of each advance, the Collector should, on the completion of every half-year after the date of the original advance, forward to the Accountant-General a special advice of the interest then falling due on the amount.

40. The necessary adjustment will then be made in the Accountant-General's office, and the Collector advised of the increased amount recorded in the Accountant-General's books against the payee of the advance.

It is within the discretion of the officer in charge of the Custom House to determine, subject to the above rules, whether any goods shall be treated as baggage and exempt from duty, or as goods liable to duty.

PROCLAMATION.

The 4th July 1873.—Whereas in the district of Pubna, owing to attempts of zemindars to enhance rents and combinations of ryots to resist the same, large bodies of men have assembled at several places in a riotous and tumultuous manner, and serious breaches of the peace have occurred, THIS is very gravely to warn all concerned that while on the one hand the Government will protect the people from all force and extortion, and the zemindars must assert any claims they may have by legal means only, on the other hand the Government will firmly repress all violent and illegal action on the part of the ryots, and will strictly bring to justice all who offend against the law, to whatever class they belong.

The ryots and others who have assembled are hereby required to disperse, and to prefer peaceably and quietly any grievances they may have. If they so come forward, they will be patiently listened to; but the officers of Government cannot listen to rioters; on the contrary, they will take severe measures against them.

It is asserted by the people who have combined to resist the demands of the zemindars that they are to be the ryots of Her Majesty the Queen, and of Her only. Those people, and all who listen to them, are warned that the Government cannot and will not interfere with the rights of property as secured by law; that they must pay what is legally due from them to those to whom it is legally due. It is perfectly lawful to unite in a peaceable manner to resist any excessive demands of the zemindars, but it is not lawful to unite to use violence and intimidation.

Junior Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

RESOLUTION.

JUDICIAL.

Calcutta, the 8th July 1873.

1. THE Lieutenant-Governor directs that the accompanying extract from a letter lately written by a public officer, with regard to the recent order prescribing office hours, be circulated with the following remarks.

2. The letter is that of an officer who used (he says) to go to office at 12-30 P.M. It quite confirms the Lieutenant-Governor's view that the practice has too often been to give only half the day to court and office work, and that the worst half. His Honor considers that the term breakfast is wholly misapplied to the meal between 11 A.M. and noon alluded to. It is not breakfast, but the mid-day meal, which divides the first and the second part of the active day. The writer is a civil servant of considerable standing; and if he has come to his time of life, as he says, in the exercise of a habit which prevents his going to office before 12-30 P.M. without constitutional disturbance, it is evident that he must have lived in times and under circumstances which admitted of such a custom being very habitual.

3. With reference to such a disclosure, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks it necessary to repeat that officers, European and Native, whose habits are those of the officer alluded to, must either wholly change their habits in regard to the mid-day meal, or adopt the plan which His Honor has suggested of dividing the working day into two parts, in accordance, as he believes, with the ordinary manners of the country.

4. Many statements in the public prints and elsewhere, as also disclosures in cases brought to light by the High Court, tend to show that the order which has been passed about office hours was very much wanted; and His Honor trusts that it is strictly attended to, and that supervising officers see that it is so.

Extract from letter referred to in para. 1 of the Resolution.

PARA. 1.—* * * * I have now introduced the change in accordance with the imperative order of the Lieutenant-Governor, which appears to allow no discretion to any magisterial officer, whatever his years or experience, if he be not fortunate enough to be a district Magistrate-Collector; but I find the native public dissatisfied with the alteration, while it causes me bodily discomfort owing to habits which cannot be suddenly broken through at my time of life without a certain amount of constitutional disturbance. The objection taken to the change by the native public, as represented by the mooktears, is that the usual breakfast hour of their clients is between 11 A.M. and noon, and that many of them having long distances to come are unable to appear before noon or 1 P.M. * * * *

Bills of the Bengal Council.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT

[Thirteenth Publication.]

THE following report of the Select Committee on the Bill to provide for the levy of a lighting-rate in Howrah, with the amended Bill, is by order of the president published for general information:—

We, the undersigned Members of the Select Committee of the Council of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations, to which the Bill to provide for the levy of a lighting-rate in Howrah was referred, have the honor to report that we have considered the Bill.

We have reconstructed the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th sections of the Bill, and we have made some verbal alterations in other sections.

We have made the imposition of a lighting-rate dependent on the previous notification by the Lieutenant-Governor, that proper provision has been made for sufficient lighting with gas the portion of the town on which the rate is to be assessed.

We have made it the duty of the Municipal Commissioners previously to define at a meeting the portion of the town to be lighted. We have made it incumbent on the Municipal Commissioners to light the lamps immediately upon the imposition of a rate and; while empowering them to levy the rate by quarterly instalments in advance, we have provided that no rate shall be levied for any period prior to the first lighting of the lamps.

We have rendered the owner, in cases where the rate may be recovered from him, liable for the whole quarter, although his house, &c., may have been unoccupied during a portion of it, if he has failed to give notice that his house, &c., has ceased to be occupied.

We have not given jurisdiction to the Small Cause Court to determine questions of compensation; and we have not provided that the Act shall come into force on the 1st April 1873.

The 19th April 1873.

AMENDED BILL.

A Bill to provide for the levy of a lighting-rate in Howrah.

WHEREAS it is desirable to make further provision for lighting the town of Howrah with gas, by imposing a rate on those persons who benefit thereby,

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

Limits of the Town of Howrah.

1. The expression "the town of Howrah" in this Act shall be taken to mean the area of the Howrah Municipality, as defined by the Lieutenant-Governor under the provisions of section 3 of the District Municipal Improvement Act, being Bengal Act III of 1864.

Lighting-rate not exceeding 2 per cent. may be imposed on houses, buildings, and lands.

2. It shall be lawful for the Municipal Commissioners, after notification by the Lieutenant-Governor in the Calcutta Gazette, that proper provision has been made according to a scheme submitted to him by the Municipal Commissioners for the sufficient lighting with gas any portion of the Town of Howrah previously defined by the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting, to impose an annual rate not exceeding 2 per centum of their annual value upon all houses, buildings, and lands situated within such portion of the said town for the purpose of defraying the expense of such lighting.

Payable by occupiers quarterly in advance.

Such rate shall be paid by the occupiers of such houses, buildings, and lands by quarterly instalments in advance; but no rate shall be leviable until the lamps in such portion of the said town have been lighted with gas, nor shall any rate be leviable for any portion of a quarter antecedent to such lighting.

Arable land, &c., exempted from rate.

Arable lands and lands used for pasturage, and buildings used exclusively as places of public worship, or applied solely to charitable purposes, shall not be liable to the rate.

After rate imposed, lamps must be lighted.

3. So soon as a rate has been imposed under the last preceding section, the Municipal Commissioners shall immediately thereupon cause such portion of the said town to be lighted with gas, according to the said scheme submitted to the Lieutenant-Governor.

Annual valuation how to be made.

4. The annual value of the said houses, buildings, and lands shall be the value fixed by the Municipal Commissioners year by year under the provisions of Section 27 of the District Municipal Improvement Act. And all the provisions of the said Act and of Bengal Act VII of 1867, relating to the assessment and collection of the rate on houses, buildings, and lands shall, except so far as they are modified by the provisions of this Act, be applicable to the assessment and collection of the lighting-rate.

Assessment and collection.

Power to assess owners in certain cases.

5. If any house, building, or land shall be occupied by more than one tenant holding in severalty, or shall be of less annual value than one hundred rupees, it shall be lawful for the Municipal Commissioners to recover the rate from the owner of such house, building, or land.

Owner to recover from the occupier rates paid by owner.

6. Whenever any rate shall be recovered from any owner of any house, building, or land under the provisions of the last preceding section, it shall be lawful for such owner, if there shall be but one occupying tenant of such house, building, or land to recover from such tenant the entire amount of the rate which shall have been so paid by such owner; and if there shall be more than one occupying tenant of such house, building, or land, then to recover from each of such tenants such sum as shall bear to the entire amount of rate which may have been so recovered from such owner the same proportion as the value of the portion of such house, building, or land in the occupation of such tenant bears to the entire value of such house, building, or land, subject however to the provisions of Section 8 of this Act.

Owner may recover rate so paid as rent.

7. Every owner, who under the provisions of the last preceding section may be entitled to recover any sum from any occupying tenant of any house, building, or land, or of any portion thereof, shall have for the recovery of such sum all such and the same remedies, powers, rights, and authorities as if such sum were rent payable to such owner by such tenant in respect of so much of such house, building, or land as may be in the occupation of such tenant.

Occupier liable to the rate for time of occupation only.

8. Every occupier shall be liable to the lighting-rate for the time of his occupation. When any person shall have been an occupier for a part only of any quarter, he shall be liable only for so much of the rate for that quarter as may be proportionate to the number of days during which he shall have been an occupier. If he shall have paid the rate in advance, the amount paid in excess of the sum due under this section shall be refunded.

Excess paid in advance to be refunded.

No rate to be charged during vacancy.

No such rate shall be chargeable to any person on account of any unoccupied house, building, or land for the time during which it may remain unoccupied.

Notice of cessation of occupancy to be given within seven days.

Provided always that when any person ceases to be the occupier of any house, building, or land upon which the rate has been assessed, he shall give the Municipal Commissioners notice thereof within seven days from the date of the cessation of his occupancy. If the occupier fail to give such notice within such period, he shall be liable to the rate assessed on such house, building, or land for the whole quarter, although he may have occupied for a part only of such quarter; and in cases to which the provisions of Section 5 of this Act apply, the rate assessed on such house, building, or land for the whole quarter shall be recoverable from the owner, if such owner has failed to give notice that such house, building, or land is unoccupied, within seven days from the date on which it ceased to be occupied.

Unknown owner or occupier how to be designated.

9. When the name of the owner or occupier of any house, building, or land is not known, it shall be sufficient to designate him in any notice served, or proceeding held under this Act, as the owner or the occupier of the house, building, or land on which the rate is assessed, and without further description.

Situation of gas-pipe or other gas-work to be altered at the expense of the commissioners.

10. If the Municipal Commissioners deem it necessary, for the purposes of this Act, to raise, sink, or otherwise alter the situation of any gas-pipe, or other gas-work, laid in any portion of the said town, they may from time to time, by notice in writing, require the person to whom any such pipe or work belongs, or under whose control it may be, to cause forthwith, or as soon as conveniently may be, any such pipe or work to be raised, sunk, or otherwise altered in position, in such manner as the Commissioners may direct; provided that such alteration be not such as permanently to injure such pipe or work, or to prevent the gas from flowing as freely and conveniently as before; and the expenses attending such raising, sinking, or altering, and full compensation for the damage done thereby, shall be paid by the Commissioners out of the municipal fund as well to the person to whom such pipe or work belongs as to all other persons.

If owner, &c., neglect to make alterations, the commissioners may cause the same to be made.

11. If the person to whom any such pipe or work belongs, or under whose control it may be, do not proceed forthwith, or as soon as conveniently may be, after the receipt of such notice, to cause the same to be raised, sunk, or altered in such manner as the Municipal Commissioners require, the Commissioners may themselves cause such pipe or work to be raised, sunk, or altered as they may think fit, provided that such works be not permanently injured thereby, or the gas prevented from flowing as freely and conveniently as before.

Construction.

12. This Act shall be construed with, and as part of, the District Municipal Improvement Act.

4. All the provisions of the said Act XXI of 1856, which relate to puchwye, shall be deemed to relate also to any fermented liquor other than those referred to in section twenty-three of the said Act.

Provisions relating to puchwye relate to other fermented liquors.

5. The provisions of section four of the said Act XI of 1849 shall be deemed applicable to the manufacture and wholesale sale of spirituous and fermented liquors and intoxicating drugs.

Manufacture and wholesale sale of spirituous and fermented liquors.

6. For section seventy-four of the said Act XXI of 1856 the following section shall be substituted:—

"74. Every person who shall be imprisoned under the last preceding section, or on account of the non-payment of any sum forfeited under this Act, if the offence, of which he has been convicted, be one with respect to which the information of the Collector or an abkari officer is required by section 71, may be confined in the civil or in the criminal jail."

Imprisonment may be in the civil or criminal jail.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE rules contained in Act XXI of 1856 are not sufficient to enable the Board of Revenue to restrict the cultivation of plants producing intoxicating drugs, or to regulate the use of such drugs. Section 33 empowers the Board to place the cultivation, preparation, and store of such drugs under supervision, but it does not provide any penalty for the infraction of rules which the Board may make with that object. By section 50 the cultivators of plants producing gunjah or bhang are expressly permitted, without a license, to sell those drugs to a licensed vendor, and to hold any quantity of them. If the cultivator stores the plant, or prepares and stores the drug, with the full knowledge of the excise officers, there is nothing in the law which prevents his disposal of it to other persons by gift or by ostensible gift; and he cannot be called to account or punished, if he alleges the next day that the whole of the plant or drug has been destroyed by insects or has disappeared. The object of the first two sections of the Bill is to empower the Board to exercise a more efficient supervision in such matters, and to provide a penalty for the surreptitious disposal of such drugs.

Act XXI of 1856, as amended by Act XXIII of 1860, does not provide for the enforcement of fines and forfeitures otherwise than by imprisonment. The object of section 3 of the Bill is to provide for the recovery of such penalties in the same manner in which similar penalties for other offences are levied by the Magistrate.

It has been found that the manufacture of various kinds of fermented liquors, such as "Sharbat Bahar," which is made from molasses and spices, and a wine made from the fruit of the jaman tree, is increasing. The Bill proposes to bring them under the same rules and restrictions as tari, puchwye, and other fermented liquors.

Under the present law a wholesale dealer in spirituous and fermented liquors and intoxicating drugs is not compelled to take out a license in Calcutta. Such a license is required in the whole of the North-Western and Central Provinces, in the Punjab, in Oudh, and in all parts of the Lower Provinces except Calcutta. There appears to be no reason for this distinction, and the principle which underlies the requisition in one place is every where equally applicable. Section 5 of the Bill therefore proposes to prohibit the wholesale sale of such articles in Calcutta without a license.

Experience has shown that the imprisonment in the civil jail, of offenders against excise laws, is not sufficiently deterrent. In Calcutta all such offenders are imprisoned in the criminal jail, but the law of the mofussil authorizes imprisonment in the civil jail only. It may be admitted that it would be unjust in some cases to confine the offender among criminal convicts, but in other cases his detention in idleness in the company of insolvent debtors would alone be ineffectual. Section 6 of the Bill proposes to give to the Magistrate a discretion to confine the offender in the civil or criminal jail as the object of imprisonment in each case may seem to require.

If the districts, within which the lands likely to be affected by any such work are situated, are subject to the Commissioners of different divisions, the Collector to whom the Engineer has submitted his report shall apply to the Commissioner of the division within which his district is situated and such Commissioner may, with the concurrence of the Commissioner to whom the other district is subject, give authority to proceed in such matter.

PART IV.

Procedure in cases of imminent danger to life or property.

Proceedings in emergencies.

24. Whenever the Engineer shall be of opinion that the proceedings commenced by notice under Part III of this Act would cause delay in the exercise of any of the powers by Sections 5, 6, and 7 conferred upon him, likely to be attended with grave and imminent danger to life or property, he may forthwith commence to exercise such powers without reference to the Collector. Provided that he shall forthwith inform the Collector thereof and of the nature of the danger, and give notice of his intention to continue to exercise such powers. The Collector, in any case where he shall see fit, may direct the Engineer to suspend further action until after the completion of such proceedings and inquiries. The Engineer, as soon as he conveniently may, after giving such notice of his intention, shall give notice in writing to the Collector, together with plans, specifications, estimates, and maps, as provided in Section 18, appending thereto a statement that the work mentioned therein has already been commenced, and thereupon such proceedings and inquiries shall be had as in and by Part III of this Act are directed.

25. Whenever any land, or earth from any land the property of any person, is required for the purposes of any works commenced in pursuance of the provisions of the last preceding section, or for the purposes of Section 11 in cases where the Engineer shall be of opinion that proceedings for the acquisition of such land, according to the provisions contained in Section 30, would cause delays aforesaid, the Engineer shall cause public notice in form in Schedule (C) to be given at convenient places in the locality in which such land is situated, and he may at the same time take possession of the same for the said purposes. Provided that he shall, so soon thereafter as he conveniently may, give notice thereof to the Collector.

Power to restore embankments, &c.

28. Whenever, upon an inquiry had under the provisions of this Part, it has been determined in the final and conclusive order to be passed on such inquiry that anything done by the Engineer was unnecessary, the land or the embankments or drainage shall, so far as any alteration thereof shall appear to be unnecessary, be at the expense of the Government restored as nearly as possible to the state in which they were when the Engineer commenced to act under the provisions of this Part; and any person who shall have sustained loss, damage, or injury by the execution of such works, shall receive compensation from the Government to be assessed and imposed according to the provisions contained in Part V of this Act.

Section 23 to apply to proceedings under this Part.

29. The provisions of Section 23 shall be applicable to proceedings taken under this Part.

PART V.

30. Whenever in the course of proceedings under this Act, save in those cases in which the Engineer has proceeded under the provisions of Part IV, it appears that land is required for any of the purposes thereof, such purpose shall be deemed to be a public purpose within the meaning of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, and such proceedings shall be forthwith taken as are directed by the said Act or by any other law for the time being governing the acquisition of lands for public purposes.

When land taken, notice to be published.

31. Whenever any land shall have been taken or used under the provisions of Part IV, the Collector shall, unless he shall direct the Engineer to suspend further action, cause public notice in form in Schedule (D) to be given at convenient places on or near the land so taken, stating that Government has taken possession of the land, and that claims to compensation for all interests in such land shall be made to him. Thereupon the land shall vest absolutely in the Government free from all incumbrances, subject, however, to the claims for compensation to be ascertained in manner as in this Part is provided.

Contents of notice.

32. Such notice shall state the particulars of the land so taken, and shall require all persons interested in the land to appear personally or by agent before the Collector at a time and place therein mentioned (such time not being earlier than fifteen days after the date of publication of the notice), and to state the nature of their respective interests in the land, and the amount and particulars of their claims to compensation for such interest.

Further notice to be served on certain parties.

33. The Collector shall also serve notice to the same effect on the occupier (if any) of such land, and on all such persons known or believed to be interested therein, or to be entitled to act for persons so interested, as reside, or have agents authorized to receive service on their behalf, within the revenue district in which the land is situate.

Proceedings after notice.

34. After service of such notices proceedings shall be had and taken to determine the amount of compensation to be payable in respect of such and, in accordance with the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, or any other law for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes.

Compensation for consequential damage.

35. Whenever any land other than land required or taken by the Engineer, or any right of fishery, right of drainage, right of the use of water, or other right or property, shall have been injuriously affected by the due exercise of the powers or provisions of this Act, the person in whom such right is vested may prefer a claim by petition to the Collector for compensation.

Application to be made within a year.

36. No claim shall be entertained which shall be made later than one year next after the completion of the work by which such right is injuriously affected.

Procedure for such compensation.

37. When any such claim is made, proceedings shall be taken in view to determine the amount of compensation, if any, which should be made, and the person to whom the same should be payable, in accordance with the provisions of the Land Acquisition Act, 1870, or any other law for the time being in force for the acquisition of land for public purposes.

Matters to be considered in determining compensation.

38. In determining the amount of compensation to be awarded in such cases, the Judge and Assessors shall take into consideration—

First, the market value of the property injuriously affected at the time of acquiring the land;

Secondly, the damage sustained by the claimant by reason of such acquisition injuriously affecting the property;

Thirdly, the consequent diminution of the market value of the property injuriously affected at the time of acquiring the land.

But the Judge or Assessors shall not take into consideration—

Matters not to be considered in determining compensation.

First, the degree of urgency which has led to the acquisition;

Secondly, any damage sustained by the claimant, which, if caused by a private person, would not in any suit instituted against such person justify a decree for damages.

Land, &c., taken possession of to vest in Secretary of State.

39. All land, earth, pathways, sluices, gates, bermes, hedges, belonging to or forming part of any embankment or watercourse, of which charge has been or may hereafter be taken by the officers of Government, shall vest in the Government, and shall be held on behalf of the Government in respect of the embankments mentioned in Schedule E annexed to this Act, and in respect of other works on behalf of the persons interested in the lands to be protected or benefited by such embankment or watercourse, subject to the provisions of Section 67; and all monies received on account of such lands shall be payable to the Engineer and credited to the cost of the construction and maintenance of such works respectively.

PART VI.

COST OF WORKS, PROCEEDINGS, &c.

1. Ascertainment thereof.

Embankments in Schedule (E)

40. The provisions in this Part contained shall not apply to any of the embankments mentioned in Schedule (E) to this Act annexed, save so far as any works or repairs are executed therein or in relation thereto under the provisions of Sections 10 and 18 of this Act respectively. All sums payable in respect of any works or repairs executed therein or in relation thereto, except under the provisions of the said sections respectively, shall be paid by the local Government.

Exclusion from schedule.

If at any time after the passing of this Act, on inquiry made by the Collector as far as possible in accordance with the provisions of Part III of this Act, it shall be found that it is unnecessary for the public interests to retain any embankment mentioned in Schedule (E), the Lieutenant-Governor may direct that the same shall be no longer included in the said schedule. Provided that the same shall be restored to the said schedule if on any subsequent inquiry similarly conducted it shall be found necessary so to do.

Addition to schedule.

The Lieutenant-Governor may at any time after the passing of this Act, by a notification published in the Calcutta Gazette, direct that any embankment not mentioned in Schedule (E) be included in the said schedule, and the provisions of this section shall apply to such embankment.

Contribution of public money towards the maintenance of the embankments in the pergunnahs entered in Schedule (F) to be continued.

41. In accordance with the custom heretofore in force in respect of the pergunnahs entered in Schedule (F) annexed to this Act, the Government shall continue to contribute annually the sum noted therein for each pergunnah respectively towards the maintenance of the embankments thereof.

If such embankments are declared to be public, Collector to keep a separate account.

If the embankments maintained in any such pergunnah shall at any time be declared to be public embankments under the provisions of Section 4, the Collector shall from the date of such declaration keep a separate account for such pergunnah, in which the aforesaid sum shall be credited at the commencement of each financial year. The unexpended balance at the close of each year shall be carried on to the credit of the account in the next succeeding year, and shall be available for the cost of repairing or erecting all the embankments which it may be deemed necessary to maintain in such pergunnah.

Contribution may be discontinued if it be found unnecessary for the public interest to maintain the embankments.

If at any time after the passing of this Act, on an inquiry made by the Collector as far as possible in accordance with the provisions of Part III, it shall be found that it is unnecessary for the public interest to retain any embankment in either of the said pergunnahs, the Lieutenant-Governor may direct that such contribution shall cease in respect of such pergunnah. Provided that such contribution shall again be made in accordance with the provisions hereinbefore contained, if it shall appear to the Lieutenant-Governor, on the report of an inquiry similarly conducted, that the maintenance of any embankment in such pergunnah has again become necessary for the public interest.

Estimate and specifications to be prepared.

42. Specifications of any works or repairs to be executed under the provisions of this Act, and estimates of the expenses to be incurred therein or relating thereto, including such proportion of establishment charges as the Lieutenant-Governor shall direct, shall be prepared by the Engineer as soon after the month of October in each year as may be practicable. And whenever it appears that the actual expenses to be incurred will exceed the amount mentioned in the said estimates by one-tenth, the Engineer shall forthwith prepare further estimates, and, if necessary, further specifications. Copies of all specifications and estimates shall be transmitted to the office of the Collector, together with vernacular translations thereof, or such abstracts thereof as the Lieutenant-Governor may from time to time direct, and may be examined by any person interested in such works or repairs. Notice of the receipt of specifications and estimates shall be served for all estates chargeable for or likely to be affected by the said works or repairs; and should any objection in regard to the amount of such expenses be preferred by any such person within a period of one month from the date of such notice, the Collector shall communicate the objection, with his own opinion thereupon, to the Engineer, who shall pass such orders as may appear to him reasonable and proper. Such order shall be subject in any case to an appeal by the person making such objection, and to a reference by the Collector to the Commissioner, whose decision shall be final.

Preparation and settlement of accounts.

43. The accounts of the actual expense incurred in executing any works or repairs shall be prepared as soon as possible after the completion thereof. The Engineer shall sign a certificate stating the true amount of all such expenses and the names of the estates chargeable for and of the estates and villages affected by the said works and repairs. Copies of the said accounts and certificates shall be forwarded to the office of the Collector, and may be there examined by any person interested. Notice of the receipt thereof shall be served for the said estates and villages and such others as in the opinion of the Collector are liable to contribute to the payment of the said amount; and if, within thirty days from the service of such notice, any interested person shall object to the accounts on the ground either that the work charged for has not been performed, or that the whole sum charged has not been expended, or that the rates of charge are higher than those mentioned in the estimates, the Collector shall inquire into such objection, and may pass any order thereon subject in any case to an appeal by the objector or to a reference by the Engineer to the Commissioner of division, whose decision shall be final.

Total sum payable.

44. The Collector shall add to the amount appearing in the said certificate all sums which have been paid or have become payable in respect of compensation, costs and expenses under and incidental to any proceedings taken or directed to be taken under Parts III and V of this Act, including costs of all surveys and plans. He shall thereupon make an order specifying the total sum found payable, and in respect of works done under Sections 9, 12, and 13, the persons by whom, or in respect of other works the estates in respect of which, the same is payable to him. If the order is made in respect of work done under Sections 9, 12, or 13, the same shall forthwith be served upon the party or parties liable to pay; otherwise the Collector shall proceed under the provisions in the next chapter contained. Interest may be charged upon any sum paid as compensation from the date of payment thereof at such rate, not exceeding 5 per cent. per annum, as the Lieutenant-Governor may direct.

Parties liable to pay.

45. The said total sum, save so far as is otherwise provided in this Act, shall be paid to the Collector by the zemindars of the estates in which are situated the lands benefited or protected by the repairs or works executed. Provided that where any specific sum has hitherto been annually demanded in respect of any embankment not included in Schedule E, and when the said embankment is at the time of this Act coming into operation being maintained by Government, then such special payments shall, after the passing of this Act, thenceforth cease and determine.

Every zemindar, who is liable under this rule for the payment of the whole or a portion of such total sum, shall be entitled to recover from the proprietor of every tenure which is declared to be a part of his estate, the sum apportioned to such tenure by the Collector, under the provisions of Section 50. And similarly, every proprietor shall be entitled to recover from the proprietor of any subordinate tenure, which is declared to be a part of his tenure, the sum apportioned to such subordinate tenure by the Collector, under the said provisions.

2. Apportionment thereof.

Notice to be given before apportionment.

46. So soon as the total sum payable as aforesaid has been ascertained, the Collector shall cause a notice to be served for every one of the said estates and villages mentioned in Section 43. Every such notice shall specify the estates and villages aforesaid, and that an inquiry will be held at a day and place therein named for the purpose of apportioning amongst the zemindars and proprietors the said total sum, with interest and the costs of apportionment.

Mode of inquiry as to the proportion chargeable to each estate.

47. On the day fixed in the said notice, which shall not be less than thirty days later than the date of any service of such notice, the Collector shall proceed to make the said inquiry. In making this inquiry he shall receive such evidence as may be tendered by, or on behalf of, the said zemindars and proprietors, and by, or on behalf of, any other persons who may claim to be interested therein.

Names of proprietors.

48. In any such inquiry the Collector shall take down in writing the names of all persons who may claim, or who may be alleged by any party interested, to be proprietors of tenures within any of the estates mentioned in such notice. In default of appearance of any such person, the Collector shall issue and serve a notice calling on him to appear at a date and place therein mentioned, and to show cause against being included in the order of apportionment to be made therein, and shall adjourn the inquiry till such date.

Apportionment amongst zemindars.

49. At such or any subsequently adjourned inquiry, the Collector, if there be only one estate liable, shall charge the zemindar thereof with the total amount payable; and if there be two or more estates, he shall apportion the same amongst the zemindars thereof, rateably in the proportion of the respective benefits derived by such estates from such works or repairs; or in proportion of the areas of the lands benefited or protected thereby, and comprised within such estates respectively; or with the sanction of the local Government in proportion to the amount of revenue respectively payable for such estates, if before the passing of this Act such proportion has been usually adopted.

Provided that the said total amount payable in respect of the embankments on the right bank of the river Gunduk shall be chargeable, in accordance with the custom in force for such estates, to the zemindars of all the estates situated in the district of Sarun, in proportion to the amount of revenue respectively payable for such estates.

Proviso in respect of the pergunnahs in Schedule (F.)

Provided also that the sum standing to the credit of a pergunnah in Schedule (F) in the account kept by the Collector, at the time when the total amount payable is fixed under the provisions of Section 44, shall be deducted from the total amount payable in respect of such portion of any embankment as is situated in such pergunnah; and that the zemindars of the estates situated therein shall be charged only with the balance of the amount (if any) which may remain payable.

Amongst proprietors.

50. The Collector shall, in like manner, apportion, except in respect of the said Gunduk embankments, the amount payable in respect of each estate amongst all the tenures therein, rateably in the proportion of benefit so received or area so benefited or protected, first deducting therefrom such sum as on the like principle of proportion is payable in respect of such portion of the estate as is not included within any tenure.

Where the lands held without payment of rent, not being estates on the register of revenue-free tenures.

51. All lands held without payment of rent, not being estates entered in the register of revenue-free tenures, shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to form a part of the tenure within the local boundaries of which they are included; and, if they are not included within the local boundaries of any tenure, then to be a part of the estate within the local boundaries of which they are included; and, if they are not included within the local boundaries of any estate, then to be a part of such conterminous estate as the Collector, in whose district such conterminous estate is situated, shall, by an order under his seal and signature, declare.

Payable by instalments.

52. The amount apportioned to any estate or tenure, shall be payable in equal instalments on such days as the Lieutenant-Governor shall direct, provided that no instalment shall exceed four annas for every acre of land in respect of which the same is payable, and that not more than four instalments shall be payable in any one year.

Interest.

Interest shall be charged on the unpaid portion of the said amount from the date of the same becoming due until payment thereof at such rate not exceeding five per cent. per annum, as the Lieutenant-Governor shall from time to time determine.

Final order of apportionment.

53. On the completion of the apportionment the Collector shall make an order specifying the estates and tenures, and the several sums payable in respect thereof, the instalments of such sums and the dates on which the same are payable.

3. Recovery thereof.

Orders for payment.

54. The Collector shall, within thirty days from the final order of apportionment, make and serve for every estate therein mentioned an order, stating the amount with interest due in respect thereof, and that the same is payable to him, and the date or dates at which such amount or instalments thereof shall become payable to him.

Recovery from zemindars.

55. If such sum or any instalment thereof be not, pursuant to the said order, paid, the same with interest shall be recoverable as arrears of a demand under the provisions of Bengal Act VII of 1868 (to make further provision for the recovery of arrears of land revenue and public demands recoverable as arrears of land revenue).

From proprietors.

56. Every zemindar or proprietor to whom any sum or instalment thereof is payable under the said order, may recover the same with interest as aforesaid in the manner provided for the recovery of arrears of rent in respect of putnee tenures by the provisions of Clauses 2 and 3 of Section 8, Sections 9, 10, 14, 15, and Clauses 1, 2, and 3 of Section 17 of Regulation VIII of 1819, as amended by Bengal Act VIII of 1865; provided that the right or interest of any person holding from the proprietor of such tenure shall not be affected by any sale held under these provisions. A copy of the said order, certified under the name and seal of the Collector, shall be received in any suit for the recovery of the same as conclusive evidence that the amount was apportioned as therein mentioned, but shall not be evidence as to the existence of, or as to any right in the tenure to which the said amount has been apportioned.

PART VII.

From Deputy Commissioner, Seebsaugur, dated 21st idem.
From Offg. Deputy Commissioner of Cachar, dated 24th idem.
From Superintendent of Labor Transport, Calcutta, dated 3rd April 1873.

We have received the papers noted in the margin and considered them in reference to the main features of the Bill, which we have amended accordingly. But we have not had sufficient time to discuss the wording of each clause in detail.

We have made certain verbal and formal alterations in the Bill, and restored the wording of some of the provisions contained in Act II of 1870; for instance, we have struck out section 9 and substituted the provisions contained in section 114 of Act II of 1870.

Emigration.—In place of sections 10 and 11, we have retained section 64 of Act II of 1870, only adding thereto a provision that the Lieutenant-Governor may prohibit emigration if he has reason to believe that a political disturbance is likely to occur in any labor district. We have re-constructed section 13.

Garden-sirdars.—On this subject we have omitted from section 20 of the Bill the provision requiring a garden-sirdar to be furnished with a power of attorney. We have modified the provisions of section 24 which required coolies engaged by a garden-sirdar to be registered before the Magistrate of the district or sub-division of the district, by allowing them to be registered before the Magistrate of the district or sub-division of the district, through which they shall first pass on the road to their destination.

We have given power to the employer, or his representative in Calcutta, to cancel before the Superintendent of Emigration contracts made in the district by a garden-sirdar on payment of the coolies' travelling expenses.

We have struck out section 56 which enacts that a fine imposed on a garden-sirdar shall be recoverable from the employer.

Recruiters.—We have altered section 46, which required the Magistrate to satisfy himself by inquiry that the person to whom a recruiter's license had been granted, was not unfitted by character or otherwise to be a recruiter, before countersigning such license; and we have made it obligatory on the Magistrate to countersign, unless it appears to him that such person is unfit to be employed as a recruiter.

Transport.—We have amended section 71 of the Bill by providing that the penalty prescribed by it for delay in despatching a vessel shall not be incurred, if the delay is occasioned by any casualty of navigation. Section 79 required the master of any licensed vessel to report the arrival of his vessel to the Magistrate at every place at which a vessel is obliged to stop, and to await the answer of the Magistrate. This provision being indefinite, we have in place thereof substituted the following, namely that the master shall be bound to report to the Magistrate immediately on arrival, and to remain during not less than six hours of daylight. In lieu of the power of detention given to the Magistrate by section 82, which is indefinite, we have substituted a clear and distinct power of detention under certain circumstances, not exceeding five days; and we have reconstructed this section. We have also altered section 83 to make it accord with the section preceding.

Localities unfit for residence of laborers.—Being of opinion that the percentage of mortality, upon which the Lieutenant-Governor is enabled to act and declare an estate unfit for the residence of laborers under the terms of section 121, is by itself no certain or safe indication of unfitness for residence, we have considerably modified the section. The power conferred by it is very summary, and we have therefore limited its exercise to cases of unfitness arising from the neglect or default of owners or employers, whenever it may appear that the percentage of mortality mentioned in section 121 is due to that cause. The preceding section provides for two classes of cases in reference to estates—(1) unhealthiness and unfitness arising from condition, (2) unhealthiness and unfitness arising from situation. This section provides machinery for proper and searching inquiry. We have therefore thought it right to limit the exercise of summary powers by the Lieutenant-Governor to the cases mentioned above. We have framed a section in lieu of section 121, basing the action of the Lieutenant-Governor upon the percentage of mortality mentioned in section 121, and we have provided therein for specific inquiries to be made before the Lieutenant-Governor can declare an estate unfit for residence.

Contracts by time-expired laborers.—Chapter 17.—We have omitted this chapter, and we have not re-enacted section 117 of Act II of 1870; being of opinion, upon the information afforded us, that it is not desirable to interfere with the free action of laborers who have served out their time. As a result of this omission we have provided in section 106 that the inspectors are to make returns of all laborers employed on an estate, whether engaged under the Act or not.

Neglect of work and arrears of wages.—Chapter 18.—This chapter is entirely a new provision for the regulation of the relative duties of master and servant. We do not see that such a provision of law is specially necessary in the labor districts. It forms a branch of general law, and should not be dealt with in a law relating to a special subject. We have consequently omitted this chapter.

Chapter 19.—As chapters 17 and 18 have been struck out, this chapter has no application, and it is therefore omitted.

We proposed to insert by way of schedule to the Bill forms of contract and release instead of leaving them to be settled by the Executive Government, as is provided by section 5 of the Bill; but not having had sufficient time and information to frame them, we have allowed the provisions of the Bill in this respect to stand unaltered for the present.

In presenting this preliminary report, we beg to reserve to ourselves the liberty of further considering, altering, and amending the Bill as now amended and placed before the Council.

We recommend that the amended Bill and Act II of 1870 be published in the Calcutta Gazette in double columns, to show the changes proposed in the law.

RULES FOR ADVANCES FOR LAND IMPROVEMENTS UNDER ACT 26, OF 1871.

The 7th July 1873.—The Lieutenant-Governor is pleased to make the following rules under Section 18, Act XXVI of 1871, to which the sanction of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council has been obtained :—

ADVANCES of Rs. 50 and upwards under these rules may be made for such sums as the Governor-General in Council may from time to time allot to the local Government, or as may be otherwise at its disposal for the purpose of such advances.

2. Applications for advances under the Act shall be made in writing, and shall be on stamped paper of the value of eight annas. They shall be presented to the Collector, or to any officer authorized by the local Government to receive such applications.

3. Applications shall be presented in open court by the applicant in person, or by some person duly authorized by him in this behalf. Each application shall be signed by the person presenting it, and shall be attested by two witnesses in the presence of the officer to whom it is presented.

4. The application shall state—

1*st*.—The name of the applicant, his profession, parentage, tribe or caste, and residence.

2*nd*.—The amount of the advance applied for, and whether the applicant proposes to supplement it by any private capital; and, if so, to what extent.

3*rd*.—The nature and description of the work for which the advance is required.

4*th*.—The estimated total cost of the proposed work, and the probable period that will be occupied in its construction.

5*th*.—The village and local revenue sub-division in which the land to be benefited is situated; the position, character, and area of such land; and, should it consist in part or wholly of numbered and measured fields or plots, the numbers of the same.

6*th*.—The advantages, pecuniary or other, expected to result from the work.

7*th*.—The manner and extent to which the proposed work will affect (favorably or injuriously) adjoining or other lands.

8*th*.—The nature and extent of the applicant's rights or interests in the land to be benefited, or in any other land offered as security for the repayment of the advance; and whether there are any, and, if so what, incumbrances on such rights and interests.

9*th*.—The amount and number of the instalments by which the advance is to be repaid, principal and interest, and the dates on which these instalments are to be paid.

10*th*.—The security tendered for the repayment of the advance.

5. When the amount of the advance exceeds Rs. 500, the application shall be accompanied by a rough plan and estimate of the proposed work; and where it exceeds Rs. 5,000, by an accurate plan, specification, and estimate.

6. If the applicant is unable to furnish such plans, estimates, or specifications, the Collector may cause them to be prepared on behalf of the applicant. Before ordering such preparation, the Collector may, if he thinks fit, require the applicant to deposit such sum of money as may, in the opinion of the Collector, be sufficient to cover the cost, or he may call on the applicant to give security for the repayment of the same.

7. When a written application is found to have omitted any of the particulars required by Rule IV, the officer receiving it may either return it to the applicant for correction, or record on it the information that is wanting from the applicant's verbal statements. In either case, such addition to the application must be signed and attested as required by Rule III.

8. If the Collecter considers that there is primâ facie reason to believe that the application should be granted, he shall cause it to be entered in the register of applications; and if the application be for an advance of Rs. 250 and upwards, shall order a local inquiry to be made. When the application is for less than Rs. 250, a local inquiry need not be made, provided that the Collector has otherwise satisfied himself and recorded in writing the ground for his satisfaction that the grant is desirable, and that the allegations made in column 8, and the securities offered in column 10 of the application, are true and good. If he is of opinion that the application should not be granted, he shall reject it.

9. Local inquiries shall be conducted by the chief revenue officer of the district, or by any of his subordinates of not lower grade than a teshildar, sub-deputy, or similar official, to whom he may entrust the duty. In all cases in which the proposed advance exceeds Rs. 500, the officer charged with making the local inquiry shall, at least one week prior to the date on which he proposes to hold the same, post up in one or more conspicuous places in the village in which the land to be benefited by the proposed work is situated, a notice setting forth briefly the nature of the advance applied for, and the date on which he proposes to hold an inquiry on the spot as to the correctness of the facts alleged in the application. The person charged with posting such notice shall read it, or cause it to be read, publicly to such of the principal inhabitants of the village as may be present, and shall, on a copy of the notice (which he shall subsequently return to the officer issuing the notice) obtain the signatures of the village headmen, accountant, policemen, or other local officials or respectable inhabitants in acknowledgment of its having been publicly read.

10. No fees shall be charged for the service of this or any other notice where the proposed advance does not exceed Rs. 500. Where the advance exceeds Rs. 5,000, the service of any notice may be charged for at a rate not exceeding that required for the service of a civil process; and where the advance falls between these limits, it shall not exceed half this latter rate.

11. Prior to the local inquiry, the Collector shall cause to be tested, by comparison with his official records, all statements in the application which can be so tested, and cause to be stated in writing the extent to which such records agree with or differ from the application; and any such difference shall be specially investigated at the local inquiry, or specially discussed and disposed of by the Collector if he acts without a local inquiry. Where there may be no records to substantiate the allegations made in column 8 of the application, the Collector must certify accordingly.

12. On the day fixed by the notice, or, should the day first fixed be unavoidably postponed on that fixed by some subsequent notice, the officer charged with the duty shall proceed to the spot, and, after assembling the parties more immediately concerned, any local officials, and some of the respectable agriculturists of the place, he shall proceed to examine the site of the proposed work; he shall test the accuracy of each of the statements set forth in the application, and shall ascertain and record everything that may be necessary to enable the Collector to arrive at a correct decision.

13. The officer charged with the conduct of the local inquiry may summon, at the cost of the applicant, any person whose evidence may be considered necessary and whose attendance cannot otherwise be secured, and may exercise such powers as revenue courts possess for the purpose of summoning witnesses. A record shall be made by such officer of all objections made to the proposed work or advance, and of all evidence bearing on such objections.

14. When the applicant is a tenant, the additional proceeding required by Sections 7 to 13 of Act XXVI of 1871 must be completed.

15. On the completion of the inquiry, the officer by whom it was made shall forward to the Collector the whole of the papers connected therewith, together with his own opinion and recommendation.

16. On receipt of the papers the Collector may in any case, and when the proposed advance exceeds Rs. 5,000, shall obtain from the proper officer in the Bengal Department of Public Works in such manner as the local Government may direct, an opinion as to the feasibility, probable cost, and merits generally, from a professional point of view, of the proposed work. The Public Works officer required to report need not, unless the Collector requires him to do so, visit the site of the proposed work in cases where the advance is less than Rs. 2,000.

17. If, on a review of the result of the local inquiry and of the professional opinions (if any) that have been obtained, and after such further investigation as he may consider necessary, the Collector is not satisfied that the advance is desirable, and that it can be made under the Act and these rules, he shall reject the application, recording his reasons for the same.

18. If the Collector is satisfied that the advance may properly be made, he shall grant a certificate for the advance applied for, or for such smaller sum as he may consider sufficient for the purpose specified in the application, or shall report the case for the orders of higher authority, in accordance with the provisions of the next following rule.

19. If sufficient sums have been placed at the disposal of the Collector for the purpose, he may, with the sanction of the Commissioner of the division, grant a certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 500. The Commissioner of the division may, subject to the same condition, grant such certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 5,000. The Board of Revenue may, subject to the same condition, grant such certificate for an advance not exceeding Rs. 5,000. Certificates for advances exceeding Rs. 5,000, but not exceeding Rs. 10,000, will require the sanction of the local Government. If the proposed advance exceed Rs. 10,000, the previous sanction of the Governor-General in Council will be required.

20. When a certificate is granted, it shall be endorsed by the applicant to the effect that he has understood and agreed to all terms, and it shall be signed by him before, and be attested by, two witnesses. If any property, other than property of the applicant, is pledged or mortgaged as security for repayment of the advance, the certificate shall be similarly endorsed, signed, and attested by the sureties and witnesses; and if the applicant is a tenant without transferable interest in the land to be benefited, the certificate shall be signed by his landlord and attested by two witnesses other than the landlord.

In all cases in which land or property other than the land to be benefited is hypothecated as security for the repayment of the advance, the certificate must bear the stamp required for mortgages under the Stamp Act for the time being in force, and must in all cases in which, if the transaction were a private one, registration would be requisite, be registered under the registration law at the time in force.

21. The certificate shall be retained in the office of the Collector; one copy shall be given to the applicant; and when advances are made payable at any tehsil or other subordinate district treasury, a copy of such certificate shall be sent to such treasury. All certificates issued in any financial year shall bear a serial number.

22. No advance shall be made for an improvement which is likely, so far as can be ascertained, to injure the property of any parties who have not consented to its execution.

23. No project shall be divided. After an advance has been sanctioned and the whole thereof expended, a second advance for the same work shall not be made without the sanction of the local Government.

24. No advance shall be made unless the value of the security accepted exceeds by at least one-fourth the amount of the advance.

25. Subject to the orders of the local Government, the Collector shall make provision for the proper inspection of works in course of construction for which advances have been made, and for ascertaining and securing that such advances are duly applied to the purpose for which they were made.

26. The works, and any accounts kept thereat, shall be at all times open to the inspection of the Collector or other person authorized by him in that behalf.

27. In the case of advances exceeding Rs. 5,000 accounts shall be kept by the recipient of the advance in any form that the Collector may, with the sanction of superior authority, from time to time prescribe.

28. If at any time the Collector is satisfied that any person who has received an advance has failed to perform any of the conditions under which it was made, the Collector may, after recording in writing the grounds for the decision he has arrived at, and subject to the control of the Board of Revenue, proceed to recover from such person, or from any security for such person under the provisions of the Act, any sums which remain due, together with any interests payable thereon.

29. If it is shown that the borrower has wilfully, and without reasonable cause, omitted to apply the money to the purpose for which it was borrowed, any sums which he so failed to apply may be levied with interest with a penalty of 50 per cent.

30. All works for which advances are made in a lump sum shall be inspected and reported on within one month of the date on which their completion was directed in the certificate. All works for which advances are made by instalments shall be inspected and reported on before each instalment subsequent to the first is paid, and such inspection shall take place at latest within one month of the date when such instalment is payable.

31. Except with the special sanction of the local Government, no advance of any sum not exceeding Rs. 500 shall be made unless it be repayable with interest within seven years from the date fixed for the completion of the work; and no advance exceeding Rs. 500 shall be made without such sanction unless it be so repayable within twelve years. If in any case the proposed period of repayment exceeds twenty years, the sanction of the Government of India to the proposed advance must be obtained.

32. Applications for advances may be made to, and received by, the officer in charge of the sub-division in which the land on which the money is to be expended lies. In dealing with such applications, the sub-divisional officer shall be guided generally by the instructions contained in Rules I to XVI.

33. On the completion of his inquiry the sub-divisional officer shall report the case to the Collector in the following tabular form:—

(1). Name of applicant, and rights held by him. (2) Residence. (3) Nature and locality of work for which advance has been applied for. (4) Amount of advance applied for. (5) Period within which work is to be completed. (6) Instalments in which advance with interest is to be repaid. (7) Security tendered for repayment. (8) Remarks showing the results of any local inquiry or any other grounds on which the sub-divisional officer may have founded his opinion.

34. If the advance proposed is less than Rs. 250, the Collector will pass final orders; if more than Rs. 250, he will forward a copy of the sub-divisional officer's report with his own opinion to the Commissioner, who will then proceed to pass orders under Rule XIX.

35. The interest charged on advances shall for the present be one anna per annum on the rupee, or 6¼ per cent. per annum.

36. All the above rules are applicable, mutatis mutandis, to applications submitted by a number of persons collectively with a view to effecting works of general utility. In such cases the persons signing the application must make themselves individually as well as collectively responsible for the repayment of the advance.

37. All orders passed by a Commissioner, or by the Board of Revenue, sanctioning the payment of advances under the Act, must at once be communicated by them to the Accountant-General to enable him to admit the payments when made.

38. The number and date of such order should also be clearly cited by the Collector in the entry of the payment in the treasury returns, and the payee's receipt should be forwarded to Accountant-General as a voucher in support of the charge.

39. A separate record will be maintained in the Accountant-General's office of all advances made under the Act, and in order that interest at 5 per cent. may be added when due to the original amount of each advance, the Collector should, on the completion of every half-year after the date of the original advance, forward to the Accountant-General a special advice of the interest then falling due on the amount.

40. The necessary adjustment will then be made in the Accountant-General's office, and the Collector advised of the increased amount recorded in the Accountant-General's books against the payee of the advance.

In districts and places not brought under the provisions of Section 32, persons are not absolutely prohibited from carrying arms without a license; but any person not being exempted under the provisions of Section 27, so carrying arms, is liable to be disarmed by any Magistrate or police officer under Section 26, if, in the judgment of such Magistrate or police officer, it is dangerous to the public peace to allow such person to go armed or to carry arms.

24. In the districts noted in the margin, the Government has not insisted on the people taking out licenses to own or carry arms. In these districts the local officers are only required to act in the spirit of the instructions contained in the circular orders of this Government No. 1125, dated the 28th February 1868: that is to say, they will refrain from enforcing Section 26 of Act XXXI of 1860 except in special cases, in which there is really ground for believing that such a measure is necessary for the preservation of the public peace.

All the districts of the Presidency, Burdwan, Bhaugulpore, Cuttack, and Chota Nagpore Divisions.
Chumparun, Sarun, and Tirhoot, in the Patna Division.
Rajshahye, Maldah, and Pubna, in the Rajshahye Division.

25. In the districts noted in the margin, the Magistrates are bound to insist on licenses being taken out before arms are carried. The license must be in form D annexed.

All districts in the Assam, Cooch Behar, Dacca, and Chittagong Divisions.
Gya, Patna, and Shahabad, in the Patna Division.
Bogra, Rungpore, Dinagepore, and Moorshedabad, in the Rajshahye Division.

26. Any person in the districts named in rule 25, who has not been exempted under Section 27, and who is desirous of obtaining a license to carry arms, shall make an application in writing to the Magistrate in charge of the district or sub-division in which he may be residing. The application must be on an 8-anna stamp, and contain the following particulars:—

1. Name and address of applicant.
2. Period for which the license is required (in no case to exceed one year from date).
3. For what purpose the arms are required, and the places where the applicant proposes to reside during the currency of the license.
4. Description of arms for which a license is sought.
5. Whether the arms are to be carried only by the applicant or by his followers: if the latter, the number and description of arms to be carried by each follower.

27. Some of the districts named in rule 25 being situated on the frontier, the unrestricted right of possessing and carrying arms would afford facilities for selling them to the hostile tribes on the border, out of whose hands it is of the greatest importance that arms and ammunition should be kept. In others of the districts specified, the people are turbulent and prone to engage in affrays and riots, and it is necessary for this reason to put a check on the possession of arms by them.

28. The licenses given should be renewed year by year. The registration of these licenses will enable each Magistrate to ascertain the number of arms kept by the people in his jurisdiction.

29. Licenses to carry arms on a journey may be given to bonâ fide travellers in form E by the Magistrate of the district or sub-division (and in Calcutta by the Commissioner of Police), provided that, save for special reasons, no such license shall be current for more than a fortnight beyond the time required for the ordinary course of post between the place at which the license is granted and that to which the applicant is travelling.

30. Licenses to sell arms are, in the province of Assam and the districts of Purneah, Dinagepore, Rungpore, Tipperah, Chittagong, Dacca, Backergunge, Mymensing, Sylhet, and Cachar, and the Cooch Behar Division, only to be given to those persons to whom a license to transport arms, &c., would be given by the Commissioner under rule 16 above. Such licenses will be very charily given in these districts after reference to the Commissioner, and nowhere save at sudder stations. The fee for a license to sell arms is ten rupees.

31. Under Sections 14 and 15 of the Act, the Lieutenant-Governor has authorized District and Assistant Superintendents to enter the premises of persons licensed to manufacture or deal in arms and ammunition, and to inspect the books kept by them in the course of their trade.

32. The licenses of all dealers in arms, &c., must contain a stipulation that they will abide by the rules above laid down under penalty of forfeiting their license. They must also undertake to enter in their books, besides the purchaser's name, the name of his father (for native purchasers), his place of residence, and the police station within whose jurisdiction he resides. Licenses granted under Section 7 of the Act to sell arms should bear a note drawing attention to the necessity of the dealer's procuring also an import or transit pass or both before he can import or transport arms for sale. The licenses of dealers in Calcutta should contain a stipulation that they will sell to dealers residing out of Calcutta only when they produce a pass in form C from the Commissioner of the Division where they reside, and that they will enter in their registers the particulars of each such pass.

RULES FOR THE GRANT OF LICENSES FOR CARRYING AND SELLING ARMS.

Calcutta, the 22nd July 1873.

BY the orders of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council in the Home Department, No. 1398, dated 12th February 1866, the attention of local Governments was drawn to the fact that much difficulty was experienced, not only by the public, but by local officers, in ascertaining the state of the law as regards arms in any particular part of the country, and directions were given that the several local Governments should notify in the official Gazette, at the commencement of each year, what Sections of the Arms Act are in force in each part of the territory under their respective jurisdictions, and should from time to time intimate any changes in its application. In accordance with these orders, notifications have annually appeared in the Calcutta Gazette setting out the application of the Act as affecting Bengal. It has now, however, been brought to the Lieutenant-Governor's notice that these notifications as last published might conveniently have incorporated the rules laid down by the Government of India for the importation and transportation of arms in Bengal; and it has been suggested that it would be desirable to publish in connected form these rules and a summary of the other existing orders in regard to the grant of licenses for carrying and selling arms as they now stand. His Honor has accordingly been pleased to direct the publication of the following series of rules, containing all the orders now in force, in supersession of all former notifications on the subject.

2. The provisions of Act XXXI, 1860 (relating to the manufacture, importation, and sale of arms and ammunition, and for regulating the right to keep and use the same, and to give power of disarming in certain cases), as continued in force and amended by Act VI (the Arms' Act Continuance Act), 1866, restricting (1) the possession of cannon, howitzers, and mortars; (2) the manufacture, repair, sale, or (3) importation of arms and ammunition; and (4) the carrying of arms, are in force throughout the territories subject to the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

1. Sections 2 to 4, Act XXXI, 1860.
2. Sections 5 to 16, Act XXXI, 1860.
3. Sections 17 to 19, Act XXXI, 1860.
4. Sections 26 to 30, Act XXXI, 1860, as modified by Sections 2 and 3, Act VI of 1866.

3. The powers of seizure, search, and arrest in certain cases, defined in Sections 20, 21, 25, and 31, Act XXXI, 1860, are still possessed by the several authorities in whom the law vests them.

The following are the Rules laid down under the Act for the importation and transport of arms, &c., the grant of licenses for carrying arms, and for the sale of arms and ammunition in Bengal.

4. Under the provisions of Sections 17 and 22 of Act XXXI of 1860, the importation or transport of all arms and ammunition of the descriptions mentioned in Sections 5, 6, and 25 of the aforesaid Act* into or through the territorities under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is prohibited, unless covered by a license or pass.

* Viz., fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads, lead, sulphur, saltpetre, percussion caps, gunpowder, or other ammunition.

5. Persons desirous of importing arms and ammunition into any district in the Lower Provinces of Bengal shall apply for a license to the Commissioner of the division† in which the arms and ammunition are to be exposed for sale, kept, or made use of. The application must be in writing, and must contain full information on the following points:—

† In Calcutta to the Commissioner of Police.

1*st*.—Purpose for which required.

2*nd*.—Probable cost of each weapon.

3*rd*.—Port at which the goods will be imported.

4*th*.—District in which the arms and ammunition are to be used, kept, or sold.

6. Commissioners, on receipt of applications in the prescribed form, are authorized to grant licenses according to form A, at their discretion, for the importation of arms, and, in reasonable quantities, of ammunition.

7. Licenses for the importation of fire-arms are not to be granted, except the Commissioner to whom the application is made is satisfied that the weapons are required for bonâ fide sporting purposes.

8. The Commissioner should not grant licenses for the importation of fire-arms in large quantities without reference, through the regular official channel, to the Government of Bengal. (N.B.—A fresh license must be taken out for each importation.)

9. A copy of all licenses must be forwarded to the chief police officer at the port at which the goods are to be landed. If the license authorizes the importation of any considerable quantity of fire-arms, a copy of the orders of Government sanctioning the importation must also be sent.

10. The Collector of Customs is not to deliver any arms or ammunition unless protected by a pass from the chief police officer at the port where the goods have been landed.

11. No licenses or passes are to be given for rifles of a military pattern, or of patterns easily convertible into military weapons, unless the consignees produce specific orders from English gentlemen for the weapons.

12. The Collector of Customs shall be responsible for seeing that the arms imported answer to the description given in the pass; and in case of doubt, shall detain the arms and refer the point for the orders of Government.

13. The consignee, on arrival of the arms and ammunition, must produce his license to the chief police officer of the port, upon which he is to receive from the said officer a pass in form B for the delivery of such arms and ammunition as may be mentioned in the license.

14. If the arms and ammunition are to be removed from the port, the police officer, at the time of granting the pass for delivery from the Custom House, must grant a pass in form C for the transmission of the said goods to the place to which the importation is sanctioned in the license, and he will forward a copy of the pass to the Magistrate of the district in which the said place is situated.

15. The arms and ammunition must be taken direct from the port to the place entered in the pass, and they are not to be sold or made use of at any intermediate place.

16. Any person desirous of transporting any arms or ammunition of the descriptions marginally noted into any portion of the territories under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or from one district or town in the said territories to another district or town, must apply for a pass to the Commissioner of the Division, specifying the district or town into which he proposes to transport the goods. The application must be made in writing, and must contain full information as to the quantity and description of all the goods.

Fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads; lead, sulphur, saltpetre, gunpowder, or other ammunition.

17. The Commissioner, on receipt of an application under the preceding rule, may grant a pass according to form C, and subject to the conditions and restrictions laid down in paragraph 15. (A duplicate of this pass should be forwarded in each case to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta.)

18. When arms or ammunition are brought into a district protected by a pass issued in accordance with the preceding rules, the person in charge of the goods must, immediately on arrival, deliver the pass to the Magistrate in charge of the district or town, whose duty it will be to ascertain that the arms and ammunition correspond with the entries in the pass, or that any excess, deficiency, or discrepancy is satisfactorily explained.

19. Any person transporting arms in violation of the preceding rules 4 to 18 will on conviction be liable to the penalties prescribed by Section 23 of Act XXXI of 1860.

20. The following fees are to be charged for the issue of licenses and passes under the foregoing rules:—

PROCLAMATION.

The 4th July 1873.—Whereas in the district of Pubna, owing to attempts of zemindars to enhance rents and combinations of ryots to resist the same, large bodies of men have assembled at several places in a riotous and tumultuous manner, and serious breaches of the peace have occurred, THIS is very gravely to warn all concerned that while on the one hand the Government will protect the people from all force and extortion, and the zemindars must assert any claims they may have by legal means only, on the other hand the Government will firmly repress all violent and illegal action on the part of the ryots, and will strictly bring to justice all who offend against the law, to whatever class they belong.

The ryots and others who have assembled are hereby required to disperse, and to prefer peaceably and quietly any grievances they may have. If they so come forward, they will be patiently listened to; but the officers of Government cannot listen to rioters; on the contrary, they will take severe measures against them.

It is asserted by the people who have combined to resist the demands of the zemindars that they are to be the ryots of Her Majesty the Queen, and of Her only. These people, and all who listen to them, are warned that the Government cannot and will not interfere with the rights of property as secured by law; that they must pay what is legally due from them to those to whom it is legally due. It is perfectly lawful to unite in a peaceable manner to resist any excessive demands of the zemindars, but it is not lawful to unite to use violence and intimidation.

RESOLUTION.

JUDICIAL DEPARTMENT.

JUDICIAL.

Calcutta, the 8th July 1873.

1. THE Lieutenant-Governor directs that the accompanying extract from a letter lately written by a public officer, with regard to the recent order prescribing office hours, be circulated with the following remarks.

2. The letter is that of an officer who used (he says) to go to office at 12-30 P.M. It quite confirms the Lieutenant-Governor's view that the practice has too often been to give only half the day to court and office work, and that the worst half. His Honor considers that the term breakfast is wholly misapplied to the meal between 11 A.M. and noon alluded to. It is not breakfast, but the mid-day meal, which divides the first and the second part of the active day. The writer is a civil servant of considerable standing; and if he has come to his time of life, as he says, in the exercise of a habit which prevents his going to office before 12-30 P.M. without constitutional disturbance, it is evident that he must have lived in times and under circumstances which admitted of such a custom being very habitual.

3. With reference to such a disclosure, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks it necessary to repeat that officers, European and Native, whose habits are those of the officer alluded to, must either wholly change their habits in regard to the mid-day meal, or adopt the plan which His Honor has suggested of dividing the working day into two parts, in accordance, as he believes, with the ordinary manners of the country.

4. Many statements in the public prints and elsewhere, as also disclosures in cases brought to light by the High Court, tend to show that the order which has been passed about office hours was very much wanted; and His Honor trusts that it is strictly attended to, and that supervising officers see that it is so.

Extract from letter referred to in para. 1 of the Resolution.

PARA. 1.—* * * * I have now introduced the change in accordance with the imperative order of the Lieutenant-Governor, which appears to allow no discretion to any magisterial officer, whatever his years or experience, if he be not fortunate enough to be a district Magistrate-Collector; but I find the native public dissatisfied with the alteration, while it causes me bodily discomfort owing to habits which cannot be suddenly broken through at my time of life without a certain amount of constitutional disturbance. The objection taken to the change by the native public, as represented by the mooktears, is that the usual breakfast hour of their clients is between 11 A.M. and noon, and that many of them having long distances to come, are unable to appear before noon or 1 P.M. * * * *

The mean barometer, as likewise the dry and wet bulb thermometer means, are derived from the twenty-four hourly observations made during the day.

The dew-point is computed with the Greenwich constants. The figures in column 10 represent the humidity of the air, the complete saturation of which being taken at unity. The receiver of the lower rain gauge is 1½ feet, and that of the anemometer 70 feet 10 inches above the level of the ground. The velocity of wind, as indicated by Robinson's anemometer, is registered from noon to noon.

N.B.—The opening up of the Chandballee route tells against the Kendraparah Canal in the matter of passenger traffic. I fancy quite as many passengers now go by Chandballee as by False Point I can get no satisfactory reason for the falling off of traffic generally in the canal.

* The collection of the same month in last year Rs. 1,101-14-6.

† The corresponding return for May 1872 shews a decrease of 105-14-11 on the private trade and an increase of Rs. 92-9-4 on Government stores, &c., giving a decrease of Rs. 13 only on the total.
The decrease in private trade is due to a general falling off in traffic of all descriptions. The comparison with last year is not strictly correct, the necessary corrections are explained in accompanying letter.

BYE-LAWS OF THE MINT BULLION DEPOT.

External.

All tenders of bullion and coin are to specify the number of boxes of silver or gold, and are to be numbered in the order of delivery into the bullion depôt, when all the boxes specified in a tender are brought in.

2. When a portion only is brought in, the tender is to be numbered after the delivery of the number of boxes specified is completed.

3. The bullion and coin tendered is to be delivered by the authorized agent, who will see to the locking up of the boxes in the strong-room or vault of the depôt.

4. The tenders are to be dealt with according to priority of numbers, if the authorized agent be in attendance; if not, the next in succession, having an agent in attendance, is to be taken in hand. The order of succession only applies to silver taken out for one species of treatment, either melting or cutting.

5. Importers sending two or more invoices of silver with only one tender are, however, to understand, that their agents alone will be responsible for keeping the silver belonging to each invoice separate; but if the silver of each invoice be separately tendered, every care will be taken to keep them separate.

6. Bullion and coin, after having been taken out of the boxes, is to be weighed into and out of the melting room or the cutting room, as the case may be.

7. Importers are distinctly to understand that their agents are to satisfy themselves as to the accuracy of the weighments of their bullion in the bullion depôt both before and after melting and cutting. The Bullion Clerk merely takes down the weighment for the Mint Master's satisfaction. If the importers' agent should observe anything, either in the beam or the method of weighing, that he disapproves of, he should make it known at once, and every facility will be rendered him to make the necessary corrections; so that importers must look only to their agents for explanation, in case of any discrepancy that may occur between the invoice and the Mint weighments.

8. Registry of Bullion.—Importers' bullion, after having been melted or cut, and when ready for registry, will be taken into the bullion office; and after the bullion has been registered, importers' agents, durwans, &c., are to go out, through the Mint gate at the Warder's lodge.

9. The spillage and cut chips resulting from the silver bullion of importers is to be carefully worked up, if possible once a fortnight, by the establishment of the bullion depôt, at the risk and responsibility, and on behalf of the importers to each of whom an account showing the value thereof, obtained by proportional distribution of the whole, is to be rendered according to Form II, and the amount paid by cash or cheque on the Bank of Bengal.

10. Passes.—All passes for silver and gold, required to be sent out of the bullion depôt, whether gold spillage from melting room or bullion rejected by the Mint previous to registry, or withdrawn by importers, are to be made out by the Bullion Clerk and sent to the Mint Master for his signature, and then delivered to the importers' agents for the endorsement of the importers; after which the bullion will be passed out through the Mint gate at the Warder's lodge.

11. Importers are not required, in addition to the one per mille charged by the Mint, to pay any other charges, such as for gunny bags or cooly hire, after the silver has been once taken into the strong-room. Gold spillage, broken pots, &c., are of course to be taken away at the expense of the importers.

12. Coolies for removing and opening boxes, and removing bullion from place to place, will be engaged by the Mint, and arrangements made for having three coolies in attendance upon every lakh of bullion that may be operated on.

13. Importers may have a guard at the strong-room door during working hours if they choose, as their treasure is in deposit at their risk.

14. Bullion or coin once rejected by the Mint as brittle shall not again be received for the purpose of being melted, or cut, for coinage without the special authority of the Mint Master.

(FINANCIAL—MILITARY FUND.)
No. 223.

INDIA OFFICE,
London, the 15*th May* 1873.

To His Excellency the Right Hon'ble the Governor-General of India in Council.

MY LORD,—I have considered in Council your Military letter No. 41, dated 21st February 1873, referring for my decision a question whether Officers, who have already made provision for their wives, may subscribe to the new Pension Fund for their children only.

2. Major-General Hannyngton states that the contributions to this Fund for children are independent of those for wives, and that consequently no objection exists to allowing Officers who are placed in such circumstances to subscribe as unmarried members in the same manner as widowers.

3. The privilege of subscribing to the Indian Service Family Pension Fund for children only, may therefore be granted to all Officers who have entered the Service since the date of the closing of the Military Funds to new subscribers, and have made other provision for their wives.

4. In such cases, subscribers must pay the unmarried rates of subscription of their class as laid down in Table VI, as well as the birth, donation, and the ordinary subscription for each child as laid down in Tables V and VII of the Regulations.

I have, &c.,
(Sd.) ARGYLL.

RULES FOR THE GRANT OF LICENSES FOR CARRYING AND SELLING ARMS.

Calcutta, the 22nd July 1873.

BY the orders of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council in the Home Department, No. 1398, dated 12th February 1866, the attention of local Governments was drawn to the fact that much difficulty was experienced, not only by the public, but by local officers, in ascertaining the state of the law as regards arms in any particular part of the country, and directions were given that the several local Governments should notify in the official Gazette, at the commencement of each year, what Sections of the Arms Act are in force in each part of the territory under their respective jurisdictions, and should from time to time intimate any changes in its application. In accordance with these orders, notifications have annually appeared in the Calcutta Gazette setting out the application of the Act as affecting Bengal. It has now, however, been brought to the Lieutenant-Governor's notice that these notifications as last published might conveniently have incorporated the rules laid down by the Government of India for the importation and transportation of arms in Bengal; and it has been suggested that it would be desirable to publish in connected form these rules and a summary of the other existing orders in regard to the grant of licenses for carrying and selling arms as they now stand. His Honor has accordingly been pleased to direct the publication of the following series of rules, containing all the orders now in force, in supersession of all former notifications on the subject.

2. The provisions of Act XXXI, 1860 (relating to the manufacture, importation, and sale of arms and ammunition, and for regulating the right to keep and use the same, and to give power of disarming in certain cases), as continued in force and amended by Act VI (the Arms' Act Continuance Act), 1866, restricting (1) the possession of cannon, howitzers, and mortars; (2) the manufacture, repair, sale, or (3) importation of arms and ammunition; and (4) the carrying of arms, are in force throughout the territories subject to the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

1. Sections 2 to 4, Act XXXI, 1860.
2. Sections 5 to 16, Act XXXI, 1860.
3. Sections 17 to 19, Act XXXI, 1860.
4. Sections 26 to 30, Act XXXI, 1860, as modified by Sections 2 and 3, Act VI of 1866.

3. The powers of seizure, search, and arrest in certain cases, defined in Sections 20, 21, 25, and 31, Act XXXI, 1860, are still possessed by the several authorities in whom the law vests them.

The following are the Rules laid down under the Act for the importation and transport of arms, &c., the grant of licenses for carrying arms, and for the sale of arms and ammunition in Bengal.

4. Under the provisions of Sections 17 and 22 of Act XXXI of 1860, the importation or transport of all arms and ammunition of the descriptions mentioned in Sections 5, 6, and 25 of the aforesaid Act* into or through the territories under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is prohibited, unless covered by a license or pass.

* Viz. fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads; lead, sulphur, saltpetre, percussion caps, gunpowder, or other ammunition.

5. Persons desirous of importing arms and ammunition into any district in the Lower Provinces of Bengal shall apply for a license to the Commissioner of the division† in which the arms and ammunition are to be exposed for sale, kept, or made use of. The application must be in writing, and must contain full information on the following points:—

† In Calcutta to the Commissioner of Police.

1*st*.—Purpose for which required.

2*nd*.—Probable cost of each weapon.

3*rd*.—Port at which the goods will be imported.

4*th*.—District in which the arms and ammunition are to be used, kept, or sold.

6. Commissioners, on receipt of applications in the prescribed form, are authorized to grant licenses according to form A, at their discretion, for the importation of arms, and, in reasonable quantities, of ammunition.

7. Licenses for the importation of fire-arms are not to be granted, except the Commissioner to whom the application is made is satisfied that the weapons are required for bonâ fide sporting purposes.

8. The Commissioner should not grant licenses for the importation of fire-arms in large quantities without reference, through the regular official channel, to the Government of Bengal. (N.B.—A fresh license must be taken out for each importation.)

9. A copy of all licenses must be forwarded to the chief police officer at the port at which the goods are to be landed. If the license authorizes the importation of any considerable quantity of fire-arms, a copy of the orders of Government sanctioning the importation must also be sent.

10. The Collector of Customs is not to deliver any arms or ammunition unless protected by a pass from the chief police officer at the port where the goods have been landed.

11. No licenses or passes are to be given for rifles of a military pattern, or of patterns easily convertible into military weapons, unless the consignees produce specific orders from English gentlemen for the weapons.

12. The Collector of Customs shall be responsible for seeing that the arms imported answer to the description given in the pass; and in case of doubt, shall detain the arms and refer the point for the orders of Government.

13. The consignee, on arrival of the arms and ammunition, must produce his license to the chief police officer of the port, upon which he is to receive from the said officer a pass in form B for the delivery of such arms and ammunition as may be mentioned in the license.

14. If the arms and ammunition are to be removed from the port, the police officer, at the time of granting the pass for delivery from the Custom House, must grant a pass in form C for the transmission of the said goods to the place to which the importation is sanctioned in the license, and he will forward a copy of the pass to the Magistrate of the district in which the said place is situated.

15. The arms and ammunition must be taken direct from the port to the place entered in the pass, and they are not to be sold or made use of at any intermediate place.

16. Any person desirous of transporting any arms or ammunition of the descriptions marginally noted into any portion of the territories under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or from one district or town in the said territories to another district or town, must apply for a pass to the Commissioner of the Division specifying the district or town into which he proposes to transport the goods. The application must be made in writing, and must contain full information as to the quantity and description of all the goods.

Fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads; lead, sulphur, saltpetre, gunpowder, or other ammunition.

17. The Commissioner, on receipt of an application under the preceding rule, may grant a pass according to form C, and subject to the conditions and restrictions laid down in paragraph 15. (A duplicate of this pass should be forwarded in each case to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta.)

18. When arms or ammunition are brought into a district protected by a pass issued in accordance with the preceding rules, the person in charge of the goods must, immediately on arrival, deliver the pass to the Magistrate in charge of the district or town, whose duty it will be to ascertain that the arms and ammunition correspond with the entries in the pass, or that any excess, deficiency, or discrepancy is satisfactorily explained.

19. Any person transporting arms in violation of the preceding rules, 4 to 18, will on conviction be liable to the penalties prescribed by Section 23 of Act XXXI of 1860.

20. The following fees are to be charged for the issue of licenses and passes under the foregoing rules:—

	Rs.	As.	P.
For each license in form A for permission to import arms and ammunition ...	5	0	0
For each pass in form B for the delivery of arms and ammunition from the Custom House	1	0	0
For each transport pass in form C	5	0	0

21. The foregoing rules do not apply to arms and ammunition imported or transported by any person in small quantities for his own private use; but a license or pass may be granted for such arms and ammunition at the discretion of the officer to whom the application is preferred.

22. Section 32 of Act XXXI of 1860, prohibiting absolutely the possession of any arms or ammunition without a license, is not now in force in any district of Bengal, inasmuch as no district is at present disarmed under that Section.

23. In districts and places not brought under the provisions of Section 32, persons are not absolutely prohibited from carrying arms without a license; but any person not being exempted under the provisions of Section 27, so carrying arms, is liable to be disarmed by any Magistrate or police officer under Section 26, if, in the judgment of such Magistrate or police officer, it is dangerous to the public peace to allow such person to go armed or to carry arms.

24. In the districts noted in the margin, the Government has not insisted on the people taking out licenses to own or carry arms. In these districts the local officers are only required to act in the spirit of the instructions contained in the circular orders of this Government No. 1125, dated the 28th February 1868: that is to say, they will refrain from enforcing Section 26 of Act XXXI of 1860, except in special cases in which there is really ground for believing that such a measure is necessary for the preservation of the public peace.

All the districts of the Presidency, Burdwan, Bhaugulpore, Cuttack, and Chota Nagpore Divisions.
Chumparun, Sarun, and Tirhoot, in the Patna Division.
Rajshahye, Maldah, and Pubna, in the Rajshahye Division.

25. In the districts noted in the margin, the Magistrates are bound to insist on licenses being taken out before arms are carried. The license must be in form D annexed.

All districts in the Assam, Cooch-Behar, Dacca, and Chittagong Divisions.
Bogra, Rungpore, Dinagepore, and Moorshedabad, in the Rajshahye Division.

26. Any person in the districts named in Rule 25, who has not been exempted under Section 27, and who is desirous of obtaining a license to carry arms, shall make an application in writing to the Magistrate in charge of the district or sub-division in which he may be residing. The application must be on an 8-anna stamp, and contain the following particulars:—

1. Name and address of applicant.
2. Period for which the license is required (in no case to exceed one year from date).
3. For what purpose the arms are required, and the places where the applicant proposes to reside during the currency of the license.
4. Description of arms for which a license is sought.
5. Whether the arms are to be carried only by the applicant or by his followers: if the latter, the number and description of arms to be carried by each follower.

27. Some of the districts named in Rule 25 being situated on the frontier, the unrestricted right of possessing and carrying arms would afford facilities for selling them to the hostile tribes on the border, out of whose hands it is of the greatest importance that arms and ammunition should be kept. In others of the districts specified, the people are turbulent and prone to engage in affrays and riots, and it is necessary for this reason to put a check on the possession of arms by them.

28. The licenses given should be renewed year by year. The registration of these licenses will enable each Magistrate to ascertain the number of arms kept by the people in his jurisdiction.

29. Licenses to carry arms on a journey may be given to bonâ fide travellers in form E by the Magistrate of the district or sub-division (and in Calcutta by the Commissioner of Police), provided that, save for special reasons, no such license shall be current for more than a fortnight beyond the time required for the ordinary course of post between the place at which the license is granted and that to which the applicant is travelling.

30. Licenses to sell arms are, in the province of Assam and the districts of Purneah, Dinagepore, Rungpore, Tipperah, Chittagong, Dacca, Backergunge, Mymensing, Sylhet, and Cachar, and the Cooch-Behar Division, only to be given to those persons to whom a license to transport arms, &c., would be given by the Commissioner under Rule 16 above. Such licenses will be very charily given in these districts after reference to the Commissioner, and nowhere save at sudder stations. The fee for a license to sell arms is ten rupees.

31. Under Sections 14 and 15 of the Act, the Lieutenant-Governor has authorized District and Assistant Superintendents to enter the premises of persons licensed to manufacture or deal in arms and ammunition, and to inspect the books kept by them in the course of their trade.

32. The licenses of all dealers in arms, &c., must contain a stipulation that they will abide by the rules above laid down under penalty of forfeiting their license. They must also undertake to enter in their books, besides the purchaser's name, the name of his father (for native purchasers), his place of residence, and the police station within whose jurisdiction he resides. Licenses granted under Section 7 of the Act to sell arms should bear a note drawing attention to the necessity of the dealer's procuring also an import or transit pass or both before he can import or transport arms for sale. The licenses of dealers in Calcutta should contain a stipulation that they will sell to dealers residing out of Calcutta only when they produce a pass in form C from the Commissioner of the Division where they reside, and that they will enter in their registers the particulars of each such pass.

EMIGRATION TO THE LABOR DISTRICTS.

The Hon'ble the Acting Advocate-General moved that the time prescribed for the presentation of the Report of the Select Committee on the Bill to amend the law relating to the emigration of laborers to the Districts of Assam, Cachar, and Sylhet, and to regulate contract labor and service, be extended for one month. He regretted to say that the Committee had not been able to complete their report. The Bill was in progress, the whole matter had been carefully revised, but it would require a little further time to complete the labors of the Committee. In addition to their labors on the Bill referred to them, there were other new matters which required consideration; and for the purpose of devoting their attention to those subjects, he asked for this further time.

His Honor the President said, before this motion was passed he wished to say one word in order to ask the Members of the Select Committee and the Council to give their serious consideration to a question radically affecting the Bill, which had been raised in a correspondence between the learned Advocate-General and himself. His Honor was very far from asserting that the proposition submitted by himself in a very rude and rough form was the right thing to do. But at the same time he might venture to say that the more he heard and the more he had seen of the opinions of those most competent to form an opinion, the more he was inclined to think that there was something in the proposition which he had submitted for the consideration of the Committee. He was very much impressed with the belief that it was not expedient in any manner to check emigration to districts where labor was scarce. In some parts of India the population was overcrowded, which led to considerable evils, unhealthiness, and disease: on the other hand, in other parts of India, and notably in the Provinces of Assam and Cachar, there was a want of population, and it was the supply of population which would develop the growth of produce and the sanitary condition of the country, and produce wealth, health, and contentment in future generations. His own inclination was to say, God forbid that we should do anything to check emigration to these districts; on the contrary, we should promote emigration to the utmost extent of our power. Well, that being so, it seemed to His Honor that if there were a question whether we had over-legislated in restriction of emigration, or whether, perhaps, not having over-legislated, matters had so far improved that in future the area and scope of legislation might be diminished, that was an important matter, and one which ought not to be lightly passed over. It appeared to His Honor that we ought not to pass a new Bill without fully considering a question of that kind. Although his own personal experience was comparatively small, looking to the replies that had been received from some of the most experienced men, something was to be said for the proposition that had been made. Hon'ble Members who had studied the replies received from merchants and planters interested in the subject, would see that a great deal had been said in favor of the proposition.

Then our position was this: Hon'ble Members in the Council, and he as head of the Government, were bound impartially to look to the interests of all the parties concerned, to the interests of the natives of the country, to the interests of the planters and the enterprising Europeans developing the growth of the tea industry. But His Honor himself took this view, that the planters were persons who were very competent to take care of their own interests by their knowledge and their power of making themselves heard. The coolies, on the other hand, were not so competent; they were not so competent to make themselves heard in this Council. We had heard the views of the planters, but had not had an opportunity of hearing the views of the coolies. As head of the Government and President of this Council, His Honor was, he felt, praticularly charged with the duty of looking after the interests of the cooly. Looking, then, to the interests of the cooly as well as to those of the planter, he thought it might be a question whether in the interests of both parties a proposition for a great relaxation of these restrictive laws might not be worthy of consideration. While we had done a great deal to protect the cooly in regard to recruiting, the voyage, and other matters; while we had imposed restrictions on the planters; whilst we had protected the cooly from harm in various ways, we had also imposed on the coolies serving under contract in the tea districts penal laws of extreme stringency—to such a point, that the cooly who was conveyed to the labor districts under those laws, became legally and practically a slave: he was for three years legally and indisputably a slave. His Honor did not use the word in a bad sense. The cooly was compelled to labor to the end of his term as a man not free and his own master, and in that sense was a slave. It was true that he generally did serve under a good and reasonable master, but he was not free. He was bound down for three years, not only by the terms of his contract and by penal laws, but by physical subjection to his master, who, on the cooly's attempting to run away, could seize him and bring him back to work. In a country where the tea plantations were in the midst of jungles, that was an enormous power given to planters over labourers—a power which had sometimes been abused, though not in the great majority of cases. It was a power which, speaking technically, reduced the cooly to the position of a slave. Moreover, under the existing law, if the cooly contracted again in any shape, he again came under the penal laws and became a slave. His Honor must say for himself that he held that above all things the blessings of freedom were great blessings. He much disliked this system of bondage. He very much inclined to doubt whether the advantages the cooly gained were not more than counterbalanced by the penal laws by which he was subject to this bondage. It appeared, then, to him to be particularly in the interest of the cooly that a modification and diminution of those restrictive laws were suggested. If he was in any degree right that a mitigation of the law would be advantageous for the cooly, he was met by the planters, who were the best judges of their own interests, and who had experience to gude them. A large number of these planters did think that in their interests and in the interests of the coolies it was right to diminish the restrictions now imposed by law. We had not had time to receive replies from many Assam planters, but we had received many from Cachar. Looking to the replies received from Cachar, His Honor believed that the move in the direction of freedom was accepted by the planters as a move in the right direction. As far as Cachar was concerned, he was much inclined to think that we might do away with the restrictive provisions. Although the proposition submitted by him was his personal suggestion, it had now taken a phase which rendered it, he ventured to say, worthy of the attention of the Select Committee and the Council. He had expressed his views in a temperate manner; he had not pledged his mind to those views; he was prepared to alter them if on the whole there seemed reason for doing so; and he felt confident that his colleagues who had begun with the other opinion would also take a similar course. He hoped that this question would be thoroughly discussed before we came to a final conclusion on the Bill. He trusted it might be a conclusion which would be satisfactory to all parties.

The motion was then agreed to.

HOWRAH LIGHTING-RATE.

The Hon'ble Mr. Dampier said, when he had the honor of presenting to the Council the report of the Select Committee on the Bill for providing for the further lighting of the town of Howrah, the Council determined that it should be published, and that time should be given to those concerned to make any representations they might think proper; since that date but one petition had been received from the Howrah People's Association, and that body expressed itself to be generally satisfied with the report and with the way the Bill had been laid before the Council by the Select Committee. There was, however, a memorial which had previously reached His Honor the President, but which had not yet been discussed by the Council, and as that memorial went the length of objecting to the Bill altogether and praying for its withdrawal, it would be necessary for him to examine such parts of the memorial as concerned the business with which the Council had to do. There was a great deal in this memorial which did not affect the business of this Council, and with which therefore he should not take up the time of Hon'ble Members. The Executive Government would no doubt profit by the suggestions made and the care given by the memorialists to looking into the administration of the municipal affairs of Howrah generally, and would pass such orders as might be necessary.

To clear the way, it would be well to state the legal position in which the Bill now existed. As the law stood, the Municipal Commissioners of Howrah, if they could get the sanction of the Lieutenant-Governor, might light every part of their town with gas; they might devote to the expenses of such lighting every pice of the general rate which could be levied; or they might light half the town with gas and leave the other half uncared for. But, whatever else they might do, they were obliged to make every rate-payer in the town contribute proportionably to the expense of lighting by gas, whether he benefited by such lighting or not. It would hardly be argued that that was a satisfactory state of law. The object of the Bill was to provide a remedy, and in considering its provisions it would be well to divide them into two parts—first, those affecting the portion of the town already lighted with gas; and secondly, those which related to future possible extensions under the powers proposed to be given. Mr. Dampier would begin by accepting the statement of the memorialists in paragraph 2 of the memorial, that the primary object of the Bill was "to find money for the existing contract between the Municipality and the Oriental Gas Company." Paragraph 3 went into the merits of the contract, but that was one of the points which did not touch the business before the Council. The contract had been made; that was a fact with which the Bill had to deal. No modification of the terms of the Bill, not even its withdrawal, could cancel the contract; money must be found to meet it; it must be found for the next fifteen years; and the only question was, what was the most equitable mode of finding the money.

Again, Mr. Dampier accepted the statement of the memorialists in paragraphs 12 and 13—

"The gaslight, your memorialists submit respectfully, has been introduced chiefly in those parts of the town where there are Government or Railway buildings, or which are inhabited by European residents. * * * * * * The gaslight is admittedly a luxury, and it cannot be just or equitable that the bulk of the rate-payers, who, as shown above, are poor, should be taxed for the convenience and advantage of a few rich persons."

Now, the object of the Bill was to provide the remedy indicated in that very statement. In the 13th paragraph the memorialists went on to ask—

"If the principle of selecting a few tracts for gaslights be recognized in practice, it may well be argued why it should not be applied to other works of the Municipality."

To this it would be sufficient to reply that the Council were now trying to remedy one ascertained existing defect, and not to lay down general principles for municipal taxation and legislation.

There was one other passage in the memorial which he could also accept for the purpose of this present discussion:—

"Notwithstanding the high rate of taxation prevalent in Howrah, the primary wants of the town are, it is notorious, not attended to."

And then the memorialists went on to say that the roads were not metalled, they were not watered, and no conservancy carts found their way to certain parts of the town, and so on. Admitting that statement to be a correct representation of the state of things, he would reply that the immediate effect of the Bill would be to apply at any rate, a partial remedy. Whether the proceeds of the rate proposed would be Rs. 9,000 as estimated by the memorialists, or Rs. 14,000 as estimated by the Magistrate and the Municipal Commissioners, to that extent the general funds of the Municipality would be set free as soon as this Act took effect, and the money would be available towards the metalling of roads, the lighting with oil, and satisfying the primary wants of the town, which, the memorialists said, were not now satisfied.

In paragraph 14 there was the objection that the Municipal Commissioners might—

"give one light at one end of a street and include the whole of it within the area of taxation. The Bill does not prescribe the distance within which lamps are to be posted, and it will be therefore entirely at the discretion of the Commissioners to vary the intervals."

The memorialists objected to a discretion being left to the Commissioners. The Select Committee had met that objection. As the Bill was introduced, it was open to the criticism that the Commissioners might light one end of one street and tax the whole town for lighting that particular spot. But the Bill, as now before the Council, imposed the most stringent restrictions which the Select Committee could devise in that direction. The Commissioners must first define the area they were going to light, they must then make a scheme for lighting that area, and then as the scheme was (according to the amendment he proposed to move) to be ventilated and published in the Gazette, those concerned would be able to propose alterations or object to the scheme altogether. Therefore, he said, the Select Committee had met the objection taken in paragraph 14 of the memorial.

In paragraph 6 the memorialists represented that—

"It cannot be reasonable or just that 97,000 native inhabitants should be subjected to an oppressive system of taxation far beyond their means, for the sake of 200 Europeans, many of whom are also not permanent residents of the town, constantly floating about from the nature of their service under the Railway Company."

As to the portion of the Municipality already lighted with gas, the memorialists themselves said that gas-lighting had been applied to that part of the town where there were Government and railway buildings or which were inhabited by European residents, and the Magistrate had reported that the Railway Company paid no less than one-fifth of the whole taxation of house and land property in Howrah, so that for this portion at any rate the bulk of the rate-payers would not suffer much.

And this brought him to the second head under which he had proposed to consider the provisions of the Bill—the possible future extension of gas-lighting under its operation. It was not in any way the object of the Bill to throw a lighting tax or to impose gas-lighting on the 97,000 persons referred to by the memorialists. It is true that in the statement of objects and reasons presented when the Bill was introduced, it was said that the intention of the Municipal Commissioners was to extend the benefit of lighting to the whole town. But the Select Committee had given up that object altogether. If Municipal Commissioners expressed any such wish and came up to the Lieutenant-Governor with any such proposal, Mr. Dampier hoped and felt sure that His Honor would promptly negative it. Any such wholesale extension would obviously be unadvisable and unwise.

The only postulates on which the Bill was founded were, that a certain portion of the Municipality was already lighted with gas; that in the course of things it was not unreasonable to suppose that lighting by gas might properly be extended to some other portions of the Municipality; that such lighting would generally be confined to the richer portions of the town; and that the expense of this luxury of lighting by gas should fall on those who directly benefited by it, and not (as the law now required) on the whole body of rate-payers, irrespective of the distance at which they lived from the portions so lighted.

The memorialists had given many figures to prove their case; but Mr. Dampier thought it was unnecessary to go into them, because he quite admitted the position which those figures went to prove, that it would be absurd to extend lighting generally to the whole of Howrah. Mr. Dampier was anxious not to appear to put himself in a position of hostility towards the memorialists, many of whose statements he had been able to accept, and who were quite right in bringing their objections before the Council. But he must draw attention to the figures given at the end of paragraph 5. The memorialists there said that the population was 97,784, and the taxes on houses, lands, and buildings, amounted to Rs. 1,21,816. On these figures they gave the incidence of taxation per head as Rs. 1-9. But if Hon'ble Members would go through the calculation, they would find that, taking the figures as given by the memorialists, the incidence of taxation came to something under Rs. 1-4 per head, and not Rs. 1-9 as given by them. It might be assumed that this first and most important item, relating to Howrah itself, had received at least as much care and attention at the hands of the memorialists as any of the other figures in their statements, and as that was so inaccurate, Mr. Dampier did not think that he would be justified in taking up the time of the Council by entering further upon the figures given in the memorial. He must protest, on behalf of the Council, against statements which would not bear the test of addition and division being laid before them as facts which should guide their decision. But the matter was not of much consequence, because he admitted the general proposition of the memorialists that it would be a hardship to impose a tax for gas-lighting on the whole body of rate-payers. Then, the memoralists made an objection referring to some sort of expectation having been held out that no such rates would be imposed, but that was an objection which Mr. Dampier would leave to His Honor the President to deal with.

And now, having explained the object and effect of the Bill as far as it lay in his power to do, he would only ask those hon'ble members who were inclined to view the Bill generally with disfavor, to consider that it might very well be entitled "A Bill to prevent the extra cost of lighting by gas being thrown on persons who did not benefit by such lighting;" and if the Council would look on the Bill in that light, he hoped they would be satisfied that it was reasonable and proper.

With these remarks he moved that the report of the Select Committee be taken into consideration in order to the settlement of the clauses of the Bill, and that the clauses of the Bill be considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee.

The Hon'ble Rajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore said, before the Council proceeded to take into consideration the clauses of the Bill, he wished to offer a few remarks. It appeared to him that the inhabitants of Howrah took objection to the Bill on two grounds. They stated that an expensive system of drainage works had been introduced which had caused a considerable portion of the general funds to be applied to that purpose, and that the general management of the funds had not been so economical as it might have been, so that there had been more money expended than was necessary. And from that they argued, that if the Municipality were more carefully managed and the expensive system of drainage not persisted in, there would be no necessity for imposing an additional lighting-rate. The Magistrate of Howrah had answered some of the objections of the memorialists. But since coming to the Council this morning Rajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore had learned that these rate-payers had sent an application to the Council praying that they might be allowed time before the Bill was taken into consideration to enable them to reply to the objections and criticisms made by the Magistrate of Howrah in regard to their memorial. It appeared to Rajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore, that as the Government had been pleased to call on the inhabitants of Howrah to submit an expression of their opinion, it was but fair to allow them an opportunity of offering any remarks they might wish to make on Mr. D'Oyly's letter. Entertaining that view, Rajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore would submit to the Council whether it would not be desirable to allow the memorialists time to send in their representation before proceeding to the consideration of the Bill.

The Hon'ble Baboo Digumbur Mitter said, he would supportt the amendment if there was no valid objection to its being put, to as to enable the memorialists to make any reply to the Magistrate's letter that they might consider necessary—to give them, in fact, the satisfaction of being heard in reply to Mr. D'Oyly's letter, even if no good was likely to come of it.

His Honor the President said, he would say one or two words on the question before putting the motion. It seemed to him very clear on the face of the petitions before the Council that all parties were agreed that we must have a Bill on this subject. The Hon'ble Member who brought forward the Bill, and the Hon'ble Member now in charge of the Bill, and the Committee, considered that, in order to obtain a settlement of this question of gas-lighting expenditure, a Bill was necessary. Those who petitioned against the Bill, petitioned on the ground that it would not be fair to burden the whole of the inhabitants with the burden of gas-lighting, but only that portion of the inhabitants who would benefit by such lighting. That was precisely the main object of the Bill before the Council. All agreed that this tax of paying for gas-lighting should not be extended to the whole Municipality, and that was exactly the primary object of the Bill. Therefore he might assume that we were all agreed that there must be some Bill. We were irretrievably committed to lighting a certain portion of Howrah with gas. It was so lighted; a contract had been made which the Municipality could not get out of; funds must be found; and the only question was whether the Municipality at large should find the money or only a limited portion of it. So far we were all agreed.

Then, as to the power to extend further the lighting by gas. The Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill had told us there might be some mistake in the statement of objects and reasons. He declared for himself, and His Honor might say for himself that the object was not to light all Howrah with gas contrary to the wishes of the people, but to limit the area of such lighting and of the taxation consequent, that was to say, that the benefit of gas-lighting should be conferred only on those of the inhabitants of Howrah who of their own free will, and not from any pressure from the Government, desired to have the benefit of such lighting. If the inhabitants of any part of the Municipality should desire to extend gas-lighting to that part of the Municipality, the Bill gave power to extend lighting to that portion only, and they should pay for it themselves. So far there was not, he apprehended, any objection to the Bill. His Honor believed that that principle of extension was agreed to by the people. There could be no extension of gas-lighting except by the voice of the people who would be taxed. And there was a further check provided by the Bill on the part of the Government which His Honor pledged himself, so long as he should have the honor of being at the head of the Government, should be carefully exercised. This part of the Bill was then, he thought, sufficiently stringent.

The only other view that it was possible to take of the Bill was this, that it might be said that the present rate of municipal taxation, if taken at its maximum, was more than enough to cover the ordinary expenditure, and that we ought to take the expenditure on account of gas-lighting in diminution of the ordinary taxation. It was said that, allowing that there should be a special tax on account of gas, what you took for ordinary purposes should be diminished by so much. It might be that drainage was a bad thing. His Honor thought it a good thing. It might be that there were extravagances on the part of the Municipality. It might be that the present maximum of taxation was too high; but that was a suggestion which, he thought, would not hold water. He found by the figures given by the Magistrate that it was made clear that the total incidence of taxation in Howrah was Rs. 1-2-2 per head, and not Rs. 1-9 as stated in the memorial. In His Honor's view, that was not an exorbitant rate of taxation. When we considered that Howrah was no rural Municipality—that a great part of Howrah was metropolitan—that a great part of the population was European—that Howrah was in fact a European town—that it was in fact a portion of the Metropolis of India; when we considered that the taxation of Calcutta was some 5, 6, or 7 rupees per head of the population; when we considered that the taxation of the comparatively poor and rural town of Burdwan was greater than that of Howrah, he would not admit that the incidence of taxation in Howrah was too severe. And considering that the drainage of Howrah was a pressing necessity, and Howrah was now being connected with Calcutta by a bridge, it would require new plans of improvement. You could not carry out the ordinary conservancy, repairs of roads, drainage, and everything, out of the ordinary taxation if it were put at too low a rate. For these reasons His Honor was convinced that it was necessary to impose a tax for gas-lighting in addition, and not in substitution, of the ordinary taxtion.

The Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill had said that he would leave His Honor to deal with the representation of the memorialists that there had been a pledge given by the Government of India that there should be no more fresh taxation. On that point all he had to say was that he had addressed the Government of India on that point, and had received an answer which had been communicated to the memorialists. He never supposed that the pledge amounted to this, that persons should not be allowed to tax themselves for a specific advantage for their own benefit. The Government had given the answer that it did not apply to this case, and that was all the explanation His Honor had to give.

Then the Hon'ble Member who had proposed a postponement, said that it was required to enable the memorialists to consider what reply they could give to the observations of the Magistrate. If ever there was a Bill in respect of which ample time had been given for consideration, it was this Bill. It had been nearly three months before the public since the presentation of the Select Committee's report. It had been postponed in order that there might be a free and full expression of the opinion of the people who would be affected by its provisions; and full advantage had been taken of the opportunity afforded. The people had interested themselves in the matter, and he would express his satisfaction that an active interest had been taken by the inhabitants. We should not have wished to offer any opposition to a postponement, but that a great deal of time had already been given to those who were interested in their own affairs. They had considered their own affairs and placed their views before the Council. It might be said that they had not had the opportunity of putting in a final answer to the statements submitted by the Magistrate. On that point he would ask Hon'ble Members to remember that certain amendments were about to be proposed, and in accordance with the rules of the Council, the Bill, if amended, could not be passed at this sitting, and consequently it would be necessary to postpone the consideration and passing of the Bill to another meeting. That being so, it appeared to him that there was no sufficient reason to delay the consideration of the Bill at this stage. To postpone the business now would render our meeting abortive and useless. If there was anything which the petitioners wished to controvert, they would have an opportunity of controverting it before the Bill was finally passed into law.

The Hon'ble Rajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore said, with due deference to the Hon'ble the President, he would take leave to draw the attention of the Council to the 16th paragraph of the memorial. It was true the memorialists had accepted the position that the contract having been entered into, must be adhered to; but they had urged that if an expensive system of drainage had not been undertaken and the municipal funds had been more economically managed, there would have been no necessity for the Bill; and they showed that in the budget statement of receipts and disbursements for 1873-74 the amount to be realised would be enough to cover the expenses of the year, including a provision for Rs. 22,000 on account of gas-lighting (which was more by two thousand rupees than the amount of the original contract). And there would consequently be no necessity for additional taxation unless the expensive system of drainage already commenced were to be carried out with the present funds. He did not for a moment say that an efficient system of drainage suited to the means of the Municipality should not be undertaken; but if the general funds of the Municipality should not be sufficient to meet that purpose, it would be necessary to ask the Council to impose a tax for drainage, and not for lighting. It would be for the Municipal Commissioners to come up and ask the Government with a suitable scheme, and for the Government to consider whether an additional tax should be imposed for drainage, or whether by more careful management sufficient funds could not be found for the purpose. He spoke in the assumption that the figures given by the memorialists were correct. That being the case, he thought it would be fair to give the memorialists another opportunity of explaining themselves further as to their objections.

The Hon'ble Mr. Dampier said, he had hoped to avoid any discussion of these statements of the memorialists and the replies of the Magistrate, because, as he had said before, he did not think they affected the matter which he had now the honor of laying before the Council. There was this money to be paid; there was the area lighted. Did the Hon'ble Member who moved the amendment insist that the payment for this lighting should fall on the whole of the tax-payers of Howrah, and not only or those who benefited? That was what the memorial led to. The contract, it said, no doubt must be observed; but it seemed to say, we object to the expedient provided by the Bill for throwing the cost of the lighting on those who benefit to the relief of the general rate-payers. Surely it was proper to throw the burden, or most of it, on those who benefited, and with the Rs. 9,000 or Rs. 16,000 of the general fund which would be thus set free the Municipality could do what they liked. It was for the Commissioners to deal with the money thus set free; they might either reduce the general taxation by that amount, or apply it to drainage purposes or oil-lighting or anything else: All he said was that the burden of raising the money which was devoted to lighting purposes should be thrown on those who benefited by it. It was quite open to the Commissioners, in the interests of the people, to say either that they would expend the money thus made available on the general objects of the Municipality, or that they would strike off the amount from the general taxation.

As he should propose the amendment of which he had given notice, the Bill could not be passed that day, and before it could come up again, the memorialists would be able to make any further representations. But it would be a mere waste of time now to postpone the consideration of the Bill, in order (as suggested by the hon'ble mover of the amendment) merely to give the memorialists the satisfaction of controverting the statements made by the Magistrate of Howrah, most of which really did not affect the questions with which the Council had to deal.

THE HON'BLE BABOO DIGUMBER MITTER said, that what his hon'ble friend (Rajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore) really meant appeared to him to be, that the lighting-rate for all practical purposes being in addition, and not in reduction, of the maximum rate hitherto levied by the Municipality, it would afford no relief to the majority of the rate-payers. In all probability the maximum rate would be still continued, and what had been hitherto expended from the general funds towards lighting a certain part of the town of Howrah, would now be devoted to carrying out the drainage works commenced upon in the same quarter, in the benefits of which such outlying places as Sibpore, Bellore, and others of which the Municipality is composed, could not participate, and which it was not likely would ever be extended to them. To afford real relief, the hon'ble member thought, there should be a drainage rate, leviable upon the principle of the lighting from those only who would benefit by those works.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said, it would be time enough when such an amendment was proposed to consider whether the amendment the hon'ble member suggested was a fit subject of amendment in this Bill, or whether another Bill on the subject should be introduced. The hon'ble member who had last spoken (Baboo Digumber Mitter) was clearly in favor of such a Bill as that now before the Council: therefore he would probably not oppose the motion for the consideration of the report of the Select Committee, in order that it might be passed as it stood or as it might be amended.

THE HON'BLE RAJAH JOTEENDRO MOHUN TAGORE then moved that the consideration of the Bill be postponed for a fortnight.

The motion was negatived and the original motion was then agreed to.

THE HON'BLE MR. DAMPIER said, the amendments of which he had given notice appear rather formidable, but if hon'ble members would examine them they would see that Section 2 as it stood before was one long section divided into three paragraphs. The necessity of altering it arose from a suggestion made by the Howrah Peoples' Association, who said they were satisfied with the restrictive power given to the Lieutenant-Governor, but that they should like to have the scheme for lighting published in the Gazette at the time it was laid before the Lieutenant-Governor, so that people should have the opportunity of making remarks and objections. He thought that a reasonable suggestion, and therefore he had made provision for it in the amendment. That was the only substantial change that was proposed, the rest was a mere re-casting of the form and wording of the sections. He moved that Sections 2 and 3 of the Bill be omitted, and the following sections, numbered 2, 3, 4, and 5, be substituted for them:—

"2. It shall be lawful for the Municipal Commissioners from time to time to submit to the Lieutenant-Governor, for his sanction, a scheme for lighting or for continuing to light with gas any portion of the town of Howrah, such portion of the said town having been previously defined by the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting held for that purpose. The Lieutenant-Governor, after publication of the scheme for one month in the Calcutta Gazette, and after consideration of any objections which may be raised to it, or alterations suggested in it, may, if satisfied that proper provision has been made for the lighting, sanction such scheme; or may refuse his sanction to such scheme, or may return it to the Municipal Commissioners for alteration in certain particulars to be specified by him, and, when altered, may sanction it as altered. The Lieutenant-Governor shall cause his sanction to any scheme to be notified in the Calcutta Gazette, and shall at the same time cause the scheme sanctioned to be published in the said Gazette.

Lighting-rate not exceeding two per centum may, after sanction of scheme, be imposed on houses, buildings, and lands.

3. After notification by the Lieutenant-Governor as in the last preceding section mentioned, it shall be lawful for the Municipal Commissioners to impose an annual rate not exceeding two per centum of their annual value upon all houses, buildings, and lands situated within such portion of the said town, for the purpose of defraying the whole or part of the expense of lighting.

After rate imposed, lamps must be lighted.

4. So soon as a rate has been imposed under the last preceding section, the Municipal Commissioners shall immediately thereupon cause such portion of the said town to be lighted with gas according to the scheme sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor.

Rate payable by occupiers quarterly in advance.

5. The rate imposed under section 3 upon houses, buildings, and lands, shall be paid by the occupiers thereof by quarterly instalments in advance; but no rate shall be leviable until the lamps in the portion of the town to be lighted shall have been lighted, nor shall any rate be leviable for any quarter or portion of a quarter antecedent to such lighting.

Arable lands, &c., exempted from rate.

Arable lands and lands used for pasturage, and buildings used exclusively as places of public worship or applied solely to charitable purposes, shall not be liable to the rate."

THE HON'BLE RAJAH JOTEENDRO MOHUN TAGORE moved that in line 12 of the proposed Section 2, after the words "Calcutta Gazette," the words "and by notification in the vernacular posted in conspicuous places within the said town of Howrah," be inserted. Very few of the inhabitants of Howrah would have the opportunity of seeing the Gazette, and it would be desirable that the inhabitants generally should have the opportunity of knowing what the scheme was.

With regard to Section 3, he did not quite understand what the latter portion of it meant. If it was intended that the rate was to defray only a part of the cost of lighting, and that the rest was to come from the general funds, that would nullify the effect of the provision that no portion of the expense of lighting should be defrayed from the general fund, so that those only should pay who would benefit by the introduction of gas.

This, he understood, was the chief recommendation of the Bill; but with such a provision it would be practically set at naught.

THE HON'BLE MR. DAMPIER said that he admitted that the Bill was open to the objection that it contained this theoretical defect. But the provision in question was absolutely unavoidable unless hon'ble members were prepared to screw up the proposed rate to whatever might be necessary to meet the whole cost of lighting. In the part of Howrah already lit with gas a rate of 2 per cent. would not cover the contract by which the Municipal Commissioners were bound for the next fifteen years, and there would be some Rs. 4,000 or more to be met from the general fund. That undeniably was a defect in the Bill. If the hon'ble member would propose a higher rate being fixed, for the sake of adhering to the principle that those who benefited should pay the cost of the lighting, the Council would doubtless be prepared to consider it; but the suggestion appeared to meet with no favor when he himself threw it out for consideration on the last occasion when the Bill was before the Council. The Magistrate had explained distinctly that for certain reasons not specified this contract was entered into at a higher cost than the Calcutta contract, and that in any future extensions that might be made it was expected that the contract would be obtained on better terms, and that a 2 per cent. rate would be ample to cover the whole cost. As the case of the area already lighted was peculiar and exceptional, he would himself oppose any amendment of which the object was to give the Municipal Commissioners and executive Government the power of imposing a 3 per cent. rate generally for lighting, merely for the sake of saving the principle as regards this one isolated case.

THE HON'BLE RAJAH JOTEENDRO MOHUN TAGORE observed, that if he understood the matter rightly, he supposed the relief to be given was a prospective one, and was to be postponed for the next fifteen years. In that case the whole principle of the Bill was open to question, and the ground upon which the Bill was introduced seemed to have been completely altered.

His Honor the President said, as he understood the matter, it appeared to him that the rate-payers who did not benefit from the lighting, but at present paid for it, would be relieved to the extent of the rate, and the residuum would remain a burden on the general rate-payers. The hon'ble member in charge of the Bill was quite correct when he said that this could only be remedied by proposing an amendment raising the special lighting-rate to a higher point than the present Bill proposed.

The question that Sections 2 and 3 of the Bill be omitted, was agreed to.

The new Section 2 with the proposed amendment thereto was then agreed to.

The proposed Section 3 having been read—

The Hon'ble Baboo Digumber Mitter moved that in line 7 the words "three per cent." be substituted for "two per cent." He said the object of the amendment was to fully assert the principle on which the Bill was based, that those only should contribute towards the cost of lighting by gas who benefited by it. And as it appeared that a rate of two per cent. would not meet the present charge of the contract entered into with the Gas Company, he would propose, rather than the principle of the Bill should be sacrificed, that a rate of three per cent. should be levied.

The Hon'ble the Acting Advocate-General said, it appeared to him that the amendment now proposed would introduce a radical change. He thought all persons concerned should have had information of such a proposal, and that three per cent. should have been inserted in the draft of the Bill. The proposal seemed to him not to come within the scope of an amendment so suddenly put in Council.

The Hon'ble Lord Ulick Browne said, it seemed to him necessary, on the principle adopted, to raise the rate from two to three per cent. He understood that two per cent. would be insufficient to defray the entire cost of lighting, and Sections 3, 4, and 5, as proposed by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, provided that further portions of the Municipality might be continually added to the gas-lighted area. If the rate was insufficient to defray the whole charge of the lighting, the additional charge would be thrown on the general funds of the Municipality, and consequently become payable by the inhabitants of the whole town in proportion as additional portions of the town were lighted. Thus, supposing that the lighting of the first portion cost Rs. 10,000, and that the lighting-rate produced Rs. 7,000, then the inhabitants would have to pay out of the general fund Rs. 3,000. If another portion were added to the lighted area at the same expense, then another Rs. 3,000 would have to be paid out of the general fund; and in this way you would go on increasing the charge on the municipal general fund, and therefore imposing more and more expense on the inhabitants of the Municipality in general, whether the portion they lived in was lighted with gas or not.

The Hon'ble Mr. Schalch said, it appeared to him that two cases would fall under the provisions of Section 3—first, the case already arisen of the contract already made and which must be paid for; and secondly, new extensions for which no contracts had yet been made. As a rate of two per cent. would yield Rs. 14,000 in the portion of the Municipality already lighted with gas, whereas the contract cost was Rs. 20,000, it would leave a deficit of Rs. 6,000 to be borne by the general fund. But it was anticipated that a rate of two per cent., even in that portion of the Municipality which was now lighted, would cover the cost when the present contract expired. Therefore we might assume that a rate of two per cent. would cover the cost in future extensions. Therefore, according to the Magistrate's letter, a rate of more than two per cent. would not be required. Therefore, whilst we provided that a rate of two per cent. should be imposed to meet the cost of future extensions of lighting, we might put in a proviso saying that the Commissioners might impose a rate of three per cent. in the portion of Howrah now lighted during the currency of the present contract.

His Honor the President said, he was somewhat unwilling to put to the Council so very radical a change without notice. It was a very radical change, and one which required very full and very careful consideration. But as he had already permitted the hon'ble member to make the motion, he thought he might take the opinion of the Council upon it, on the understanding that if this change was made time should be given to the Council and to the inhabitants of Howrah to digest that change, to review what was done, and to consider whether what had been done, had been done rashly and without sufficient deliberation. It was suggested, and in fact stated by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, that his view of the matter was this, that the present contract for lighting a portion of the town of Howrah was a somewhat extravagant contract, and that it was hoped that future contracts would be made on better and more favorable terms; that with regard to future contracts a rate of two per cent. would be sufficient. The present extravagant contract was made by the rate-payers at large through their representatives the Municipal Commissioners; the representatives of the Municipality then made this extravagant contract, of which, we were told, one-third was extravagant and two-thirds only afforded a quid pro quo. Therefore we might fairly say that on the special part of the town we would only impose a tax to the extent to which they had benefited, and not to the full extent to which the general body of the rate-payers had, through their representatives, committed themselves. Therefore, as the proposed amendment changed the essence of the Bill which had been so fully considered, His Honor was somewhat adverse to it. Perhaps the Council would leave the Bill where a careful Committee, after much deliberations, had put it. He would put the amendment, whether the rate should be 2 or 3 per cent. as a maximum, reserving for consideration future amendments in regulations, or qualification of the 3 per cent. rate, if a rate of 3 per cent. were adopted by the Council at this sitting.

The question being put,

Ayes 7.	Noes 3.
The Hon'ble Baboo Digumber Mitter.	The Hon'ble Moulvy Abdool Luteef.
" " Rajah Joteendro Mohun Tagore	" " Mr. Dampier.
" " Mr. Robinson.	His Honor the President.
" " Mr. Bernard.
" " Lord Ulick Browne.
" " Mr. Schalch.
" " The Acting Advocate-General.

The motion was therefore carried.

On the motion of the Hon'ble Baboo Digumber Mitter the words "or part" in the 10th and 11th lines of the section were then omitted.

The proposed Section 4 having been read—

His Honor the President said there appeared to him to be some difficulty in regard to this section. The section provided that—

"As soon as a rate has been imposed under the last preceding section, the Municipal Commissioners shall immediately thereupon cause such portion of the said town to be lighted with gas according to the scheme sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor."

Supposing it was found that the Municipality could not complete the scheme sanctioned by the Lieutenant-Governor for the money? He supposed that the Commissioners could not be called upon to perform an impossibility. We had frequently seen that schemes submitted by the most eminent engineers could not be carried out within the estimates framed. He proposed therefore to add to this section the words "or so far as the rate will permit."

The Hon'ble the Acting Advocate-General observed that the words proposed to be inserted seemed to him to be unnecessary. The scheme must be made according to the money to be expended.

His Honor the President remarked that the amendment he had proposed had reference to the question of the responsibility of the Lieutenant-Governor. The Lieutenant-Governor passed a scheme and called upon the Commissioners to carry it out. The Commissioners found that the scheme could not be completed within the estimate. That was the false position from which he wished to absolve both the Commissioners and the Lieutenant-Governor. The Lieutenant-Governor would be put in a very awkward position if he was to be bound to carry out a scheme whether it could be completed within the estimate submitted or not. We all know that estimates were often deceptive. The Lieutenant-Governor was only human, and could not be sure of keeping engineers within compass.

THE HON'BLE MR. SCHALCH said that these works were carried out in two ways—they might either be carried out by contract, or departmentally. Under the latter system a scheme was submitted and an estimate framed according to the market rates of labor and materials. In the meantime prices might rise. It had been found in works carried on by the Port Commissioners that, preparatory to the completion of a contract, the rates had risen by nearly 30 per cent.; therefore there must be some provision made to meet such cases. If you did not, in consequence of its being impossible to carry out a scheme fully within the estimate—if you allowed a scheme to be carried out in part, you would have the objection raised that a light might only be put at one end of a street and a light at the other, and notwithstanding that the whole street might be liable to be taxed. He thought that a provision of the kind proposed was absolutely necessary.

THE HON'BLE MR. DAMPIER said, he must observe on behalf of the Select Committee that they had anticipated such a dilemma as now stopped the way of the Council, and had been careful to keep in the Bill a provision which would admit of some portion of the general funds being applied towards the cost of lighting, so as to meet such difficulties in working.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT observed that he must distinctly say this, that the Lieutenant-Governor could not accept the responsibility of passing schemes on the assumption that they could be carried out strictly within the estimates.

THE HON'BLE RAJAH JOTEENDRO MOHUN TAGORE remarked that, with such latitude to the Commissioners, it would hardly be necessary to restrict them at all.

The section as proposed to be amended was then agreed to.

The proposed Section 5 was agreed to.

THE HON'BLE MR. DAMPIER said, the effect of the amendments carried by the hon'ble members, who might be said to represent the objecting rate-payers of Howrah who strongly objected to this additional taxation, was to give the Municipal Commissioners and the executive Government authority to impose a tax of three per cent. instead of two. The amendment materially affected the character of the Bill, and he must now move that the Bill be referred back to the Select Committee to enable them to draft it as a homogenous whole.

THE HON'BLE BABOO DIGUMBER MITTER said, if we were at all to carry out the principle on which this Bill was based, he did not see how we could else get out of the difficulty. The Magistrate of Howrah had said that a rate of two per cent. on the portion of the Municipality lighted by gas would only raise Rs. 14,000, and the sum we had to provide to meet the present cost of such lighting was Rs. 20,000. The only remedy therefore was to raise the rate to three per cent, unless we preferred to abandon the principle on which the whole Bill was based.

HIS HONOR THE PRESIDENT said, the question as to the rate of taxation had been decided, and the question now was not whether the change that had been made was a radical change or not, but whether the change that had been made did not require that the minute provisions of the Bill should be looked into in order that they might be made to correspond and tally with the amendment. It was very important to see that all the provisions of the Bill fitted into the change.

The question that the Bill be referred again to the Select Committee with instructions to report in a week was then agreed to.

The Council was adjourned to Saturday, the 9th August 1873.

MAHOMEDAN EDUCATION, AND THE MOHSIN ENDOWMENT.

GENERAL DEPARTMENT.

EDUCATION.

READ—

The following papers regarding the increased extension of educational facilities to Mahomedans in Bengal, namely,—

Bengal Government letter No. 2918, dated 17th August 1872, with enclosures.

Home Department Resolution and letter, dated 13th June 1873.

Also the proposals by Mr. H. Woodrow, then Officiating Director of Public Instruction, under date the 9th August 1872, with the Lieutenant-Governor's orders thereon.

Also letter No. 242B, dated 28th November 1871, from the Commissioner of Dacca, enclosing a memorial signed by Khajeh Abdool Gunny, C.S.I., and other Mahomedans of Dacca, praying for the establishment of a Mahomedan College at Dacca, and specifying the advantages and concessions they specially desire.

Also the Commissioner of Dacca's report, No. 102A, dated 16th June 1873, upon the question put by Government as to the languages which Mahomedan boys at Government schools in Eastern Bengal wish to learn.

The Lieutenant-Governor observes that all the Government schools in Bengal, except the Sanskrit College and the Hindu School in Calcutta, are already open to Mahomedan as well as to Christian and Hindu scholars; and he has, in the correspondence cited above, expressed his unwillingness to found, with Government money, special schools for any particular creed or denomination, though he was willing to sanction special classes for Mahomedans in exceptional circumstances. Accordingly, the Lieutenant-Governor had, in 1871, directed that if there were at any Government schools in Eastern Bengal, or elsewhere in Bengal Proper, sufficient Mahomedan scholars who desired to learn Arabic and Persian, arrangements should be made for teaching those languages in special classes. He submitted to the Government of India his view that we should teach the general body of Mahomedans of Bengal their own vernacular, which is Bengalee, in the Bengalee character, but with some infusion of Persian words; that we should teach Western learning to such Mahomedans as may seek it through the medium of English and vernacular, rather than through the medium of Arabic or Persian; but that we should, at specially endowed colleges, teach the classical languages of Persia and Arabia to Mahomedans in their own way, so far as to satisfy the requirements of their religion, their ideas of a liberal education, and the genuine demand for oriental learning for its own sake.

2. While the Lieutenant-Governor thought that the Government funds could not be properly devoted to separate Mahomedan colleges and schools to a greater extent than at present, he also felt that the endowment of Mahomed Mohsin of Hooghly, which is managed by the Government, afforded a legitimate means of promoting special Mahomedan education. Accordingly, in submitting these views to the Supreme Government, the Lieutenant-Governor proposed that so much of the Mahomed Mohsin endowment as is assigned for educational purposes should be spent in giving practical effect to proposals for furthering Mahomedan education throughout the country. In order that we might be able to devote the whole proceeds of the Mohsin educational endowment to Mahomedan education, the Lieutenant-Governor asked the Government of India to make some special grant to enable this Government to set free from the general purposes of the Hooghly College the Mohsin funds, and with the proceeds to defray the cost of Mahomedan Madrissas at the centres of Mahomedan population, such as Dacca, Chittagong, and Rajshahye.

3. The Government of India have now expressed their general approval of the Lieutenant-Governor's views and plans; and they have, with a liberality for which the Government of Bengal is most grateful, made for the purpose indicated an addition of Rs. 50,000 to the grant for education in Bengal. This additional grant will enable the Bengal Government to maintain as a full-power college the large and successful general college at Hooghly. His Excellency the Viceroy in Council has also approved the appointment of a European officer on a salary of not less than Rs. 1,000 a month as Principal of the Calcutta Madrissa, and possibly as Superintendent of Madrissas in Bengal; and has expressed a wish that Mahomedan Madrissas or Departments should be grafted on to existing colleges and high schools at the centres of Mahomedan population in Bengal.

4. The funds which the Lieutenant-Governor has at his disposal for special Mahomedan education are—

	Rs.
(1) Grant to the Calcutta Madrissa and its attached schools, as per the Educational Budget of 1873-74	38,000
(2) Mahomed Mohsin Educational Endowment, yielding per annum about	55,000
Total ...	93,000

From the sum available, as above-mentioned, must be met—

First,—The cost of the Hooghly Madrissa and boarding-house, and the difference between the full college or schools fees and those paid by Mahomedan scholars. The grant for the Hooghly Madrissa and boarding-house during the year 1873-74 is Rs. 5,000, besides scholarships; the Lieutenant-Governor would make it in future Rs. 7,000, in accordance with plans for other Madrissas to be presently stated.

Secondly,—The cost of the Calcutta Madrissa and Anglo-Persian Department and boarding-house, and of the Branch School at Collinga. The Lieutenant-Governor is satisfied that the Mahomedans of Bengal would wish the Calcutta Madrissa to be retained, whatever other Madrissas may be established. Excluding scholarships, the grant for the Calcutta Madrissa and its attendant institutions during the year 1873-74 was Rs. 34,500 gross, the fees being credited to Government. The new appointment of a Principal and Superintendent of Madrissas must considerably increase this charge; and the Lieutenant-Governor would, if necessary, assign Rs. 35,000 plus its fees, or about Rs. 40,000 in all, as the cost of this institution and its dependencies. The establishment of moulvies and teachers at the Calcutta Madrissa requires revision. The number of teachers seems too large, and the salaries of the junior teachers may be too small. For the 80 or 90 Arabic students there are seven moulvies besides the professor; while for the 320 boys in the Anglo-Persian Department there are 18 teachers besides the professor and the resident moonshee. The Director of Public Instruction will be instructed to submit an early report on these establishments.

There will remain Rs. 51,000 to be spent on Madrissas at Dacca, Chittagong, Rajshahye, or other places in the Mahomedan districts, on scholarships, and on other means of promoting the education of Mahomedans.

5. The Lieutenant-Governor proposes that the new Madrissas should consist of a boarding-house for Mahomedan students, a set of rooms for study, and a staff of Mahomedan officers (who should teach Arabic and Persian, and other branches not requiring a knowledge of English), as well as a master capable of acting as home tutor for English education. One at least of the teachers would have free quarters in the boarding-house, and would have charge of the boarders. The Madrissa would be attached to, and the boarding-house would be near, the college or high school, and Mahomedan boys of approved merit, who attended school or college, would have two-thirds of their school fees paid for them from the Madrissa funds.

6. Of all the eastern districts, Chittagong and Noacolly are those which have the largest population of Mahomedans of the class which seek education and send students to the Calcutta and Hooghly Madrissas. Rajshahye is centrically situated in a part of Bengal, nearly three-fourths of the inhabitants of which are Mahomedans. Dacca, on the other hand, is a still more important centre, and has also around it a very large Mahomedan population; and the Commissioner reported in 1871 that Khajeh Abdool Gunny, C.S.I., with many influential Mahomedans, wished to have an exclusively Mahomedan college established at Dacca, whereat students might learn English or Arabic. The memorialists, it is observed, especially say that they do not require Bengali or Hindustani to be taught at this college, as their children learn these languages sufficiently well at home. The memorialists lay much stress on having a European gentleman, with some knowledge of Persian and Arabic, at the head of the Dacca Madrissa. The Commissioner reported in 1871 that a piece of land would be given for the site of a Madrissa at Dacca, and that eventually wealthy Mahomedans might probably come forward to endow such an institution.

7. If the Mahomedan gentlemen of Dacca should furnish the funds for a separate college of their own, every assistance shall be given to them, and the Mohsin Madrissa grant will be amalgamated with their funds. But putting this question apart, the Lieutenant-Governor's present view is, that it will be best to establish, in addition to the Hooghly Madrissa, Madrissas at Dacca, at Chittagong, and at Rajshahye, consisting of not less than the following:—

(a) A boarding-house with three or more school-rooms, and a decent house, after the native style, for the resident teacher.

(b) An establishment consisting of—

	Per annum. Rs.
Superintendent on Rs. 200, rising to Rs. 250	2,700
1st Teacher on Rs. 75, rising to Rs. 100	1,020
2nd ditto on ,, 40, ,, to ,, 60	640
Contingencies and prizes, at Rs. 120 a month	1,440
Servants for boarding-house and grant-in-aid of boarders' messing, at Rs. 100	1,200
Total per annum ...	7,000

For Dacca a more highly-paid staff might be allowed, say a Superintendent on Rs. 350 per mensem, and annual net grant of Rs. 10,000. The Superintendent should be, if possible, a Mahomedan, who knows both English and either Arabic or Persian, and he should be competent to teach Mahomedan law. The Madrissa building should be as near as possible to the college or high school or zillah school buildings; boarders or other Mahomedan boys approved by the committee would be allowed to attend the English, law, survey, science, and other classes of the college or school on payment of one-third the usual fees, the other two-thirds being paid by the Mohsin Fund. Each Madrissa would be under the management of a special committee, or of a special sub-committee of the general District School Committee. Such committee or sub-committee should consist of Mahomedans and Europeans, and the Superintendent of the local Madrissa would be a member, and might be secretary. At Dacca and Hooghly the Principal of the college should be a member of the committee. The cost of the buildings, which should not be very expensive, would be met from the uninvested surplus of about Rs. 90,000 now in the hands of the Mohsin Fund trustees.

8. The Lieutenant-Governor would not at present lay down the course of study in Mahomedan literature, or Mahomedan law, which should be pursued at the Madrissas. He would leave details to be settled by the local Superintendents and the local committees under the general supervision of the Superintendent of Madrissas. His view generally is, that we should teach at Madrissas such Persian and Arabic, and a reasonable amount of Mahomedan law and literature, as students may wish to learn, and that we should give special facilities to Madrissa students who may elect to take the ordinary English course of study, and to read physical science.

9. It has often been urged that the best Bengal Mahomedans are usually men of small means. The Lieutenant-Governor believes this to be true; and he would set aside a further sum of Rs. 7,200 to be allotted, at the rate of Rs. 800 a year, to each of the zillah schools marginally noted, for expenditure, partly in paying two-thirds of the school fees of deserving Mahomedan boys who may attend regularly at these schools, and partly in bearing a share of the cost of a teacher of Arabic and Persian. The views of the Mahomedan members of the District School Committees should be allowed much weight in deciding how these grants are to be spent. A sum of Rs. 8,000 might be set aside to meet two-thirds of the college or school fees of deserving Madrissa students who may attend the Presidency, Hooghly, or Dacca Colleges, or the collegiate and other schools near which a Madrissa may be established.

10. There will remain a sum of Rs. 11,800 available for various expenses which may prove necessary, and especially for Mohsin scholarships. All scholarships now held at the Calcutta and Hooghly Madrissas will be continued to their holders. The number, amount, and duration of the scholarships can be settled as soon as the new Madrissas are established. But in the interest of all parties, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks that a large proportion of the sum available should be devoted to the encouragement of Mahomedan lads who learn English and succeed in English studies and physical science. In general terms, the Lieutenant-Governor would say that we ought to establish some Mohsin scholarships of Rs. 4 or Rs. 5 per mensem tenable at zillah schools; and some of Rs. 15, Rs. 20, and Rs. 25 per mensem tenable at ordinary or special colleges, or at the civil service classes. Perhaps it might be possible to have one Mohsin scholarship of Rs. 1,000 a year tenable in England by successful Mahomedan students of English.

11. The total annual cost of the above arrangements will be—

	Annual cost in Rs.
Calcutta Madrissa, &c.	35,000
Dacca Madrissa	10,000
Establishment and boarding-house of three Madrissas	21,000
Various further expenses, including scholarships	11,800
Assignment for Mahomedan education at nine zillah schools ...	7,200
Assignment to meet the cost of paying two-thirds fees of Madrissa boys who may attend at the Presidency, Hooghly, and Dacca Colleges or collegiate schools, or at the Rajshahye and Chittagong schools, or law classes	8,000
Amount available as per paragraph 4 above ...	93,000

12. The Lieutenant-Governor hopes that Mahomedan gentlemen of wealth and liberality, of whom there are many in Eastern Bengal, will sooner or later come forward to endow scholarships or otherwise to support the new Madrissas which are to be established. The Commissioner of Dacca will be asked to communicate with the memorialists of 1871, and to ascertain how far they are willing to help. The funds at the Lieutenant-Governor's disposal do not permit of his providing a competent European Principal for the Dacca Madrissa; but if the memorialists still desire to have such an officer over the Dacca Madrissa, and see their way to guaranteeing an additional income of Rs. 6,000 per annum, the Lieutenant-Governor would hope to be able to meet their wishes.

13. The arrangements now proposed do not set aside any funds for aiding Mahomedan primary schools. The Lieutenant-Governor has much hope that the action taken by local officers under the primary school orders will result in our having Mahomedan scholars and teachers at a great many of the primary schools in the eastern districts. If this should be so, if a large proportion of the school boys are Mahomedans, the Lieutenant-Governor would expect that in course of time district officers may be able to nominate Mahomedans to a share of the Deputy and Sub-Inspectorships in Mahomedan districts. At present hardly a single member of the inspecting staff in Bengal is a Mahomedan.

14. In pursuance of the policy that Government funds cannot be set aside for special sects, the Lieutenant-Governor has not proposed to set apart any of the grant-in-aid fund, or of the scholarship fund, or of the primary school grant, exclusively for Mahomedan education. The funds now granted for Mahomedan purposes come exclusively from the Mohsin foundation and from the grant made in the last century to the Calcutta Madrissa. The Lieutenant-Governor hopes and anticipates that before long Mahomedans may get their fair share of the general scholarships and other educational advantages granted by Government to the Mahomedan districts. He was glad to notice in the last Educational Report that Mahomedans are said to be creeping up to the top of the zillah schools in Eastern Bengal; he has recently heard that the head student of the Hooghly College at the recent B.A. examination was a Mahomedan; and he has just seen that a Mahomedan boy came out first at the open examination for patshala scholarships in the Pubna district.

15. As respects the kind of man required for the new Principalship of the Madrissa, the Lieutenant-Governor's views are expressed in the following extract:—

"His Honor would appoint as Principal of the Calcutta Madrissa and Superintendent of Madrissas in Bengal a European scholar on Rs. 1,000 per mensem, to be paid from the Mohsin Fund. To bring him into sympathy with the students, and to enable him to direct their studies, he should be a Persian and Arabic scholar, but His Honor does not propose that the teaching of those languages should be in any degree his chief function. It is much more important that he should be able to direct their education in European science and art, and to teach in the Calcutta Madrissa the most important branches. And most important of all, much more important than his being a mere oriental scholar, is that he should be a man fitted to lead, to influence, and to discipline youth—a man with the talent of a head-master of a public school, and a temper fitted to deal with and attach to him the natives of India."

16. The Commissioners of Dacca, Rajshahye, and Chittagong will be requested to appoint at once committees consisting of the Magistrate, the District Engineer, two or three educated Mahomedans, and a representative of the local college or school, to propose a scheme for buying or building, close to the school or college, a Madrissa containing three or more school-rooms, accommodation for not less than thirty boarders, and a house for the resident Superintendent. The outside cost of the whole should not exceed Rs. 25,000 for each Madrissa; the committee will best be able to decide what kind of buildings should be built or bought in each case. The Commissioners of these divisions may also take such steps as they may see fit, either by public meeting or otherwise, to interest the Mahomedan public in the movement.

TEHSILDAREE ESTABLISHMENTS FOR GOVERNMENT KHAS MEHALS.

No. 5166, dated Calcutta, the 6th December 1872

From—C. BERNARD, Esq., Officiating Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Revenue Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India in the Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce.

UNDER cover of my letter No. 5057, dated 2nd instant, was submitted the Board's, Commissioner's, and Settlement Officer's report upon the settlement of the Western Dooars of Bhootan. It will have been observed that the settlement has been made at revenue rates with the jotedars, some of whom are actual cultivators of the land; that in three of the less cultivated pergunnahs the business of collecting the revenue from the jotedars has been made over to farmers who have some old connection with the pergunnahs, at a commission of 17½ per cent. on the total land revenue; but that over the other six pergunnahs it was proposed to collect the Government revenue (or rent, whichever it be called) from the jotedars through the agency of tehsildars, at a commission of 10 per cent. on the revenue. This was the system which had been hitherto in force in the Dooars; but the Lieutenant-Governor has preferred to substitute for tehsildars paid by a commission, and more or less uncontrolled by Government, a tehsildaree system more nearly approaching to the tehsildaree (mamlutdaree or talookdaree) system of temporarily settled lands in other parts of India, and has directed the Board to submit proposals for giving effect to such a system.

2. The question how the Government revenue (or rent) was to be collected on temporarily settled lands where Government owns the land, or where it arranges directly with the occupiers, was settled in Assam by a decision that there should be a class of Government officers called mouzahdars, who should collect the revenue and manage the affairs of a mouzah, or tract of country paying about Rs. 5,000 of revenue (or rent); and as remuneration for the duty the mouzahdars were to be allowed a percentage of from 10 to 15 per cent. on the revenue they collect, and they are also allowed a very small establishment to help them. A somewhat similar arrangement exists in Chittagong, where estates are very many and very small, and where circle-farmers, as they are called, collect and pay into the Government treasury the revenue instalments of estate-holders.

In nearly the whole of Orissa, where the land revenue is temporarily settled, there are large proprietors who collect their rents and pay in the Government revenue without the intervention of any Government official or tehsildar between themselves and the treasury. But in the large Government estate of Khoordah in Pooree, it has been found necessary to attach a Deputy Collector to the sub-divisional officer for the mere purpose of doing the tehsildaree work of this tract, the ryots of which pay Rs. 1,50,000 into the treasury annually.

In the Palamow tract of the Lohardugga district, where the sub-divisional officer is in executive charge of more than 4,000 square miles of country, there is a considerable area of Government lands, the ryots of which have to be managed; and the Lieutenant-Governor has, now that the settlement is over,* been obliged to sanction—temporarily, and subject to the orders of the Supreme Government on the general question—a Sub-Deputy on Rs. 150 a month to assist the sub-divisional officer in managing these lands. Similarly, for the Government dearahs, or lands thrown up by the river Ganges, in the Bhaugulpore division, the Lieutenant-Governor has had to sanction temporarily two tehsildars, who shall manage the lands, collect the rents, and also conduct the re-settlement which is now pending.

* See letter No. 4450, dated 8th October, reporting upon the Palamow settlement.

In a recent case referred by the Commissioner of Cooch Behar, it was pointed out by the Board of Revenue that the Government of India had, in letter No. 483, dated 13th April 1841, invested Commissioners of divisions with authority to pass charges for collection of the revenue in khas mehals (Government estates) not exceeding in the aggregate 10 per cent. on the total collections of the year. This permission has not been very generally acted upon, because the policy of the revenue authorities in Bengal has been to let Government estates to farmers for terms of years; these farmers were often Europeans, some of whom live at home in England. According to the rules and practice of the Board of Revenue, 10 per cent. on the aggregate rents or assessments of khas mehals has been allowed to such farmers to cover the costs and loss in collection, and a further sum, sometimes amounting to 10 per cent., is usually allowed as farmers' profits, besides profit from increase of cultivation, enhancement of rents, indigo cultivation, &c.

3. The Lieutenant-Governor does not wish to continue the system of farming all or most of the Government khas mehals, and thus completing the separation between Government officers in Bengal and the people who occupy and dwell on the land of Bengal districts. Some of the farmers are no doubt good men and do their duty, but they have little or no incentive to spend money on the land or improve the condition of the ryots. When a farmer gets large farms and makes a good income therefrom, he often becomes an absentee and leaves his farms to be managed by irresponsible agents. A farmer can be of very little assistance in executive or administrative matters; he is rarely fit to be a Magistrate on the lands he holds; he in no way represents the Government; he does not help the Government or its officers in gaining an insight into the state of the people, or of their agriculture, or of their wants; indeed, as his lease draws to a close, it must be the direct interest of a farmer to understate the yield and conceal the state of his farm, so that he may obtain a renewal of his lease on favourable terms. In fact, it has too often, the Lieutenant-Governor thinks, ended in repeated renewals and eventual permanent settlement with the original farmer, or his heirs or assignees; so that, in fact, a valuable landed property is given away at discretion. A tehsildar, on the other hand, with a small establishment, would be most useful in all these ways; it is not too much to say that in temporarily settled parts of India the tehsildars are the most important, most influential, and most respected class of native officials the Government has; and there is no reason why in course of time tehsildars on Government estates in Bengal should not occupy the same position as tehsildars in the North-Western Provinces, mamlutdars in Bombay, ann talookdars in Madras. So far as the public treasury goes, the employment of tehsildars would certainly be cheaper than the present arrangements, whereby, under the orders of 1841, Commissioners can pass* 10 per cent. as costs of collection; and than the farming arrangements whereby, under the Board's rules and practice, 10 per cent. as costs of collection and a further percentage as farmers' profits, with all subsequent increase, are allowed to lessees of Government estates.

* The word "pass" is used, but as a matter of fact these allowances do not usually pass through the public accounts at all; only the net revenue after the deduction of costs of collection and farmer's allowance is brought on the Government rent-roll, as will be seen from the appendices to the Bhútan Dooars Settlement Report.

4. Against any proposal thus to have tehsildaree establishments on Government khas mehals, there may be the objection that it is undesirable to multiply Government establishments with their claim to pension; that in every case of the kind special recommendations will have to be made to the Government of India; and that the old system has always worked well enough. In regard to the third objection, I am to submit that the old system was costly, in that it gave up large lump sums as commission to farmers, and that it answered no other purpose of Government except the mere collection of revenue. The ryots also were not protected, and the farmer had every possible interest to enhance their rents or make them grow indigo. This farming system is identical with the old system which was abandoned in other parts of India directly land revenue settlements and the record of landed rights were regularly taken in hand. To meet the other objection, the Lieutenant-Governor would suggest that these tehsildaree establishments be recognised as provincial establishments, and that the Supreme Government be pleased to allow the local Government to appropriate, subject to report on each case, a fixed percentage of the land revenue assessed on Government khas mehals and ryotwaree districts to the support of tehsildaree and subordinate administrative establishments. The percentage would not be allowed on tracts where there are superior proprietors with recognised rights; and it should be made to cover all costs for commission to village headmen (lumberdars as they are called in the North-West Provinces, and munduls, pradhans, martabars, manjees, gounteas, as they are called in different parts of Bengal). If the percentage were allowed, then the Lieutenant-Governor would attempt to work the grant and its establishments into the scheme for sub-divisional executive establishments, to which the Government of India has been pleased to give a partial and provisional sanction in Home Department letter No. 3904, dated 10th October 1872.

5. The percentage for which the Lieutenant-Governor would ask would be 10 per cent. on the full assessment on the ryots. He would anticipate that about 4 per cent. of this would go to the village headmen, while 6 per cent. might be spent on tehsildaree establishments. This percentage would certainly not cover the costs of collection in smaller estates, but it would cover the collection charge in large estates, and would enable the local Government to strengthen the sub-divisional establishments in places where there were many small Government estates to be managed. If the Government of India were pleased to agree in this view, full report would, in the case of each settlement, be made regarding the percentage to be allowed and the purpose to which it should be devoted.

6. I am to summarise the points which have been submitted in this letter thus:—

(1) It has been the custom in Bengal to lease temporarily settled Government estates to farmers, or to make over their collection to tehsildars, at a commission ranging from 10 to 20 per cent. on the revenue assessed upon the occupiers whose rents they were also permitted to enhance and increase for their own profit.

(2) The system is not in the long run a good one, for it separates the people from the Government officers, and makes over the ryots to speculators or persons who have no interest in the improvement of the ryots.

(3) The tehsildaree system of other parts of India could be introduced with advantage to Government, to the ryots, and with economy to the State.

(4) The best way of doing this will be to recognise these tehsildaree establishments as provincial, and to make over to the local Government, after full report in each case, 10 per cent. on the gross assessment on the ryots, to be spent on tehsildaree and executive establishments, in connection with the scheme for sub-divisional establishments.

Memo. by—C. J. LYALL, Esq., Offg. Under-Secy. to the Govt. of India, Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce.

COPY forwarded to the Government of Bengal, with reference to its letter No. 5166, dated 6th December 1872, and with a request that the Government of India may be furnished with the tabular statement referred to in paragraph 3 of the Financial Resolution dated 30th ultimo.

No. 1350.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FINANCIAL DEPARTMENT.

Simla, the 30th June 1873.

READ the undermentioned papers relating to a proposal to substitute a paid agency for farmers of revenue in the temporarily-settled Government estates in Bengal:—

Paragraph 11 of the observations contained in Financial Resolution No. 652, dated 27th May 1873.

Letter from Government of Bengal to the Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce, No. 5166, dated 6th December 1872.

The Government of Bengal proposes to introduce the tehsildaree system, which obtains in other parts of India for the collection of revenue, in such temporarily-settled Government estates in Bengal as are at present either leased to farmers, or in which the duty of collecting the revenue is made over to tehsildars at a commission ranging from 10 to 20 per cent. deducted from the gross revenue paid by the occupiers; and with a view to carry out the proposal, the Government of Bengal requests that 10 per cent. of the gross assessment on the ryots may be allowed to be spent on the required tehsildaree establishments, they being recognised at the same time as provincial establishments.

2. The Governor-General in Council has already approved of the introduction of a paid agency, similar to that which is found by experience in other parts of India to be the best suited for the management of temporarily-settled districts, and is prepared to consider favorably proposals for an establishment of tehsildars and for allowances to headmen in that class of Government estates in which a percentage has hitherto been allowed to farmers for management, provided the net revenue of such estates exceeds Rs 1,000 a year, and provided the future expenditure on such establishments will not exceed in the aggregate 10 per cent. of the gross revenue collections.

3. In order, however, to ascertain the financial results of the proposed arrangements, His Excellency in Council desires that a detailed tabular statement may be submitted, shewing for each estate to which the new scheme is to be applied, the establishments to be entertained, and the revenue which it will have to collect, as also the gross and net receipts, so far as may be possible, under the farming system.

4. His Excellency in Council observes that no deduction can be permitted from the gross revenue to form a fund or to be added to the provincial assignment. The proposed tehsildaree establishments should be treated as ordinary imperial revenue establishments.

5. It is to be clearly understood that nothing in this resolution applies to the case of any estate not yielding more than Rs. 1,000 a year net revenue. A special addition has been made to the provincial assignment by resolution No. 2368, dated 10th April 1873, to cover the cost of collecting the revenue in such estates, and no further charge in respect to these small estates can now be admitted into the imperial accounts.

ORDER.—Ordered that a copy of the foregoing resolution be communicated to the Department of Agriculture, Revenue, and Commerce, for information and further orders; and to the Accountant-General, Bengal, for information and guidance.

R. B. CHAPMAN,
Secretary to the Govt. of India.

EPIDEMIC FEVER IN MIDNAPORE

No. 257, dated Burdwan, the 28th May 1873.

From—C. T. Buckland, Esq, Commissioner of the Burdwan Division,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial Department.

With reference to your No. 5420 of 7th December, I have the honor to submit in original a report, No. 116, dated 9th instant, with its enclosure, from the Magistrate of Midnapore, regarding the prevalence of the epidemic fever in parts of the district of Midnapore. The enclosure is a map, which is well coloured, so as to show the different characters of the soil in different parts of the district, and to denote those parts to which the fever has extended its ravages.

2. Mr. Harrison's interesting report is so lengthy, and has been so long delayed, that I am unwilling to detain it, or to add to it unnecessarily. Mr. Harrison apologizes for the delay which has occurred, and attributes it chiefly to the late receipt of the report of Dr. Mathew, the Civil Surgeon, which he has now extensively incorporated in his letter. Dr. Mathew has entered at great length, and with much ability, into the history of the fever and its treatment, and other professional points, which will doubtless be duly considered by the higher authorities in the Medical Department.

3. I have several times visited all that part of Midnapore where the fever has broken out. Mr. Harrison has well described the characteristic features of this tract, which are in some degree referable to the great lines of Government embankments which run along the sides of the Selye and Cossye rivers. It must, however, be remembered that these Government embankments are an inheritance which the British Government received from its Hindoo and Mogul predecessors. Long before the British rule was extended to India these embankments were constructed, and gradually raised to a height which must have affected the level and drainage of the adjacent country. Under the British Government the engineers have endeavoured to strengthen and solidify these embankments, and to provide them with sluices, which however apparently seem still to be much in need of improvement. It must be also remembered that these embankments were in existence for more than a century before the first visitation of the epidemic fever to this part of the country.

4. In the fever-stricken villages of Midnapore, such as Ghatal, Nemtolah, and the outskirts of Dasspore, which I visited this year, the people and their surrounding circumstances are as similar as possible to what I have so often seen in the fever-stricken villages of Hooghly and Burdwan during the last four years. Dr. Mathew has described in forcible language the filthy and unwholesome state of these villages, in which the stench is so disgustingly offensive, that the natives who live there and are insensible to it, must have their senses differently constituted from mine. When the people saw me in the villages they came flocking for help, and insisted on taking me to their houses to see their sick women and their afflicted children, and with a great desire that the latter might be touched, as if there might be some virtue in a touch. Although I usually took a Native Doctor with me with suitable medicines, the villagers were very anxious for my manipulation of their spleens, and for my advice, which I am glad to find was given correctly to the convalescents (to whom I tried to limit my practice), as I prescribed a milk diet, of which Dr. Mathew approves.

5. I regret to say that some of the Native Doctors, far removed from supervision, do not behave very creditably; but, as we have no one to substitute for these Native Doctors, we can only make the best of them. Dr. Mathew has reported correctly that I found it necessary to send out a head constable of police in charge of the Native Doctor at Ghatal, to see that he attended properly to the sick poor and did not attempt to take fees from them. The head constable was instructed to send to me special reports twice a week of his expeditions in charge of the Native Doctor, who, when thus strictly looked after, did some better service.

6. From the statement appended to the Magistrate's letter, it appears that from October 1872 to 31st March 1873, 24,007 persons were treated for fever, and only 236 died. I am afraid that these figures do not nearly represent the truth. Along the banks of the rivers, and on the edges of the villages, there were signs of many more funeral obsequies. But whatever the past may have been, it is for the future that provision must now be made, as there is too much reason to apprehend that the fever will make its re-appearance this year on the setting in of the rains.

7. The Magistrate and the Civil Surgeon have suggested that certain medical establishments should be placed at their disposal; but without criticising their proposals at present, I beg to suggest that it is for the Medical Department to give its opinion as to the necessity for employing them, and as to its ability to provide these establishments. I trust that even if only two or three Native Doctors are sent down to the fever tracts of Midnapore, as occasion requires, a special supervising officer, not below the rank of a Sub-Assistant Surgeon, may be deputed to Ghatal to look after them, and to see that they do their duty, and that they are well supplied with quinine and other medicines. I agree with Mr. Harrison that where the villagers agree to pay half the Native Doctor's salary, they should have a prior claim to the appointment of a Native Doctor.

8. If the Medical authorities do not object, I would recommend Mr. Harrison's proposals Nos. 4 to 8 to the favorable consideration of Government. The more co-operation that can be secured, the greater prospect there is of effective resistance being shown to the fever. A few pounds of quinine may be misused or made away with, but, on the other hand, many lives may be saved by its timely and fortunate use even in unskilled hands.

9. I regret to observe that Mr. Harrison, in his paragraph 36, is opposed to the compulsory clearance of jungle or tanks. I had understood that the districts of Kishnaghur and Baraset had obtained a comparative immunity from fever by the enforcement of sanitary measures of this description. When it is a question of life or death, the consideration of the public good should prevail over private interests. It is not possible that a native of this country should be more attached to his filthy tank and sweltering jungle than an English farmer is to his reeking dunghill or his midden; but the farmer has been taught that he must yield to the public good when the spread of typhus fever, or an alarm of cholera, occasionally arouses the British community to the necessity of enforcing the sanitary laws which happily exist, although they too often and too long lie dormant, in England.

10. Finally, I beg to invite the attention of Government to the favorable notice made by Mr. Harrison in paragraph 37 of the conduct of Rajah Jotendro Mohun Tagore, Baboo Ajoodhya Ram Khan, Baboo Lall Behary Dutt, and Baboo Janokee Nath Mookerjee.

No. 116, dated Midnapore, the 9th May 1873.

From—H. L. Harrison, Esq., Magistrate of Midnapore,
To—The Commissioner of the Burdwan Division.

I have the honor to forward herewith the report on epidemic fever in Midnapore called for in your letter No. 70T of the 20th December.

2. The delay in its transmission is due to the fact that Dr. Mathew's report, on which it of course in great measure depends, was only received by me on the 21st April. As the whole of his report ought, I think, to be laid before you, and as it is fatiguing to travel twice over the same ground, I have, instead of sending a separate report, incorporated his integrally in this letter. I have in all cases made it apparent what paragraphs are his, so that he may not be held responsible for any opinions not his own.

3. My report has also been delayed by the necessity of preparing another map,—partly because I want to illustrate in it the physical divisions of the district stated below, partly because the map which Dr. Mathew was so good as to provide was so encumbered with names not needed for this report, and with separate colours for separate thannahs, that it could not be utilized to convey a clear impression of the sanitary features of the district.

4. To understand precisely the circumstances of the affected area, (1) its physical characteristics and (2) the comparative density of the population should be clearly realized. The first characteristic feature of the district is the laterite soil extending over the north-west and north of the district; this is of course the highest land, and as the country there almost uniformly consists of alternate ridges and depressions, the drainage is complete.

5. From this table-land, however, the district by no means slopes away regularly towards the south or south-east, as might be expected. Headed by the laterite near Midnapore town, a valley starts in an eastern or even north-eastern direction towards the Roopnarayan river above Koilah Ghât, which at its eastern end embraces, relatively to the surrounding drainage, the lowest land in the district, and almost absolutely the lowest.

6. It has long since been pointed out that owing to the embanking system, the rivers, when they once got into the low level plains of the delta, are no longer the depressions, but the elevations, of the country: hence it is the simple truth to say that this valley is bounded by the range of the Cossye river on the south, and that of the Selye on the north. A little above Panchkoorah the Cossye, as is well known, was diverted some hundred years or more ago from its proper course, and carried southwards along what the people still call the Nya Kuttan, or new cut, by which it makes its way into the Huldee. Were it allowed to pursue the natural course which the levels of the country indicate, it would continue to be the boundary to this valley till it fell into the Roopnarayan above Koilah Ghât.

7. Almost opposite to this southward deflection of the Cossye the Selye turns in a north-western direction, and thus the valley opens out on both sides, embracing the whole of Pergunnah Chetoua (which is identical with Thannah Dasspore) on the north, and almost the whole of Pergunnah Kassijora to the south.

8. Even here, however, singular as it may seem, the slope is rather towards the north-east than to the south-east; this will be understood in a moment from the single fact that the tides reach above Ghatal on the Selye, while they do not reach Panchkoorah on the Cossye.

9. It naturally follows that in the rains this valley becomes more or less a lagoon. Even at the longitude of Nowadah it has been found impossible to maintain a road across to the Selye or to Ghatal, important as such a road would be; while a little lower down, i.e. further east, notably in Pergunnah Chetoua and round Ghatal itself, the people do not look to the autumn for their crop, but have introduced a vast system of irrigation in the cold weather, which is only feasible on account of the extreme depression of their country.

10. Though the species of valley described is immediately bounded by the embankments of the Selye and Cossye, the general depression passes beyond these rivers and is found again on the other side. This is most conspicuously the case with the Selye, which forms a loop, the southernmost point of which is a mile north of Narajole. Within this loop the country lies very low up to the latitude of Keerpoy; while south of Nowadah the low-lying country extends along the line of the Kerai (a drainage khall over which the high level canal is carried by an aqueduct) down to Pinglah, and southwards till it mingles with the saline tract.

11. Dividing the district, as it may not inaccurately be divided, into (1) laterite, (2) alluvial but littoral and saliferous, (3) alluvial and non-littoral, the latter may be regarded as forming a rough triangle the base of which is the Roopnarayan from Tumlook to Ghatal, and the apex the town of Midnapore—or, more accurately, a point some six miles south-west of it.

12. I next propose to show how the population of the district is distributed over these three areas.

	Area.	Population.	Per square mile.
Beenpore	467	74,271	159
Gopibullubpore	516	120,310	233
Salboney	207	50,860	246

Midnapore	361	172,672	478
Keshpore	229	108,029	476
Naraingurh	300	129,553	432
Littoral.
Dantoor	217	112,372	518
Roghoonathpore	126	54,579	433
Contai	226	122,857	544
Puttaspore	117	81,123	693
Bhugwanpore	184	89,812	488
Kedgeree	75	36,003	480
Nundigram	158	108,827	689
Muslundpore	111	64,188	578
Littoral alluvial.
Subbong	283	214,755	759
Tumlook	77	77,341	1,004
Alluvial.
Ghattal	91	102,742	1,129
Debra	109	110,747	1,016
Panchkoorah	164	163,915	999

13. The above figures show conclusively that the density of the population closely follows the character of the soil. The purely laterite thannahs have a population varying from 159 to 332 per square mile, the purely littoral from 433 to 693, the purely alluvial from 880 to 1,311; this last being Dasspore, which, as already explained, is the pit of the alluvial section, while 880 is Chunderkonah, the northern portion of which is high ground branching off from the laterite and somewhat undulating, though not jungly or stony.

14. The mixed thannahs strictly conform to the same rule, the laterite littoral showing an average population of 432 to the square mile, laterite alluvial of 477, littoral alluvial of 810.

15. Generally, therefore, the district may be classified into—

(1) Laterite, with an area of 2,200 square miles and a population of 250 to the square mile.

(2) Littoral, with an area of somewhat under 2,000 square miles and a population of 550 to the square mile, under which head I include all lands within 40 miles of the sea dyke.

(3) Alluvial, with an area of 1,000 square miles and a population of 1,150 to the square mile.

16. It is only into a portion—but the most alluvial and the most densely-populated portion—of this latter section that the fever has yet spread; and if Dr. Mathew's account of its progress is carefully examined in the map, it will, I think, appear that though in many respects capricious in its action, it has not yet passed into any other tract, while it has deflected from its more natural line of progression from Hooghly and Jehanabad westwards, and chosen a southerly and south-westerly direction, preferring the alluvial soil, and more particularly the depressed valley in the centre of it.

17. It only remains to say that from the Cossye, as from a high level canal, natural channels, acting as distributaries, thread this valley between the two rivers; some of them joining the branches of the Selye, others serving as the streams for irrigating Dasspore in the cold weather. It has been frequently reported to Government on the irrigation side that in the cold weather the main branch of the Cossye is dammed up by a bund at Kapasdigree, in accordance with a prescriptive right of the zemindars, so as to conduct the water into these channels.

18. The natural drainage of this valley is north into the Selye through sluices, which, as Dr. Mathew states, are very defective, and west into the Roopnarayan, also through sluices, not south into the Cossye.

19. With this preliminary description of the character of the soil and population, I now extract Dr. Mathew's account of the premonitory threatenings of the epidemic previous to 1872.

Previous sanitary history of the affected tract.

(1.) "Before proceeding to describe the outbreak of epidemic fever that "has taken place in certain quarters of this district "during the past year, I purpose to briefly allude "to the health of the zillah, with reference to the prevalence of fever, during the "period over which my residence extends.

(2.) "Shortly after my arrival here in August 1869, I heard that a fever, "closely resembling the epidemic which during that season was causing "terrible loss of life in Burdwan, had made its appearance along the line of "country lying between Chunderkonah and Ghatal (at that time a portion of "the Hooghly district), but the disease spread no further during that season, "and the health of that portion of the Midnapore district bordering on the "above-mentioned line of country was very fair during the autumn and cold "season of 1869.

(3.) "During the months of August, September, and October 1870, "malarial fever was widely spread over the alluvial tracts of Midnapore. The "country bordering on Hooghly suffered in common with other localities, such "as Tumlook and the country forming the sea-board.

(4.) "I visited Tumlook and the surrounding villages in the October of "that year, and found that the disease was nothing beyond an aggravation of "the fever usually attendant on the rainy season. It caused little or no "mortality, although numbers of those attacked suffered from enlargement of "the spleen and the other sequelæ of intermittent fever.

(5.) "On my return from Tumlook the police reported that fever was "very prevalent and fatal at Gurbettah and in the low-lying quarters of "Bogree Pergunnah; and, dreading that the epidemic fever which had just then "broken out at Jehanabad had advanced to Midnapore, I proceeded at once to "Gurbettah, and after visiting several large villages in Bogree, I travelled to "Ghatal viâ Chunderkonah and Keerpoy.

(6.) "During the trip I saw many scattered cases of fever; but the type "of the disease differed in no perceptible way from the disease I had seen at "Tumlook, and I accordingly reported to the Magistrate that there were no "grounds for the alarming reports that had reached him regarding the state "of the public health; and as the cold season advanced, those who had been "attacked regained their usual health.

(7.) "No more was heard of the disease until October 1871, the police "then reporting that fever had broken out and was causing many deaths at a "place called Nowadah, a large village on the southern bank of the Cossye "river, about 18 miles to the east of the sudder station.

(8.) "I visited the place early in November, and found that a fatal type of "intermittent and remittent fever had broken out some two months before, "and that out of a population of about 4,000 some 70 deaths had taken place.

(9.) "The surrounding villages, although subject to the same general "insanitary influences, were comparatively healthy, although I now believe "that the disease was more widely spread and fatal during the latter months "of 1871 than was suspected at the time.

(10.) "I found two Native Doctors in practice in the place. They stated "that the disease was at its height during the latter part of September and "the first three weeks of October.

(11.) "They had seen several cases of malignant remittent fever, but "this was during the first outbreak; the type of the disease subsequently "changing to the intermittent with the usual sequelæ.

(12.) "During the months of November and December the health of the "people improved; and when I visited the place early in the following January, "I found that no deaths from either fever or its results had taken place for "several weeks, and that the people had lost in a great measure that unhealthy "and anæmic appearance which had characterized them two months before.

(13.) "Scattered cases of fever had occurred in the surrounding villages, "and I was inclined at the time to believe that their immunity from anything "like an epidemic invasion was due to the fact of their having a better water-"supply from the adjacent river than the people of Nowadah, who used for "drinking purposes the water of the filthy village tanks. A subsequent "paragraph will, however, tend to show how untenable the theory of the "fever-producing power of impure water was in this particular instance.

(14.) "About the end of November 1871 again the police reported that "fever had broken out along the line of country bordering on Hooghly, and "that it was raging with particular severity at Dasspore and the adjacent "villages.

(15.) "I arrived at the Dasspore Thannah on the 3rd of December. "I found that malarial fever had been prevalent for the last two months, that "numerous deaths had taken place both in Dasspore and surrounding villages, "and the people one and all declared that the sickness and mortality was far "in excess of anything of which there was any record.

(16.) "During that trip I visited six large villages in Pergunnah "Dasspore, and I afterwards proceeded along the Selye river to Ghatal.

(17.) "From inquiries instituted there and in the villages surrounding, "I came to the conclusion that the epidemic fever which had prevailed at "Jehanabad had advanced to the villages surrounding Ghatal, and was from "thence spreading along the river-banks to Dasspore.

(18.) "I was greatly struck on this occasion by the unequal incidence "of the disease,—not only in different villages, but in different houses in the "same village; some households suffering severely, while others, as far as could "be judged, under precisely the same circumstances, escaped altogether.

(19.) "It is noteworthy that during the autumn of 1871 Tumlook "Pergunnah and that quarter of the district forming the sea-board was "remarkably free from all forms of malarial disease, and the same remark "applies to the laterite country, which may be said to form roughly about "one-third of the area of the entire district."

20. It will appear from the foregoing account that the fever at first made a sort of attempt, such as it still continues to make, to extend in the natural direction westwards to Keerpoy, Chunderkonah, and Gurbettah,—the former alluvial, though high alluvial; the second on the edge of the laterite, though itself on alluvial soil; and the third in the middle of the laterite, though low-lying and surrounded by cultivation,—but that it failed to take any serious hold of those places, and then struck southwards into the low-lying, densely-populated tracts of Dasspore.

21. Dr. Mathew thus continues the narrative for the year 1872:—

History for 1872.

(21.) "During the first week in September the police reported that fever "had become very prevalent and fatal at Narajole and in several of the "adjacent villages.

(22.) "A glance at the accompanying maps shows the situation of Nara-"jole on the banks of a narrow stream which connects the Selye and Cossye

"rivers. On the southern bank of this stream are situated the large and "scattered villages of Bowaneepore, Herratollah, Patna, Singaghur, &c., and "still further to the southward lies the large pergunnah of Sharpore; and "attention is directed to these localities, as it was there the disease raged "in a very deadly form from the very first. There are grounds for the belief "that the disease had been very prevalent during the months of August, and "that it was not until many deaths had taken "place that the attention of the authorities was "directed to the matter, or indeed that of the "people residing in the locality.

N.B.—The general prevalence of dengue fever much impeded in getting correct information, as all the fever-stricken places at first believed they were visited by dengue.

(23.) "Before the end of October reports were received from the police "that malarial fever was rife and fatal within the jurisdictions of the Chunder-"konah, Ghatal, Debra, and Dasspore police stations. Within the jurisdiction "of the latter is the town of Narajole and the villages above alluded to.

(24.) "It will be thus observed, on referring to the map, that a consider-"able tract of country was under the influence of the epidemic, but the "incidence of the disease was irregular both as regards its prevalence and "fatality.

(25.) "As a rule, the villages in which the greatest mortality took place "were those where the diseases prevailed during the previous years, i.e. the "villages surrounding Ghatal, Dasspore, and its vicinity.

(26.) "An exception to this, however, is to be found in those villages "near Narajole where, as before mentioned, the disease was more prevalent "and deadly than in any other quarter of the district, and yet there is no "evidence to show that there was any unusual prevalence of sickness in these "places during the year 1871.

(27.) "It will be observed that the villages of Bowaneepore, Herratollah, "&c., are separated from Narajole town and bazar by a narrow stream. There "was no very marked difference in the sanitary condition of those places. "Perhaps if anything Narajole is less cumbered by jungle and the houses "less crowded, yet the difference in the incidence of the disease is very marked.

(28.) "On the 7th of November 1872 I visited 22 houses in the village "of Bowaneepore; two months previous to my visit they were occupied by 164 "people, and of those 90 were ill at the time of my visit and 41 had died. In "Narajole I visited 69 houses, and found they were occupied by 325 people, "and of these 132 were ill and only 12 had died.

(29.) "Many other instances could be cited tending to show how "eccentric the disease has been in its progress, and I will allude to one other.

(30.) "It will be remembered that the village of Nowadah suffered severely "in 1871, and that during that season the smaller villages in its vicinity, "on both banks of the Cossye river, suffered hardly at all; yet during the past "season there was little or no sickness in Nowadah, but the surrounding "villages had a severe visitation of fever.

(31.) "It is to be hoped that they may escape next year, and that the "fever from which they suffered this year was only an aggravation "of the disease usually attendant on the rainy season; but the persistence "of the disease during the cold weather months, and the high rate of mortality, "are suspicious; and, moreover, they lie in the track along which the disease "appears to be advancing.

(32.) "It is a matter of no small difficulty to distinguish between the "epidemic fever in the early periods of its invasion and the aggravated "malarial fever which now and then attacks particular villages, and which "seems to depend on local sanitary influences.

(33.) "The inhabitants of a large village named Pingelah were very "much alarmed during the past season on account of the prevalence of fever. "It is situated some eight miles to the southward of Debra, and is within the "jurisdiction of the Subbong Thannah. I visited the place early in December, "and carefully inspected the village.

(34.) "The country between it and Debra seemed fairly healthy, yet on "my arrival at Pingelah I found that the people had been suffering much. I "saw many cases of fever, and some deaths had taken place; but even then "the worst was over, and before the end of December the health of the people "had much improved, the very time when the mortality in the epidemic-"stricken quarters was at its height.

(35.) "Ordinary malarial fever was widely spread over the district "during the past season. The localities where it most prevailed will be seen "by a reference to the map. The quarters of the district where there was no "unusual prevalence of malarial disease is the laterite country and the country "forming the sea-board.

(36.) "Tumlook, long regarded as the most unhealthy quarters of the "district, was again healthy during the past season; and there is a popular "saying amongst the natives, and on the whole a true one, that the only "quarters of the district that escaped fever during the past season, were those "where the soil is laterite and where the water is brackish."

22. Dr. Mathew's remarks, and still more his facts, so strongly support the position I have taken up, that the fever manifests a marked preference for, if it does not restrict itself to, low-lying non-littoral alluvial country, that it is but right to mention that he drew up his report without any consultation with me on this point, and was quite unaware of the special line of argument which I have followed.

23. My own observation of the course of the fever entirely supports what the Civil Surgeon has written, and it will be observed that it again failed to make serious progress towards Chunderkonah. This is the more remarkable because, as far as population alone is concerned, Keerpoy and Chunderkonah probably surpass any part of the district, except the sudder station of Midnapore, in density of population. Keerpoy, owing to the artificial arrangements of the chowkeydaree unions in its neighbourhood, is split into sections, and therefore does not figure high in the census; but the villages grouped round Chunderkonah form the second largest town in the district with an aggregate population of 22,000; and, so far as this cause and insanitation are concerned, it should have readily yielded to the fever. It escaped, however, as did Keerpoy, with a moderate attack somewhat in excess of the ordinary malaria of the season, while the severe mortality, the traces of which struck one so painfully in passing through Dasspore and Narajole, was fortunately absent.

24. I am far from saying that Keerpoy and Chunderkonah will escape; they are only on relatively high ground, not on the laterite, and I fear that the fever showed some slight tendency to gain ground in 1872. All I contend for is that the epidemic seems to have experienced a marked check in this quarter, while it poured on in an unrestrained stream through Dasspore towards pergunnahs Narajole and Shahpore.

Dr. Mathew continues—

(37.) "The physical aspect of the country where the epidemic fever "prevailed presents no features that call for very "special mention.

(38.) "The affected line of country may be briefly described as a flat "alluvial plain, formed of the combined deltas of the Cossye and Selye rivers, "and intersected by numerous khalls, all of which are embanked. Connecting "these rivers is the stream on which the town of Narajole stands, and to which "allusion has already been made."

25. As the earlier portion of this report shows, I cannot agree with Dr. Mathew in his estimate of the non-peculiarity of the physical features of the affected tract. I think the north-east slope of the country, and the very low level of Ghatal and Dasspore, as illustrated by the height of the tides, well worthy of careful attention; but I need not again revert to the subject.

He continues—

Embankments.

(39.) "During the rainy season the country is under rice cultivation and "is protected from inundation by a complicated "system of embankments or bunds.

(40.) "These bunds are a characteristic feature of this part of the country, "forming in many places the only high roads, and are no doubt of immense "importance. I now allude to what are known as the Government embank-"ments which follow the courses of the principal rivers.

(41.) "In addition to these are another series of embankments known as "the zemindary bunds, and with reference to the utility of these structures "some doubts in many instances seem to exist.

(42.) "It would appear that in former years each landholder made such "arrangements for protecting his land from inundation as seemed to him most "suitable, and running in almost every direction. These bunds certainly act as "potent obstructors of the natural drainage of the country, and it is the "opinion of the engineer in charge of the irrigation works in this district that "many of them might be removed with considerable advantage.

(43.) "The Government embankments no doubt control the floods, and "their utility, as far as I know, has never been questioned; but there can be "very little doubt that they also obstruct the drainage of the country, and that "to a very serious extent.

(44.) "The sluicing arrangements are lamentably deficient, and only "allow surface water to flow off. They are much too few in number, "and are, moreover, faulty in construction; their floors are in many instances "above the level of the country, so that their utility for drainage purposes "may well be questioned.

(45.) "I am given to understand that estimates for repairing and "constructing no less than 60 sluices on one embankment alone have been "prepared; and with a system of bunds that stand in need of such all-important "alterations, I think it may be assumed that the surface drainage of the "country is obstructed and the subsoil water-logged.

(46.) "The land lying between the embankment and the river-banks "is considerably higher than the country surrounding, and the deposition of "silt in seasons of flood is, I suppose, the chief cause of this. In many parts "of the district the mulberry is extensively cultivated along the river-banks, "and, owing to the fertilizing influences of the river, thrives well."

26. To the above description I have little to add and nothing to find fault with, unless it be the tenderness with which the Government embankments are treated. The river-beds having been raised by the constant deposit of silt, to abandon these embankments now would no doubt involve enormous tracts in total ruin; but it was this system of embanking which has deprived the country of its natural increment of deposit and kept it permanently depressed, while its drainage channels have gradually become irrigation channels, its waterways choked up, and the whole area water-logged.

State of villages

(47.) "With the exception of some scattered mango topes, there is "nothing like forest land in the affected quarters of the district, and but little "jungle except in the immediate neighbourhood "of the villages, which are surrounded by bamboo, "plantain trees, &c., and during the rainy season there is in addition a "considerable quantity of useless undergrowth.

(48.) "The sanitary condition of the villages, it is needless to say, is "deplorably bad in every respect. Buried in jungle, studded with filthy tanks, "houses crowded together and surrounded by all kinds of filth, are the most "common characteristics of the villages of the district.

(49.) "The water-supply is contaminated and the atmosphere laden "with the gaseous products of rotting vegetation and the excreta of the "inhabitants. This description applies with equal truth to villages where the "fever manifested itself in its most fatal form, and where scarcely a case "occurred. Every village that I have ever visited is pervaded by odours "more or less offensive.

(50.) "Utterly regardless of every law that conduces to health, the "villagers remain on year after year surrounded by all those oft-described "sources of nuisance with which we are only too familiar: and that the people "not only live in such places, but increase and multiply into the bargain, is "a pretty clear proof that stench per se will not cause disease, and that its "deleterious effects on health bear no proportion to its offensiveness.

People and occupation

(53.) "The better class of habitations are well raised, usually some three "feet. The arrangement usually seen is a central court with a narrow "verandah running round all four sides, off which the rooms open, and which, "as a rule, are only lighted and ventilated by the door-way. The houses are "kept clean, and the rooms and verandahs are regularly leeped.

(54.) "The poorer classes live in small huts about 14×10, greatest "height about 12 feet. These structures are lighted and ventilated by the "door-way.

(56.) "With regard to the circumstances of the people, I believe them "to be moderately good. Since the year 1866 there has been no scarcity of "food in the district, and there are no grounds for the belief that in the "quarters of the zillah where fever prevailed the condition of the people in "this respect has undergone change during the past three years.

(57.) From a sanitary point of view, however, it may be assumed that the habits of the people and many of their customs, the air they breathe, the water they drink, and the food they eat, are all opposed to the attainment of health or vigor; and the only wonder is that they possess either one or the other to the limited extent they do.

N B—No figures were given in the margin, but I have fully analysed in the opening part of the report the incidence of the population.

(58.) "In the Midnapore district at large the population is irregularly distributed. I note in the "margin its incidence to the square mile in the "pergunnahs in which the fever prevailed

(59.) "At Keerpoy, within the jurisdiction of the Chunderkonah Thannah, "the population is particularly dense. Indeed at Keerpoy village succeeds "village for nearly three miles with hardly a break, it being a matter of diffi-"culty for the visitor to determine where one commences and the other ends."

28. Agreeing as I do entirely with all that is here written, I have little to add to it. The description given by Dr. Mathew applies, as is well known, to all the alluvial tracts in Bengal where the drainage is choked up and the population overgrown. But if the most populated, it is also the wealthiest part of the district: whether tested by its crops, its wealth, its schools, or its castes, it ranks first. It is here that the only jute grown in the district is found; sugar-cane is grown in abundance. Nowadah is the great emporium of gour in the district. Ghatal, again, is the wealthiest town in the district next to Midnapore; all the traffic of the northern section passes through it. A toll at its entrance, on a very bad cutcha road, lets for over Rs. 4,000 a year. Again, the patshalas that have come in under the new scheme in this neighbourhood outnumber those in the littoral tract as 3 to 1, and in the laterite as 10 to 1. Here too the Brahmins and Kaests of the district are to be found, and the "bhodrolok" are so numerous that I have heard it said, with reference to this fever, "it is better to die in Dasspore than to live in one of the jungle mehals."

(60.) "So much has already been written on this subject by the able "and experienced officers who have watched the progress of the disease "in other districts, that it seems hardly necessary for me to dwell here at any "length on the subject. It is a malarious fever, the intermittent being the "type by far the most commonly met with. In the early periods of its "invasion remittent cases are sometimes encountered, many of which end "fatally. The attack sometimes commences with violent vomiting and purging, "the motions being profuse and watery; great prostration rapidly supervenes, "almost amounting to collapse.

(61.) "Reaction is characterized by great heat of body with determi-"nation to the head. A not uncommon complication of this fever is pneumonia, "on the supervention of which the fever assumes a continued character, "typhoid symptoms manifest themselves, and unless the complication be "promptly treated, it rapidly leads to a fatal termination.

(63.) "The rapidity with which the abdominal organs become involved "seems one of its most striking characteristics. Rapid emaciation, digestive "power lost or much impaired, œdema of the lower extremities, with marked "pallor of the mucus surfaces, are the symptoms which attend all the more "severe cases.

(64.) "The supervention of dysentery and diarrhœa is not unfrequent, "and in many chronic cases scorbutic symptoms are very manifest.

(65.) "The epidemic fever has the following characteristics:—its severity "over a large tract of country, as shown by the large proportion of the popu- "lation attacked; the rapidity and certainty with which internal organs "become involved; the tendency to, and frequency of, relapse, and marked "emaciation with which the disease is attended; the excessive mortality, "and its persistence and increased fatality as the cold season advances.

(66.) "On this subject officers who have had much experience of the "disease are on the whole pretty well agreed.

Treatment.

"Quinine stands first in estimation, especially in "the early stages of the disease. In remittent fever it is usual to wait for "the stage of remission before administering the antiperiodic; but it appears "to me there are other stages of this disease in which quinine can be "administered with signal advantage, and where it would not be judicious "to delay its administration pending the action of purgatives and other "remedies.

(67.) "However, in ordinary cases of fever, when there is much bilious "derangement, with nausea, &c., purgatives and diaphoretics are generally "called for, and the action of quinine seems to be rendered more certain and "rapid by their use.

(68.) "I think it was Sir Ranold Martin who praised so much a powder "composed of jalap, calomel, and tartar emetic. Two grains of the latter is "the dose he advocates in the treatment of the fever of natives. I saw "few cases during the past two years to whom I would have administered a "dose of the kind, for it is unfortunately the case that the people of this district "do not apply for treatment until the time for such remedies has passed.

(69.) "It is, however, chronic fever and its sequelæ that we are called "upon most frequently to treat. To deal successfully with these cases appears "to me one of the most perplexing and difficult task a medical officer can "undertake.

(70.) "The condition of such patients is truly deplorable, and calculated "to arouse our liveliest pity. It is probable that if advised, and medicine were "placed within the reach of these people when first attacked, a vast amount of "suffering and disease would be prevented.

(71.) "When once the extremities become dropsical, with enlargement "of the liver and spleen, remedies such as we can place within the reach of a "vast proportion of the sufferers are of little avail.

(72.) "The stomach appears to me to participate more fully than is "usually recognised in the general degeneration the tissues are involved in; "and without for a moment denying the immense importance of nutritious "food in the treatment of such cases, yet I am disposed to think that more "benefit would be derived from it in the early stages of the disease before the "digestive powers had become impaired.

(73.) "There is, however, one article of diet that I would like to see "given to these people, and that is good milk. In a great number of cases there "is bowel disorder of some kind or other, and the late Dr. Fawcus placed "great reliance on milk dietary in such cases, giving but little medicine.

(74.) "I would feel disposed to follow his advice to a certain extent, "should it ever become my duty to superintend relief operations on an "extended scale for this class of people. I should certainly prefer it to meat "in any shape,—an article of diet to which the poor of this district are utterly "unaccustomed, and which, particularly when sick, they are not likely to "digest.

(75.) "With reference to the treatment of chronic fever and its results, "the salts of iron, combined with the mineral acids, are the class of remedies "which seemed to answer best. For cases of fever where enlargement of the "spleen only exists, quinine with large doses of sulphuric acid are remedies "which often succeed; counter-irritation over the region of the spleen, with a "weak preparation of the biniodide of mercury ointment in recent cases of "fever, when no marked evidence of blood deterioration exists, is a remedy of "great power.

(76.) "Dr. Maclean of the Victoria Hospital, Netley, some time ago "directed the attention of the profession to the use of these ointments in cases "of splenic hypertrophy, and as far as my experience goes it seems to be well "worthy of the praises bestowed on it by that officer. In cases where marked "pallor of the mucus surfaces exists, as in old cases of fever, this remedy does "not seem to answer, its application being frequently followed by profuse "salivation."

30. On these two points I need make no comments.

(77.) "Early in September the Magistrate called my attention to the "prevalence of fever at Narajole and the neighbouring villages. The police also about the same "time reported that the disease had broken out at Shahpore and other places "within the jurisdiction of the Debra police station. With the concurrence "of Mr. Price, the Settlement Officer, the Native Doctor in charge of the survey "party, who was then unemployed in the station, was ordered to proceed at "once to Narajole with the necessary medicines. This officer showed a marked "disinclination to undertake the duty. He had not done an hour's work during "the two previous months, and seemed much surprised at being ordered to "exert himself in any way.

(78.) "When informed that his services were temporarily placed at my "disposal, he appealed to Mr. Price and eventually reported himself ill. After "a week's delay he proceeded to Narajole, and although I did not expect that "much assistance would be rendered by so unwilling a subordinate, yet it is due "to the man to say that subsequently he worked well and willingly, and rendered "good service at Narajole and the adjacent villages.

(79.) "In the meantime I proceeded to Debra, and from thence to "Panchkoorah, travelling through the densely-populated tract of country lying "between the high road to Calcutta and the Cossye river.

(80.) "On my return to Midnapore, with the concurrence of the Magistrate, "the Native Doctor in charge of the police hospital was ordered to Shahpore, "where I learned that fever prevailed to a serious extent. He was stationed "about six miles to the north of the Debra police station. After a short time "reports reached me that he was not going on well. The people complained "that he would only attend those who were in a position to pay him, and that "he was in fact dishonestly disposing of the medicine that had been placed in "his hands.

(81.) "I would have recalled the man, but unfortunately his services "could not then be well dispensed with. Notwithstanding warnings, both "written and verbal, he at length committed himself to such an extent that "he was subsequently convicted before the Joint-Magistrate of cheating and "sentenced to six months' imprisonment and fined Rs. 100.

(82.) "Meanwhile the Magistrate had established a temporary dispensary "at Narajole. A Native Doctor, named Kissen Sing, was appointed to the charge "of it, and on his arrival from Calcutta, and pending the completion of the "cutcha dispensary building at Narajole, he was ordered to Dasspore, where "fever then had broken out and was causing a heavy mortality.

(83.) "On my visiting Dasspore, a week after his appointment, I found "him prostrated with fever. He was subsequently transferred to Narajole, and "remained in charge of the dispensary until the end of February.

(84.) "The Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals sent two Native "Doctors from the Presidency. One of these was at once sent to Dasspore "to relieve Kissen Sing, and the other was deputed to assist the Native Doctor

" belonging to the survey party who was stationed at Bowaneepore and the " other villages near Narajole, to which allusion has already been made.

(85.) " The urgent calls for medical assistance from other districts hardly " left a man at the disposal of the Deputy Inspector-General, and I consequently " sent an experienced and intelligent compounder to treat the sick at a village " called Bulliarpore, about one mile from the Dasspore police station. This " man and the Native Doctor stationed at Dasspore did fair service. The " Magistrate when visiting Dasspore found them fully employed, and they " seemed to have gained to a great extent the confidence of the people.

(86.) " When I visited Ghatal, I ordered the Native Doctor in charge of the " dispensary to visit regularly the surrounding villages and prescribe for the sick. " He, however, allowed his supply of medicine to become exhausted, never " intimating the fact to me; and when the Commissioner visited Ghatal, early " in December, he found that the Native Doctor was neglecting his duty, and " had never visited a single village. My orders with regard to visiting the " villages were recorded in the Visitors' Book, and as far as I know the Native " Doctor had not the shadow of an excuse to offer for deliberately ignoring my " instruction.

(87.) " Mr. Buckland, rightly conceiving that the man could not be " trusted, deputed a constable to escort him daily to the affected villages; and " when I visited Ghatal, in January, I found the Native Doctor distributing " medicine to a large crowd in a village about a mile from Ghatal.

(88.) " The disestablishment of the Kissengunge charitable dispensary " placed the services of another Native Doctor at " our disposal. He was first deputed to treat the " sick in the villages near Debra, and afterwards was ordered to Bowaneepore " and the other villages near Narajole, to replace the Native Doctor belonging " to the survey party, whose services were again required by the Settlement " Officer.

N.B.—An aided dispensary near Tumlook in the littoral tract.

(90.) " These figures give but a very inadequate idea of the actual amount " of sickness and the mortality that resulted.

(91.) " It is abundantly clear that the people of the district have not " much confidence in the European system of treatment, especially when " administered by their own countrymen, except in localities where dispensaries " have been working for some years.

(92.) " Koberajes, a numerous and influential class, still hold their ground " in the mofussil, and I found a large proportion of the sufferers under their " treatment. When a villager is attacked by fever the koberaj is sent for, and it " is only after he has failed, or when the resources of the patient are exhausted, " that the Government Native Doctor is applied to.

(93.) " Another individual, no less active in his opposition to the system " of gratuitous medical relief, is the wandering compounder. During the past " six months I have frequently encountered this class of practitioners in the " villages I visited.

(94.) " His qualifications are limited. He generally knows the doses of " drugs and how to prepare them, and that is about all. He generally intro- " duces himself as a Native Doctor who has abandoned Government service. " His supply of drugs are limited and are of dubious quality. He undertakes " the cure of the prevailing disease for a certain fixed sum, a portion of which " is paid in advance. The length of his stay is regulated by the amount of " practice he succeeds in obtaining and the emolument therefrom resulting.

(95.) " Doubt seems to exist as to whether these men should be opposed " or encouraged; I think the former. In the course of years, as duly qualified " men seek for practice in the mofussil, the compounders will disappear; but " in the meantime they victimise the simple villagers and bring discredit on " the medical profession."

31. I do not entirely concur in these opinions; but as I do not want unnecessarily to increase the length of this already bulky report, I will content myself with remarking that the experience which the people of the country have had of Native Doctors is not so very gratifying that we need be surprised at their being somewhat slow to place confidence in them. It will, I think, be found that if a Native Doctor be located in a place and behaves himself creditably, he will within a month command the entire confidence of the inhabitants.

32. I now pass on to the last and most important question, viz. what arrangements should be made to deal with the epidemic in its future ravages, which may be only too confidently anticipated.

Proposed measures for the current year

(96.) "The experience gained in other districts, and indeed in Midnapore, "also leads us to the belief that as the rainy "and autumn months approach, a fresh outbreak "of the epidemic may be expected along the tract of country where it prevailed "in 1872.

(97.) "One fact that ought to be borne in mind is that assistance to be "effectual must be rendered in time, and precautions should be taken so as to "ensure that the first appearance of the disease in the affected quarters "should be brought promptly to notice, and remedies placed within the reach "of the sick in the early stages of the disease. The leading native gentlemen "residing in the fever-stricken quarters should be asked to interest themselves "in the matter and bring to the notice of the Magistrate exceptional "sickness, should any occur, and not wait until the village chowkeydar considers "it necessary to take action in the matter.

(98.) "The Magistrate will probably bring to the notice of Government "the few native gentlemen that extended a helping hand to their suffering "countrymen and dependants during the past season; but as far as could be "judged, the apathy and want of sympathy displayed by the vast majority "was most marked and disheartening.

(99.) "It is clear that the poor of this district will have to rely solely on "Government for any assistance they may require; and to what amount that "assistance can be rendered, must necessarily depend on the extent medical aid "will be required in other districts.

(100.) "Temporary dispensaries should be opened at Chunderkonah and "Keerpoy, and to each dispensary two Native Doctors should be attached. "One of these should be constantly on the move, while the other should "remain at the dispensary to treat those who may come for treatment, as well "as the sick in the adjoining villages.

(101.) "A definite area should be allotted to each dispensary, and "weekly returns demanded, showing the number treated, died, &c., and the "quantity of quinine expended. There is already a dispensary at Ghatal, and "to that a travelling Native Doctor should also be attached.

(102.) "Dasspore Pergunnah requires at the very least two dispensaries "and four Native Doctors; Narajole, one dispensary for the town and two "Native Doctors; and for the line of country between Narajole and the Debra "Thannah, three dispensaries with six Native Doctors.

(103.) "A special Superintendent should be appointed to superintend "the working of the dispensaries and the proceedings of the Native Doctors.

(104.) "His supervision to be effectual must be constant, and his visits "unexpected by his subordinates. The orders laid down debarring Native "Doctors on special duty of this kind from taking fees should be rigidly "enforced, and on no account should a Native Doctor be allowed to take money, "no matter what the position of his patient may be.

(105.) "In a previous paragraph I alluded to the sanitary condition of "the villages, and I have no doubt, were it practicable to free them from the "jungle by which they are cumbered and improve the water-supply, considerable benefit would result.

(106.) "Dr. Elliot has pointed out forcibly and clearly what should be done "in this direction, and it is greatly to be regretted that no means of effectually "carrying out the measures he advocates appear to be available, and consequently the utility of further alluding to the subject here appears doubtful."

34. It will be seen that Dr. Mathew applies for nine dispensaries and eighteen Native Doctors; two attached to each dispensary, one to travel, and the other to treat the dispensary patients. He also applies for a Superintendent, by which he means, I understand, an officer of the rank of Sub-Assistant Surgeon to supervise the Native Doctors. So far I entirely concur: it is obvious that the more Native Doctors the Government can spare, the more effectually we can combat the ravages of the fever.

35. Assuming, however, that so large a supply will not be available, at any rate, until it is actually proved that the district is very severely attacked, I would ask sanction to the following proposals:—

(1) That the Civil Surgeon and myself may have the disposal of two complete dispensaries and four Native Doctors, entirely supplied by Government, to locate wherever we think they are most needed and the people least able to help themselves.

(2) That a Native Doctor and medicines be sent to any place within the affected area where the inhabitants agree to pay half the Doctor's salary. This the people of the villages opposite Narajole have already spontaneously offered to do on hearing that the Doctor was likely to be withdrawn.

(3) That quinine be entrusted to the gentlemen named by the British Indian Association in their letter of the 7th November 1872:—

1. Moddon Mohun Singh,
2. Bholanath Roy,
3. Radhakant Ghosal,
4. Jogessar Pahary,
5. Nobin Chunder Haldar,
6. Shibnarain Ghuttuck,
7. Koylash Chunder Mookerjee,
8. Ram Coomar Gangooly,
9. Puttit Pabon Pattra,
10. Seetul Persad Chowdry,
11. Mehur Chunder Roy,
12. Kristo Komul Masunto, with simple instructions for its administration. They have all agreed to distribute it.

(4) That a supply of quinine be placed for sale at each police station and outpost at 20 per cent. below cost price, and a discretionary power be given to the officer in charge to administer it gratis to any poor patients, keeping a list of the names and amounts.

(5) That to every schoolmaster and patshala guru in connection with Government a certain quantity of quinine be given for the use of himself and his pupils. Schools and patshalas are particularly numerous in this part of the district. Over 200 patshalas have accepted connection with Government on the terms offered recently, and there are some 20 or 25 schools. I would propose to make a fixed allowance to each guru—say an ounce, if this would not be too liberal—and let him know that the supply would not be repeated. I would then give him to understand that if he found that it was not all needed for himself and his pupils, he might give it in charity to other indigent sufferers, and I would instruct him how to do so.

No doubt many of the gurus would sell it, as do the Native Doctors and every body who can get the command of so valuable an article; but after all, even if sold, it will entail no greater cost on Government, while it will disseminate pure quinine where it is most needed. On the other hand, it will invest the gurus with some importance in their villages,—an object which I look on as desirable in itself. I would, however, expressly prohibit them from selling it while authorising them to give it away, and make this prohibition and permission generally known. One cannot but hope that if that be done, partly through fear, partly through honesty, a good deal will be gratuitously distributed where it is most needed.

I do not propose to give this to all gurus in the affected area, whether the fever be in their neighbourhood or not, but only to those who are in places that are attacked.

(6) I submit that instead of opposing, we should endeavour to utilise, the services of all duly qualified private practitioners. Hitherto I do not think I am wrong in saying that the practical attitude of the Government and the department in the interior is one of hostility. The private practitioner is struggling probably to make a practice. When a dispensary is (as for instance at Hajeepore) planted exactly opposite his door, he is of course under-sold; and just when he might most hope to make his way, he finds the ground cut from under his feet. This is the way he practically realizes the encouragement he often listened to in Calcutta about starting on his own merits and avoiding the error of his fellow students in looking exclusively to Government for employment.

I do not deny that as a whole this class are selfish—as they have to live by their profession it can hardly be otherwise, and that they are in great measure strangers to that sympathy for suffering among the poor which so honorably distinguishes the profession in parts of Europe; but I think they deserve encouragement, and would offer each duly licensed practitioner a certain quantity of quinine (say 4 oz. or 8 oz., or even 1 lb, if the fever in his neighbourhood is very bad) on condition that he would, as far as it went, distribute it gratis among poor sufferers. These practitioners would I believe accept, and if they sold some, they would probably also distribute a good deal gratuitously. We know of four such licensed practitioners within the affected area—one at Chunderkonah, one at Ghatal, and two at Nowadah.

(7.) I would, in every village of 500 persons and upwards attacked by the fever, appoint a punchayet of three or more persons to superintend the distribution of quinine in their village in the manner above described, to report every week the state of the fever, number of deaths, &c., and bring to notice any delinquencies or shortcomings on the part of those entrusted with quinine. In each such village there will probably be at least one guru: where there is not, one of the members of the punchayet might be entrusted with quinine. In the townships of Ghatal and Chunderkonah, and the unions of Keerpoy and Ramjebunpore, the town committees should be selected.

(8.) The directions as to the use of quinine, and the cases where it can safely be given, should be printed, and a copy given to every one who receives any for distribution. I need scarcely say that if a Sub-Assistant Surgeon can be spared to superintend the operations in this district, it will be most conducive towards effectual supervision.

36. I ought not to omit to say, with reference to Dr. Mathew's paragraphs 105 and 106, that I earnestly protest against any attempt to clear away jungle or clean out tanks compulsorily in the affected villages. I saw a great deal of these measures when at Baraset, and afterwards at Krishnaghur, when these two places were both under the influence of the epidemic, and am convinced that they lead to a great deal of oppression, destruction of valuable property, expense, and no corresponding benefit. If done thoroughly, they might lead to good results; but to do this it would be necessary to spend thousands of rupees in each village.

37. The gentlemen who assisted this year in the relief of the distress were—

1. Rajah Jotendro Mohun Tagore, who sent a Native Doctor to Kootubpore, though without placing him en rapport with the authorities or communicating the fact to us.

2. Baboo Ajoodhya Ram Khan, commonly called Rajah of Midnapore, whose residence is at Narajole. This gentleman supported a private dispensary of his own at his house, and also paid towards a Government dispensary in another part of the town.

3. Baboo Lall Behary Dutt of Chinsurah, who sent me Rs. 100 towards the relief of the indigent.

4. Baboo Janokee Nath Mookerjee of Boinchee, who sent me Rs. 40 for the relief of the indigent.

38. Dr. Mathew concludes his report with the subject of causation as follows:—

(107.) "On this subject I have but few observations to offer. The disease is due to the action of a poison which we call malaria for want of a better name.

Causation.

(108.) "Notwithstanding however the many, and indeed probable, causes "that have from time to time been discussed as tending to produce the "epidemic, it appears to me that their disease-producing powers have always "been admitted, and it is certainly very clear that all these conditions which "are said to produce this epidemic have existed for many years without produc- "ing any other effect on the public health except those periodic outbreaks "of fever with which every European resident in Bengal is familiar, and from "which every native of the country suffers at some time or other. The "appearance of the disease in the laterite tracts of Beerbhoom clearly shows "that a water-logged subsoil is not a necessary condition for its propagation.

(109.) "The epidemic fever, as far as I know, has not as yet made its "appearance in any village in this district built on laterite soil, nor does the "disease appear to be advancing in the direction of the laterite country. I "regard it as an advance of the Hooghly epidemic; but by what means the "disease has been introduced I am not prepared to say. The disease is not "spread by human intercourse, otherwise the station of Midnapore would "have been the scene of an outbreak any time since 1869.

(110.) "Many people suffering from the epidemic fever of Hooghly and "Burdwan have come to Midnapore and never introduced the disease into the "town. During the past cold weather numbers of people from Dasspore and "Ghatal were treated at the charitable dispensary, many of whom are at "present living in the town, yet no outbreak of the epidemic fever has "occurred.

(111.) "Residence in an affected locality, no matter the condition of life, "gives rise to the disease, and that with a certainty that few people, no matter "how strongly they may deny the presence of a specific poison, would like "to test in their own persons.

(112.) "I know of two instances of native gentlemen occupying influen- "tial and lucrative positions in this district visiting their homes in Burdwan "in perfect health and their contracting an attack of the prevailing fever, of "which they both died in the course of a few months.

(113.) "In conclusion I have to apologise for the great delay that has "taken place in submitting the report. The accompanying map is, I fear, "inaccurate in many respects; but it is the only one that it was possible to "procure, and it is to be hoped that it will suffice to illustrate roughly the line "of country affected by the epidemic. But owing to the irregularity in the "incidence of the disease, to show that with anything like accuracy on a "map, would be a matter of great difficulty, and would still further delay "the submission of this report."

39. I need only add that all the facts in this district favor the prevail- ing opinion that the epidemic is due to a concurrence of causes partly known, partly unknown. It finds a congenial home in a depressed and water-logged country, a dense population, and all the insanitary surroundings which a dense population entails. On the other hand, it seems equally clear that it has a virus of its own independent of these causes, which may poison the air of a perfectly dry and sparsely populated tract. As in the case of cholera, it is easy to see that certain conditions predispose places for its ravages, but unsafe to say that those conditions circumscribe its operations. The theory favoured by Colonel Haig is, it seems, obviously true so far as that an enfeebled vitality due to poor and insufficient food, bad water, and impure air, render those attacked with the fever far less capable of resisting its attacks than they would be if possessed of greater strength of constitution; but conspicuously wrong in so far as it seems to contend that the morbific influences to which they are exposed have undergone no change, but remain the same in the affected tracts as they always were, while only the power of resisting them is weakened. That the air is positively tainted or poisoned, any one residing in it for a few days can easily ascertain; while a perfectly healthy and well-fed man transferred to an affected locality is attacked with the fever almost immediately.

40. On the other hand, the poison seems only to affect human beings. The people of Dasspore assured me unanimously that at the time when so many deaths were occurring, their cattle and dogs were perfectly healthy.

41. I regret to say that the latest accounts from Dasspore show that the rain that has fallen has led to a return of the fever, though without heavy mortality; but I fear that it may be looked upon as certain that the year will be one of great suffering and sickness as the season advances.

H. L. Harrison,
Magistrate.

No. 2169, dated Calcutta, the 18th June 1873.

From—A. Mackenzie, Esq., Junior Secretary to the Government of Bengal,
To—The Commissioner of Burdwan.

I am directed to acknowledge the receipt of your letter No. 257 of the 28th ultimo, submitting an elaborate report from the Magistrate and Civil Surgeon of Midnapore regarding the prevalence of the epidemic fever in parts of that district.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor is much obliged to Dr. Mathew and Mr. Harrison for their clear and valuable report, which shows that the fever has made considerable ravages in the part of Midnapore lying between the Cossye and Silye, and that some systematic attempts at relief are imperatively called for.

3. Dr. Mathew, the Civil Surgeon, proposes that, with a view to deal with the epidemic in its future ravages, nine temporary dispensaries should be opened, two native doctors being attached to each; and that a sub-assistant surgeon should be appointed to supervise the native doctors. If this cannot be allowed, the Magistrate would wish to have two dispensaries and four native doctors placed at his disposal, and suggests that a native doctor and medicines be sent to any place within the affected area where the people agree to pay half his salary. Before passing orders on these proposals, the Lieutenant-Governor would wish to have a report from the Inspector-General of Hospitals, to whom a communication has this day been made as to what amount of assistance he can actually give.

4. The Magistrate proceeds to make proposals for a wide distribution of quinine by various agencies. The Lieutenant-Governor is disposed to accept these, but deems it right to obtain the opinion of the head of the Medical Department upon them in the first place. There is, first, the proposal to give quinine for distribution to the twelve native gentlemen named by the British Indian Association.

5. Then it is proposed to place a supply of quinine for sale at each police station and outpost at 20 per cent. below cost price. I am to say, with reference to this, that if quinine is to be sold, it should be sold at cost price, which is low enough compared to retail rate; gratis distribution to poor patients being made under proper supervision.

6. Mr. Harrison next proposes to give the schoolmasters and the patshalla gurus an ounce of quinine each for their own use and for that of their pupils, forbidding them to sell it, but permitting them to give it in charity to other indigent sufferers if they liked. The gurus are to understand that the supply would not be repeated, and only gurus in places attacked by fever would get it.

7. Mr. Harrison next wants to give a certain quantity of quinine to each private practitioner for gratis distribution among poor sufferers. The Lieutenant-Governor believes that none of them would distribute it gratis as Mr. Harrison hopes, and thinks it should only be given them at cost price.

8. Mr. Harrison's proposal for appointing a punchayet to superintend the distribution of quinine and report every week the state of the fever, seems to the Lieutenant-Governor to be good, and is approved; so also is the proposal to distribute printed directions for the use of quinine.

9. The Inspector-General of Hospitals has been desired to favor the Lieutenant-Governor with an expression of his opinion on the above proposals about quinine, and to state how much can be made available for Midnapore.

10. Mr. Harrison objects to clearing jungle and tanks compulsorily in the affected villages. The Lieutenant-Governor, however, desires that if the state of things is so bad as described by Dr. Mathew, something should be done to cleanse the villages, and the Magistrate should try what he can do by persuasion.

11. Four native gentlemen only are named by Mr. Harrison as having done something for the relief of the distressed. It is not creditable to the landowners of Midnapore that they should have done so little.

COPY of this letter, and of the one to which it is a reply, forwarded to the Inspector-General of Hospitals with a view to the submission of the report called for in paragraphs 2 and 8 of this letter.

No. 436, dated Fort William, the 12th July 1873.

From—J. C. BROWN, ESQ., M.D., Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department,
To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Judicial Department.

I HAVE the honor to acknowledge receipt of your office docket No. 2169, dated 18th June 1873, forwarding for an expression of opinion a report on the prevalence of fever in the district of Midnapore by the Magistrate, Mr. H. L. Harrison, containing certain proposals regarding medical relief and the distribution of quinine in the event of a new outbreak.

2. As regards the deputing of native doctors and the establishing of temporary dispensaries, much will depend on the agency available, or that can be made available, at the time. Fever has either abated or disappeared in most of the affected tracts of Burdwan, Beerbhoom, and Hooghly; and I am happy to say that the reports lately received indicate a better state of public health in these districts than has existed for very many months. The number of dispensaries has been consequently reduced as much as possible. The number of temporary dispensaries actually in operation, according to the most recent reports, is shown marginally. Notwithstanding this abatement of sickness and reduction of the number of dispensaries, the number of supernumeraries at my disposal is not large. There are six supernumerary sub-assistant surgeons whose services might be made available at any moment, and there are at the Presidency six supernumerary hospital assistants and one Bengalee class native doctor.

Beerbhoom	...	9

3. Of the 44 students of the Bengalee classes who were reported to have passed their final examination in April last, only 5 have as yet declared for Government service. Others will doubtless come forward. In the event of any emergency arising, it would also be possible to obtain some aid from other provinces, and to re-engage some of the locally-entertained native doctors whose services were dispensed with when the fever subsided.

4. It is thus apparent that, looking to the probability of larger demands arising in Burdwan and Beerbhoom than in Midnapore, it is impossible to make any promises of being in a position to send many subordinates or supply many temporary dispensaries to that district. As the fever begins to break out, supernumeraries will be sent where their services appear to be most urgently required; and if the wants of Midnapore are most early and pressing, they will be attended to accordingly. I do not think that, with a limited agency at command, and without a very certain knowledge of where the services of that agency can be most profitably employed, it would be wise to depute subordinates beforehand, or establish dispensaries in anticipation in any part of these districts. Supernumeraries will be kept in readiness at the Presidency, and on the receipt of applications they will be provided with medicines, and directed to proceed at once to the scene of operations.

5. As regards the supply of quinine, I am afraid that I cannot promise much. Permanent and established medical institutions are entitled to the first consideration, then temporary medical institutions and agencies, and after these have been fully supplied, the question of distribution by lay agencies may be considered. The public stores find the utmost difficulty, under the existing rules and practice, in supplying permanent institutions which are yearly becoming more numerous and making larger demands. The temporary dispensaries in Burdwan and elsewhere have been hitherto supplied to the full of their demands, but stock was kept low in consequence; there has not, during the last two years at least, been in the stores anything that might be called a reserve of quinine, and giving out this drug for promiscuous distribution is, under the present system of indenting on England, out of the question.

6. I append a copy of a recent communication* from the Principal Medical Store-Keeper, showing that at the present rate of expenditure he anticipates a deficiency of 1,740lb of quinine before the close of the year. An indent was however submitted for 2,456lb on the 1st of April 1873, and if the amount remaining due on the indent of 1st April 1872 (1,210lb) and that recently indented for were promptly sent out, there would be no reason to fear any difficulty in meeting demands, either ordinary or emergent. I have already urged the Government of India to expedite the supply of quinine and other stores, and am about to do so again. I have also repeatedly and forcibly urged the necessity of a system which would permit of a reserve stock, but hitherto without success. Under these circumstances it is quite impossible for me to make any promises as regards Midnapore. If quinine is to be distributed as Mr. Harrison proposes, I can see no alternative but the public market.

No. 1151, dated 1st July 1873.

7. As regards the agencies by which it is proposed to distribute quinine, I have no objection to offer that has not already been stated by Government. There could be no harm in entrusting the drug to gurus and others with proper directions for its use. I should incline to entertain strong doubts of the propriety of entrusting what are called private medical practitioners with the gratuitous distribution of the drug.

Memo. from—Surgeon G. H. Daly, M.D., Officiating Principal Medical Store-keeper to Government,

No. 2762, dated Calcutta, the 25th July 1873

From—A. Mackenzie, Esq., Junior Secretary to the Government of Bengal,
To—The Commissioner of Burdwan.

In continuation of my letter No. 2168, dated the 18th ultimo, I am directed to forward herewith copy of a communication No. 436, dated the 12th instant, from the Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, intimating that, owing to the limited staff of subordinate medical agency available, the proposal of the Magistrate of Midnapore to establish a certain number of dispensaries in the district cannot be carried out at present. I am to state that His Honor agrees in the view of the Surgeon-General, that instead of deputing native doctors in anticipation, supernumeraries be sent on the outbreak of fever, as the necessity for their services may arise. I am to say that the local officers should watch matters closely, and, in direct communication with the Surgeon-General, arrange for the establishment of dispensaries and distribution of medicine, as may seem advisable from time to time, reporting through your office as to what is required.

No. 2763.

Copy forwarded to the Surgeon-General, Indian Medical Department, for information and guidance, with reference to his letter above quoted, with the intimation that the Government of India has been addressed with the view of expediting the supply of quinine.

Statement showing Rainfall, Weather, State and Prospects of the Crops in the different Districts of Bengal, as reported to Government during the week ending the 26th July 1873.

No.	District.	Date of return from each district.	Rainfall at Sudder Station in inches.	Character of the weather in the district as far as known.	State and prospects of the crops at date.	Remarks.
BENGAL.
	Western Districts.	1873.
Burdwan Division. 1	Burdwan ...	July 29th*	2·48	Sky overcast ...	Transplantation of amun going on. Prospects of aus and amun fair except in Cutwa sub-division.
2	Bancoorah ...	„ 26th	1·79	Generally showery; heavy rain in the north.	All crops are doing well. In some parts of the district the sugarcane has suffered from the attacks of some insects.	Several cases of cholera, both at head-quarters and in the district.
3	Beerbhoom ...	„ 26th	2·02	In western half of the district sky overcast, with frequent showers; very little rain in the east.	West of the railway, prospects are good and the people are busy planting out rice; but to the east the rainfall has been too light, and the amun crop will be a short one, if it ever gets sown at all.	Fever has re-appeared in a few villages to the south-west, but not where it was violent last year. This may be due to the holding off of rain.
4	Midnapore ...	„ 26th	1·20	Rain every day though only in showers. Last week from six to ten inches fell everywhere in the district.	Looking up in every quarter. The floods in the Coosye ultimately proved nearly the highest on record. Many inundations have been reported, but all casual; works and embankments stood, and the damage is partial.
5	Hooghly ...	„ 26th	1·05	Cloudy, with light showers; wind from south-east.	Whatever is left of the aus crop is doing well. Amun crop requires more rain. Jute doing very well.
	Howrah ...	„ 26th	2·30	Rain during first four days of the week throughout the district; strong winds during the latter part of week.	The ryots have commenced to transplant the amun, but more rain is required for this purpose. Sugarcane has much improved. Prospects of jute much the same as before.
	Central Districts.
Presidency Division. 6	24-Pergunnahs ...	„ 29th	1·73	Close, with light daily showers.	Crops generally doing well. Transplanting of amun steadily progressing, but in Satkhirah and Basirhat more rain is required for the purpose.	Public health good.
7	Nuddea ...	„ 26th	1·04	Not sufficient rain ...	The aus rice is on the whole in pretty fair condition, but there has not been nearly enough rain for the amun crop. Indigo varies in different parts of the district, but on the whole is fair.
8	Jessore ...	„ 26th	1·83	Cloudy, but very little rain.	Want of rain is very much felt. It is required both for the aus and the amun crops.
Rajshahye Divn. 9	Moorshedabad ...	„ 26th	1·75	Weather generally cloudy; some good showers at the beginning of the week.	Rain still much wanted, especially for the sowing and transplanting of amun. Aus, indigo, and sugarcane, doing well.	A few cases of cholera and small-pox still lingering in Berhampore and the city
10	Dinagepore ...	„ 26th	1·05	Damp and steamy, with occasional showers, local, and not heavy.	More rain urgently required to enable the winter rice crop to be planted out.

* Telegram of the 29th July received on the same day.

BENGAL.—(Contd.)
	Central Districts.—(Contd.)	1873.
Rajshahye Division.—(Contd.) 11	Maldah ...	July 26th	0·07	Hot and dry; the last three days cloudy, with occasional drizzling and strong easterly wind.	The accounts of the bhadoi and amun paddy are not very favorable. The rain still holds off. And in the "Borin" or uplands the winter rice crop (aughany and hymunti) will be a very poor one, unless timely rain falls to help it on.
12	Rajshahye ...	„ 26th	0·28	Close and cloudy weather, with occasional drizzling.	Rain is still urgently wanted, and the prospects of the standing crops are but little improved. Mulberry, sugarcane, indigo, and arahur crops, are however in good condition.
13	Rungpore ...	„ 26th	0·56	Hot and cloudy ...	Very little rain; the crops look bad everywhere; very little of the winter rice crop is yet planted. Jute fair. Indigo good.
14	Bograh ..	„ 26th	0·56	Very little rain during the week; the weather has been warmer than in the previous week.	The aus paddy is being reaped, but the crop has suffered from the want of rain. Much more rain is required for the amun crop, the sowing of which is hindered by the drought.
15	Pubna ...	„ 26th	0·69	Weather cloudy, with slight showers of rain.	The prospect of aus dhan is not favorable; of amun dhan, fair. Indigo is being cut. Heavy rain is much wanted in all parts of the district.
Cooch Behar Divs. 16	Darjeeling ...	„ 26th	1·52	The rainfall continues scanty. There have been several bright days during the week; the weather is warmer than usual, and the atmosphere somewhat heavy.	The crops in the plains have not yet suffered, but there are still complaints of want of rain. The beutee dhan on the highlands cannot be transplanted until there is more rain, but on the low-lands transplanting is progressing. In the hills the bhoota and murwa crops have sustained some further injury from the locusts which, however, seem to have pretty well disappeared now. Heavy rain is very much wanted.
17	Julpigoree ...	„ 26th	1·87	Cloudy; close and occasional showers.	Good all round, but more rain would be beneficial.
	Eastern Districts.
Dacca Division. 18	Dacca ...	„ 29th*	9·76	Rain daily. On the 28th 7·5.	Prospects of crops good, but some damage done in high lands. Rivers still low, but rising.
19	Furreedpore ...	„ 26th	0·50	Cloudy and showery during the week, with intervals of sunshine.	The aus has already suffered seriously. The amun, though not progressing satisfactorily, is hoped, if there be more rain, will turn out well.	Rivers still rising.
20	Backergunge ...	„ 26th	1·36	Rainy and very damp ...	Fair, but more rain wanted.
21	Mymensing ...	„ 26th	1·40	Generally cloudy, but no heavy continued rain.	More rain would be beneficial to the crops.
22	Sylhet ...	„ 19th	4·64	Very hot and sultry,—as hot as it has been at any time of this year.	If the present dry weather continues much longer, the prospect of the crops will justify some anxiety. The present dry weather is most unseasonable and unfavorable to the crops. There seems, however, to be every hope of a change in the weather.

* Telegram of the 29th July received on the same day.

CHITTAGONG DIVISION. 24	Chittagong ...	July 19th	2·55	With the exception of Monday and Friday, we have had nil, five days with strong south-west winds and occasional showers. Abundant rain in the south of the district.	Rain still wanted for the crops, which are in a backward state. Favorable reports from Cox's Bazar.	Cattle disease and dengue reported from the sub-division.
25	Noakhally ...	„ 19th	1·81	Rainy; very high winds on the 12th, 13th, and 14th July.	Aus and amun dhan progressing favorably.
26	Tipperah ...	„ 26th	1·4	Gloom and drizzle, but no real rain.	Bad weather for the crops, and insects have attacked the rice crop to the south-east. Heavy rain is anxiously looked for.
	Hill Tipperah ...	„ 19th	0·58	Light rain; weather cloudy and very warm, with breaks of sunshine.	More rain wanted for cultivation and sowing.
BEHAR.
PATNA DIVISION. 28	Patna ...	„ 29th*	1·85	Weather cloudy, with heavy rain on the night of the 28th.	The rain of the 28th, may have done some injury to the bhadoi, but has done a deal of good to the rice crops.	Cholera is prevalent throughout the district, though not in an epidemic form, except in thannah Bekrum, where it is still raging.
29	Gya ...	.....	.....	.....	.....	Return not received.
30	Shahabad ...	„ 26th	2·	Seasonable ...	Serha dhan sown. Ropa dhan in nurseries. Broadcast dhan sown. Prospects good. Bhadoi crops looking well.	Cholera still prevalent in many places, but abating in Arrah.
31	Tirhoot ...	„ 26th	1·91	Hot; easterly wind prevalent; rainfall of 3 to 5 inches in the north-east and south and south-east.	The rain that fell during the week has been beneficial to the indigo, cotton, &c. Prospects of bhadoi crop are more hopeful, but more rain is much wanted. Transplanting of dhan is going on.	A little cholera in parts of the district.
32	Sarun ...	„ 26th	1·51	Cloudy, with more or less rain; prevailing wind east.	The prospects of the crops have generally improved with the rains. The manufacture of indigo is going on, the plant is backward, and only an average outturn is said to be expected. Early paddy seedlings are being transplanted.	Cholera is slightly on the increase and small-pox on the decrease.
BHAUGULPORE DIVISION. 34	Monghyr ...	„ 26th	3·41	Cloudy, with occasional showers.	Fair. Crops, though backward, look well.	A good deal of cholera in the district.
35	Bhaugulpore ...	„ 29th*	3·60	Heavy rain at Soopool and Banka sub-division.	All bhadoi crops very promising except in Modoopoorah. More rain very necessary to enable aughany rice to be transplanted.	General health good.
36	Purneah ...	„ 26th	1·37	Showery; rain very partial.	The bhadoi crop has suffered much from want of rain; unless rain falls heavily soon the aughany cannot be planted out. Indigo and maki are good.
37	Sonthal Pergunnahs ...	„ 26th	3·17	Rain is deficient in quantity throughout the district, especially at Rajmehal and Mabertpore	Dhan-planting is backward and prospects not bright. Genera is not likely to give more than a medium crop.

The sarud seed sown last week in certain pergunnahs has come up, and appears promising; sowing of sarud crop is going on in other places; weeding is going on in the Beali fields. In Khoordha the paddy crop appears good and promising; weeding has already commenced in low lands. Owing to the late heavy rains the fear of blight has been removed. ASSAM AND ADJACENT HILLS.—(Contd.)		1873.
50	Luckimpore ...	July 19th	5·22	The whole week was hot and sultry. Thunder and lightning on the evening of the 18th. At North Luckimpore rain throughout the week; cool and cloudy.	Prospects of the crops good. Nursery rice being transplanted.	Public health good.
51	Naga Hills ...	„ 12th	1·55	Seasonable throughout the district.	The rain that has fallen during the past week has greatly improved the prospects of the crops in the hills.
52	Khasi & Jynteah Hills	„ 19th	1·58	The weather has been oppressive and sultry.	The standing crops are healthy in appearance, but rain is much needed, and damage may be caused if it does not fall shortly.	Cholera has re-appeared at villages on the lower slopes of the hills near Thella.
53	Garo Hills ...	„ 19th	1·17	Weather has been fair on the whole during the week. There have been some good showers, with sun afterwards, which is what is wanted for the crops. On the 19th strong south-east wind.	The crops near Tura look very well. In places the dhan is being cut, and the crop will be a good one. The cotton crop looks fair, though the plants are yet young. The vegetables are coming on well.

NOTE.

Barometric Pressure.—The pressures in column 2 of the above table for all stations below 500 feet are reduced from those given in column 3 of the table in the previous page by adding the weight of a column of air of the temperatures given in column 17. For stations above 500 feet elevation the reduction is made by Dippe's tables as given in Guyot's "Meteorological and Physical Tables." The temperatures at the sea-level are taken from column 3 of the above table.

Temperature.—The temperatures in column 3 are reduced from those in column 17 on the preceding page by adding 1° Fahrenheit for every 450 feet.

Wind Resultant.—The resultant wind direction and its comparative predominance are calculated from the whole number of wind observations recorded during the month. The relative predominance in the direction of the resultant is given as a percentage of the whole number of observations. The direction is computed in the usual way by Lambert's formula.

Serenity.—This column gives the average proportion of uncloded sky; a cloudless sky being indicated by 10, and one completely overcast by 0.

The above being all comparable, afford the data for constructing a meteorological chart for the month, which shall show the isobaric and isothermal lines and the resultant wind directions, which last may be represented by arrows of varying length, proportioned to the prevalence of the wind. To these may be added the rainfall from the previous tables.

Circular.

Dated Calcutta, the 5th August 1873.

From—H. L. DAMPIER, Esq., Secretary to the Government of Bengal,

To—All Commissioners and District Officers.

HONORARY MAGISTRATES have been appointed and benches arranged in many districts. In some, Magistrates have objected that class litigation makes it dangerous to do so, and certainly there is so much of class questions in some parts of the country that the Lieutenant-Governor is becoming seriously alarmed, lest by appointing exclusively men of the upper classes these questions should be prejudiced. The arrangements are such in regard to benches, reference of cases, &c., that he has not much fear of actual cases being seriously prejudiced; but the Lieutenant-Governor does somewhat fear the power and influence which the name and trappings of a Magistrate may give in the eyes of an ignorant people, if the Magistrates are too much of one class. That there may be inconveniences in a class magistracy, the experience of the British Islands proves. Even when general class questions were not burning, the English magistracy, as an aristocratic institution, was not free from suspicion of prejudice in game questions and such like. In Ireland, where there were great class questions, it was generally found impossible to allow an aristocratic unpaid magistracy to act; and since class questions have become prominent in England, the country magistracy is found to be a very assailable institution. On all sides the tendency in the United Kingdom now is to doubt the advantage of an unpaid magistracy, and to substitute stipendiary Magistrates. Certainly then His Honor does not wish to found an honorary magistracy on an English model. If the benches are to be useful they must be rather a sort of superior punchayets, among whom all classes are represented, and not one class only. At sudder stations, from among lawyers, merchants, and other residents as well as zemindars, a variety of classes may be found; but at sub-divisions and outlying places, the Lieutenant-Governor is convinced that the system of entrusting to men selected from among the natives to dispose of the affairs of the natives, whether as Magistrates or in other matters, will not work fairly and usefully unless really representative ryots and such like men as well as men of higher status can be got. If we had the same facilities for obtaining at a reasonable cost stipendiary Magistrates fitted to deal with all cases that we have in Europe, the Lieutenant-Governor would not seek to create honorary Magistrates. But both on account of the deficiencies of our Courts and with a view to educate the people of the country to manage their own affairs, he is after long experience convinced that it is right to try to obtain Honorary Magistrates and Committee men. The Lieutenant-Governor wishes then to appeal to local officers to make a real and earnest effort to find such men.

2. The Lieutenant-Governor has just had before him a case in which in a particular district the District Magistrate and Judge concur in saying that the honorary Magistrate system cannot be carried out, because class questions are so burning that zemindars cannot be entrusted with power, and no good representative ryots can be found, there being, it is stated, nothing but disreputable middlemen and very poor and ignorant ryots. His Honor will probably be obliged to yield to that representation. But then he finds that both officers state that the district in question is quite an exceptional district. The Judge mentions the last district in which he served as one in which good representative ryots abound. After much inquiry the Lieutenant-Governor is convinced that in most districts such men, and good men of the class, are to be found.

Again then he must express the hope that the local officers will find them and send up their names for honorary Magistrates, School Committees, Road Committees, Municipal Committees, and all bodies designed in some sort to represent the natives. Until this is well done the whole system will be worse than a failure.

3. The Lieutenant-Governor is convinced that officers will fairly and honestly try to find the right men and to carry out these instructions. If in any district they really cannot do so, he is open to conviction; but he expects to have the assurance that the effort has been made, and confidently believes that wherever the materials exist, a good officer making the effort will find them.

Secy. to the Govt. of Bengal.

RULES FOR THE GRANT OF LICENSES FOR CARRYING AND SELLING ARMS.

Calcutta, the 22nd July 1873.

BY the orders of His Excellency the Governor-General in Council in the Home Department, No. 1398, dated 12th February 1866, the attention of local Governments was drawn to the fact that much difficulty was experienced, not only by the public, but by local officers, in ascertaining the state of the law as regards arms in any particular part of the country, and directions were given that the several local Governments should notify in the official Gazette, at the commencement of each year, what Sections of the Arms' Act are in force in each part of the territory under their respective jurisdictions, and should from time to time intimate any changes in its application. In accordance with these orders, notifications have annually appeared in the Calcutta Gazette setting out the application of the Act as affecting Bengal. It has now, however, been brought to the Lieutenant-Governor's notice that these notifications as last published might conveniently have incorporated the rules laid down by the Government of India for the importation and transportation of arms in Bengal; and it has been suggested that it would be desirable to publish in connected form these rules and a summary of the other existing orders in regard to the grant of licenses for carrying and selling arms as they now stand. His Honor has accordingly been pleased to direct the publication of the following series of rules, containing all the orders now in force, in supersession of all former notifications on the subject.

2. The provisions of Act XXXI, 1860 (relating to the manufacture, importation, and sale of arms and ammunition, and for regulating the right to keep and use the same, and to give power of disarming in certain cases), as continued in force and amended by Act VI (the Arms' Act Continuance Act), 1866, restricting (1) the possession of cannon, howitzers, and mortars; (2) the manufacture, repair, sale, or (3) importation of arms and ammunition; and (4) the carrying of arms, are in force throughout the territories subject to the control of the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal.

1. Sections 2 to 4, Act XXXI, 1860.
2. Sections 5 to 16, Act XXXI, 1860.
3. Sections 17 to 19, Act XXXI, 1860.
4. Sections 26 to 30, Act XXXI, 1860, as modified by Sections 2 and 3, Act VI of 1866.

3. The powers of seizure, search, and arrest in certain cases, defined in Sections 20, 21, 25, and 31, Act XXXI, 1860, are still possessed by the several authorities in whom the law vests them.

The following are the Rules laid down under the Act for the importation and transport of arms, &c., the grant of licenses for carrying arms, and for the sale of arms and ammunition in Bengal.

4. Under the provisions of Sections 17 and 22 of Act XXXI of 1860, the importation or transport of all arms and ammunition of the descriptions mentioned in Sections 5, 6, and 25 of the aforesaid Act* into or through the territorities under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal is prohibited, unless covered by a license or pass.

* Viz. fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads; lead, sulphur, saltpetre, percussion caps, gunpowder, or other ammunition.

5. Persons desirous of importing arms and ammunition into any district in the Lower Provinces of Bengal shall apply for a license to the Commissioner of the division† in which the arms and ammunition are to be exposed for sale, kept, or made use of. The application must be in writing, and must contain full information on the following points:—

† In Calcutta to the Commissioner of Police.

1*st*.—Purpose for which required.

2*nd*.—Probable cost of each weapon.

3*rd*.—Port at which the goods will be imported.

4*th*.—District in which the arms and ammunition are to be used, kept, or sold.

6. Commissioners, on receipt of applications in the prescribed form, are authorized to grant licenses according to form A, at their discretion, for the importation of arms, and, in reasonable quantities, of ammunition.

7. Licenses for the importation of fire-arms are not to be granted, except the Commissioner to whom the application is made is satisfied that the weapons are required for bonâ fide sporting purposes.

8. The Commissioner should not grant licenses for the importation of fire-arms in large quantities without reference, through the regular official channel, to the Government of Bengal. (N.B.—A fresh license must be taken out for each importation.)

9. A copy of all licenses must be forwarded to the chief police officer at the port at which the goods are to be landed. If the license authorizes the importation of any considerable quantity of fire-arms, a copy of the orders of Government sanctioning the importation must also be sent.

10. The Collector of Customs is not to deliver any arms or ammunition unless protected by a pass from the chief police officer at the port where the goods have been landed.

11. No licenses or passes are to be given for rifles of a military pattern, or of patterns easily convertible into military weapons, unless the consignees produce specific orders from English gentlemen for the weapons.

12. The Collector of Customs shall be responsible for seeing that the arms imported answer to the description given in the pass; and in case of doubt, shall detain the arms and refer the point for the orders of Government.

13. The consignee, on arrival of the arms and ammunition, must produce his license to the chief police officer of the port, upon which he is to receive from the said officer a pass in form B for the delivery of such arms and ammunition as may be mentioned in the license.

14. If the arms and ammunition are to be removed from the port, the police officer, at the time of granting the pass for delivery from the Custom House, must grant a pass in form C for the transmission of the said goods to the place to which the importation is sanctioned in the license, and he will forward a copy of the pass to the Magistrate of the district in which the said place is situated.

15. The arms and ammunition must be taken direct from the port to the place entered in the pass, and they are not to be sold or made use of at any intermediate place.

16. Any person desirous of transporting any arms or ammunition of the descriptions marginally noted into any portion of the territories under the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal, or from one district or town in the said territories to another district or town, must apply for a pass to the Commissioner of the Division specifying the district or town into which he proposes to transport the goods. The application must be made in writing, and must contain full information as to the quantity and description of all the goods.

Fire-arms, bayonets, swords, daggers, spears, spear-heads; lead, sulphur, saltpetre, gunpowder, or other ammunition.

17. The Commissioner, on receipt of an application under the preceding rule, may grant a pass according to form C, and subject to the conditions and restrictions laid down in paragraph 15. (A duplicate of this pass should be forwarded in each case to the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta.)

18. When arms or ammunition are brought into a district protected by a pass issued in accordance with the preceding rules, the person in charge of the goods must, immediately on arrival, deliver the pass to the Magistrate in charge of the district or town, whose duty it will be to ascertain that the arms and ammunition correspond with the entries in the pass, or that any excess, deficiency, or discrepancy, is satisfactorily explained.

19. Any person transporting arms in violation of the preceding rules 4 to 18, will on conviction be liable to the penalties prescribed by Section 23 of Act XXXI of 1860.

20. The following fees are to be charged for the issue of licenses and passes under the foregoing rules :—

	Rs.	As.	P.
For each license in form A for permission to import arms and ammunition ..	5	0	0
For each transport pass in form C	5	0	0

21. The foregoing rules do not apply to arms and ammunition imported or transported by any person in small quantities for his own private use; but a license or pass may be granted for such arms and ammunition at the discretion of the officer to whom the application is preferred.

22. Section 32 of Act XXXI of 1860, prohibiting absolutely the possession of any arms or ammunition without a license, is not now in force in any district of Bengal, inasmuch as no district is at present disarmed under that Section.

23. In districts and places not brought under the provisions of Section 32, persons are not absolutely prohibited from carrying arms without a license; but any person not being exempted under the provisions of Section 27, so carrying arms, is liable to be disarmed by any Magistrate or police officer under Section 26, if, in the judgment of such Magistrate or police officer, it is dangerous to the public peace to allow such person to go armed or to carry arms.

24. In the districts noted in the margin, the Government has not insisted on the people taking out licenses to own or carry arms. In these districts the local officers are only required to act in the spirit of the instructions contained in the circular orders of this Government No. 1125, dated the 28th February 1868: that is to say, they will refrain from enforcing Section 26 of Act XXXI of 1860, except in special cases in which there is really ground for believing that such a measure is necessary for the preservation of the public peace.

Rajshahye, Maldah, and Pubna, in the Rajshahye Division.

25. In the districts noted in the margin, the Magistrates are bound to insist on licenses being taken out before arms are carried. The license must be in form D annexed.

All districts in the Assam, Cooch-Behar, Dacca, and Chittagong Divisions.
Bogra, Rungpore, Dinagepore, and Moorshedabad, in the Rajshahye Division.

26. Any person in the districts named in Rule 25, who has not been exempted under Section 27, and who is desirous of obtaining a license to carry arms, shall make an application in writing to the Magistrate in charge of the district or sub-division in which he may be residing. The application must be on an 8-anna stamp, and contain the following particulars :—

1. Name and address of applicant.
2. Period for which the license is required (in no case to exceed one year from date).
3. For what purpose the arms are required, and the places where the applicant proposes to reside during the currency of the license.
4. Description of arms for which a license is sought.
5. Whether the arms are to be carried only by the applicant or by his followers: if the latter, the number and description of arms to be carried by each follower.

27. Some of the districts named in Rule 25 being situated on the frontier, the unrestricted right of possessing and carrying arms would afford facilities for selling them to the hostile tribes on the border, out of whose hands it is of the greatest importance that arms and ammunition should be kept. In others of the districts specified, the people are turbulent and prone to engage in affrays and riots, and it is necessary for this reason to put a check on the possession of arms by them.

28. The licenses given should be renewed year by year. The registration of these licenses will enable each Magistrate to ascertain the number of arms kept by the people in his jurisdiction.

29. Licenses to carry arms on a journey may be given to boná fide travellers in form E by the Magistrate of the district or sub-division (and in Calcutta by the Commissioner of Police), provided that, save for special reasons, no such license shall be current for more than a fortnight beyond the time required for the ordinary course of post between the place at which the license is granted and that to which the applicant is travelling.

30. Licenses to sell arms are, in the province of Assam and the districts of Purneah, Dinagepore, Rungpore, Tipperah, Chittagong, Dacca, Backergunge, Mymensing, Sylhet, and Cachar, and the Cooch Behar Division, only to be given to those persons to whom a license to transport arms, &c., would be given by the Commissioner under Rule 16 above. Such licenses will be very charily given in these districts after reference to the Commissioner, and nowhere save at sudder stations. The fee for a license to sell arms is ten rupees.

31. Under Sections 14 and 15 of the Act, the Lieutenant-Governor has authorized District and Assistant Superintendents to enter the premises of persons licensed to manufacture or deal in arms and ammunition, and to inspect the books kept by them in the course of their trade.

32. The licenses of all dealers in arms, &c., must contain a stipulation that they will abide by the rules above laid down under penalty of forfeiting their license. They must also undertake to enter in their books, besides the purchaser's name, the name of his father (for native purchasers), his place of residence, and the police station within whose jurisdiction he resides. Licenses granted under Section 7 of the Act to sell arms should bear a note drawing attention to the necessity of the dealer's procuring also an import or transit pass or both before he can import or transport arms for sale. The licenses of dealers in Calcutta should contain a stipulation that they will sell to dealers residing out of Calcutta only when they produce a pass in form C from the Commissioner of the Division where they reside, and that they will enter in their registers the particulars of each such pass.
